ROYAL PAIR CAPTURES CITY

Sun Beams Fairyland Approval

Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh stepped ashore into a veritable fairyland setting in Victoria Sunday afternoon.

As though it had been stage-managed, the setting sun broke through angry storm clouds just as H.M.C.S. Crusader poked her nose into the Inner Harbor.

It threw a golden glow, almost unreal, over the entire harbor front. A brilliant rainbow in the east framed the Empress Hotel for the Royal couple's first view of the city. It seemed the heavens had thrown a giant spotlight on the scene.

LIKE A HALO

"Like a halo for the Princess," one elderly woman on the causeway described it.

Victorians who had waited as much as three hours in intermittent rain for the Royal couple were almost overawed by the spectacle.

But a swelling cheer broke out over the waterfront just before the army started the 21-gun salute from a battery on Belleville St.

Between 50,000 and 60,000 people lined the mile-and-three-quarters route from the dock to Government House. At some points people were lined six and eight deep, and only in the section of Fort between Quadra and Vancouver were there vacant spaces on the sidewalk.

Perhaps reacting to the reports of rowdy welcomes in the East, Victoria's crowds were orderly, but enthusiastic. Most noticeable was the sheer jumping for joy of 'teen-age girls who were everywhere through the throng.

EXCITED HUSH

Cheers rang from the curbs in anticipation of the approach of the Princess and the Duke, but when they were at close hand, an excited hush seemed to fall over the throngs.

To the murmuring welcome, the Princess and Prince smiled and waved acknowledgement.

The strange, bright light marking the arrival of the destroyer bringing them from Vancouver under escort of three other navy ships, caught the paddles of two Indian war canoes in the Inner Harbor to greet the warship.

The Crusader tied up exactly on the dot of 5 as scheduled.

Lieutenant-Governor Clarence Wallace and Mrs. Wallace, with Premier and Mrs. Johnson and Mayor and Mrs. George went aboard to welcome the royal couple.

A cheer welled up along the harbor front as the Princess, walking beside the Lieutenant-Governor led the official party to the dock.

MOVE CAMERAMEN

As photographers moved in to snap their pictures, onlookers in the rear ranks shouted their disapproval and red-coated R.C.M.P. officers shooed the persistent cameramen away.

Walking toward the naval royal guard which she inspected, the lovely woman who some day will be Queen appeared to some to be a trifle self-conscious. She didn't smile for several minutes, but had a good chuckle at something said by Lieut. E. D. Robbins, in charge of the smart guard.

Prince Philip was the first to acknowledge the crowd's applause with an easy wave. This fired the crowd's enthusiasm ever more and they responded with a resounding ovation.

Two little girls, standing only a few feet from the Royal couple when they walked toward the

Princess Gives Warm Thanks To Canadians

Princess Elizabeth has been touched by the warm welcome given her and her husband by Canadians.

Speaking at a state luncheon today in the beautifully decorated main dining room of the Empress Hotel, she told a huge gathering of provincial and local dignitaries—and the whole of Canada through a nation-wide broadcast—just how much she has been impressed by her visit here.

The full text of her address follows:

"It gives me great pleasure to stand here in Victoria, the provincial capital of British Columbia, named after my great-great-grandmother, and I thank you for your words of welcome addressed to me and to my husband this morning at the Parliament Buildings. I will certainly convey your message to my father, The King."

(She referred to the Premier's message contained in the illuminated address delivered at Parliament Buildings.)

"With my arrival here my first westward journey across Canada has ended and before turning eastward again I am able to reflect for a moment upon what I have seen.

TREMENDOUS EXPERIENCE

"This journey has indeed been a tremendous experience.

"I have seen the splendid panorama of this broad land unfold before me, the older cities and the great manufacturing centres of the east; the rich, but as yet undeveloped northland of Ontario; the vast grain-growing areas of your three prairie provinces; the Rocky Mountains; and the beautiful scenery of your Pacific Coast.

"This panorama of nature and human achievement has been magnificent, yet it has been eclipsed in my mind by another revelation. And that is the warmth of the welcome we have received from the men, women and children of this great country.

"I can find no words to tell you how deply I have been moved, day by day, by the reception given to me and to my husband in your great cities and in your smaller communities. The faces and voices of many thousands of your people have touched us both profoundly.

"And now we have come here to Victoria on Vancouver Island where we are looking forward to spending two or three days of

Prince, Princess Get Vociferous Welcome

Victoria opened its heart today to the gracious young lady who will one day be Canada's queen.

Thousands upon thousands of flag-waving adults and children thronged the streets as Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip drove to City Hall to receive an official welcome.

Despite a chilly wind they drove in an open car and the waiting crowd forgot discomfort in a spontaneous surge of enthusiastic cheers.

From City Hall, the Royal couple went to the Legislative Buildings for the province's welcome, then to Thunderbird Park to see Indian dancers, and finally to an official luncheon at the Empress Hotel.

In front of City Hall people assembled before 9 in the morning to get good places.

So thick were the people on the sidewalk that a store plate glass window was broken by the surging mass.

On the curb sat children and old people wrapped in blankets to keep warm.

As the Royal car drew up at the entrance of the City Hall a loud cheer went up. The spirit of the welcome was such that Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip appeared to be touched.

Civic Veterans Form Guard

As they stepped out of their car they were greeted by a guard of honor of civic employee veterans.

In the council chamber they captivated the audience with gracious smiles, they bid good-bye and the council chamber rocked with applause.

They offered their hands in friendly fashion and the Duke detained more than one alderman a moment, with an interested query.

Kilted Pipers Ian Duncan and Jim Marrs preceded the Royal visitors up the carpeted stairway and corridor, which was latticed with roses.

They halted before the Chamber and the Princess, clad in her now-famous Edinburgh green velvet fitted coat with stand-up collar, cloche hat of the same shade and brown accessories, entered.

On her lapel was the diamond maple leaf brooch given her by the Queen. She wore small pearl earrings.

Mayor Percy George escorted the Princess, follower her into the Chamber. Then came the Duke with Mrs. George. The Royal couple then stood together in front of the dais which was banked with fern and great baskets of mauve and white chrysanthemums.

The Princess held her suede-gloved hands waist-high, one thumb gently rubbing the other.

"It is indeed with sincere pleasure and yet with a deep sense of humility, that I am privileged to say a few words as a preface to the illuminated address of welcome," said His Worship.

'Most Genuinely Happy'

"The elected representatives and citizens of Greatr Victoria are all most genuinely happy and thankful that His Majesty, our beloved King George, is making such wonderful progress in the recovery of his health.

"May the Benign Influence of the Infinite Wisdom ever continue to be upon our Most Gracious Majesty, is our wish and prayer," concluded the mayor.

He then read the illuminated address and presented a royal-blue leather covered album of photographs of Victoria. The Princess smiled her thanks as she held it a few seconds and handed it to her aide.

Reeves of the four municipalities with their wives, aldermen of Victoria and their wives, chairman of the school board and his wife and Miss Elizabeth Dolman, May 24th queen were then presented, as 125 guests looked on from the public gallery.

"Are you a lady alderman?" asked the Prince of Ald. Margaret Christie, she confided later.

"When I replied yes, he asked me how I stood up against all the men?

"How do they stand up against me," was her reply.

Ald. William Pinfold had especial interest in the presentation, since he had met Princess Elizabeth at a tea at India House, London, three years ago, when he was with a B.C. trade delegation.

"The Prince asked me what I did when I was not working as an alderman," said Pinfold. "I told him I was retired."

There was a word also for Victoria's youngest alderman, Bob Macmillan.

"The Duke asked me how long I had been an alderman. I told him a very short time but rather too long for some of the aldermen. He asked again how long."

"He seemed to want to talk," said another.

"She has a beautiful smile when she smiles," said still another guest.

The Royal visitors signed the city's book and the mayor indicated the signature of the Princess' mother and father in another book. They signed simply "Elizabeth," "Philip," with the same pen and at the same table used by the King and Queen.

Said Mayor George: "The Princess told me on the way downstairs that the reception was 'very lovely.'

"She also asked how long I had been mayor and if she would be seeing me again," said the mayor. "I replied at the luncheon."

It was when the Royal couple stepped out of the City Hall that the people went wild with enthusiasm. They shouted, screamed, pushed and shoved to get near the Royal couple.

One old, tottering lady showed surprising strength by pushing out of her way an R.C.M.P. official who blocked her view.

Police struggled to keep the masses in check. Then someone started to sing "There Will Always Be An England." The rest of people surging near the Royal car took up the song.

Prince Philip gave a hearty laugh. He began to shout something to the people crowding around the car. His words were drowned by the shouting and cries.

Before stepping into the Royal car, Princess Elizabeth shook hands and spoke a few words to James Stothard, in charge of the guard of honor of veteran civic employees who stood outside the entrance of the City Hall. He was introduced to Her Royal Highness by Mayor George.

Stothard, R.C.M. of the "Fighting First" of the Canadian Scottish Regiment overseas in Second World War, was asked by the Princess about the medals he wore.

ROYAL PAIR MAY DELAY TRIP TO EAGLE CREST

Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip probably will drive up-island to Eagle Crest on Wednesday morning instead of Tuesday.

This was indicated today, although no official announcement was made since the royal couple's plans for the next three days are strictly their own.

It is likely a formal statement will be made tonight so that people of up-island centres will know when to watch out for them.

Calgary kin boast about its Stampede—but only Victoria could produce a real rainbow.

* * *

Decent youngsters like thet represent everything' worth fightin' for.

* * *

The Royal couple were dressed perfectly for the occasion—her dress the color o' Vancouver Island forests, his uniform a tribute to the oldest Navy base on the Coast.

ON THE TIMES

By ART STOTT

I can't help feeling a little deposed—not sad, nor angry, nor even discontented—just a little deposed. Twelve years ago I was king for a day, or part of a day, in the city council chamber. I didn't get down there today—wasn't asked.

But 12 years ago, when the late Mayor Andy McGavin and his council with their collective wives were rehearsing bows and curtsies for another Royal Visit, I was king. In over 20 years in the newspaper business, I've never had so many civic dignitaries bow and scrape before me, not even at election time.

Stott

Aw, well, a guy has his memories.

They're getting a little yellowed and ragged at the edges, but they're pleasant enough, those recollections of the other visit.

They're woven into a theme described by the young woman who wrote the Seattle P-I story in 1939. It started: "A fairy tale king and a fairy tale queen came to a story book town today . . ." Descriptions of the banks of flowers and the ceremony followed. The way the old council chamber was transformed from customary drabness and tedious debate left all of us who covered the beat a little startled, just as today's decorations probably affected this year's reporters.

Fairy Tale Spirit

The girl from Seattle caught the spirit. It made me wish I'd paid a little more attention to my Grimm and Hans Andersen during my student days.

You remembered the other newspaper personalities who joined in the function, Inez Robb among them. We all kept in assigned places until the presentation started. But not for long. The visiting press couldn't hear. The visiting press said "Let's move in." So we moved in and the spectators' section lost its stilted, formal look.

You remember the red carpet that Alderman Tom Hawkins had acquired for the 1939 visit and later cut up into small strips for souvenirs. Those of us on the inside track got pieces big enough for bedside mats and took them home.

But royalty or no royalty, those mats weren't satisfactory. Maybe you could fight down a wife's objection to the brilliance of the red for a short time, but when she insisted that you remove the footmarks from the rug every day, it got a little tiresome. You'd be sitting down reading after dinner, and your partner and helpmeet would remark: "That carpet of yours, it's looking a bit trodden upon. You'd better take it out and shake it."

So you took it out, shook it and brought it back a few times. Then you took it out, shook it and gave it to a friend you figured would appreciate a piece of Royal carpet.

The Little Incidents

You remember the little incidents of the presentation—the story that grand friend of Victoria, Mrs. Nellie Butchart, told about her husband, Freeman of the City, "R.P.," who bowed to one of the principals, became flustered and backed into the other.

You recollect the post-visit debates, the battle over the mayor's visitors' book in which the King and Queen inscribed their names. The mayor said it was his personal property. The council said it belonged to the city. The mayor became very emphatic and said he would keep the book—and did, only to present it to the city at a later date.

The discussion over the taboret on which the guest book was signed produced more heat. Alderman Gadsden spoke eloquently for its preservation. Other aldermen wondered why. Alderman Gadsden won his point and the same book was signed on the same table today.

You think of other sidelights on the council presentation—among them the inconspicuous way Prime Minister King came into the chamber with his shy, self-depreciating smile, and how you hadn't realized until the ceremony was over that the portly figure with the sparse grey hair was William Lyon Mackenzie King.

Party For The Press

Your mind turns to the party the City of Victoria gave the press after the official ceremonies, and the dinner provided by the provincial government.

You remember it all as a grand day, a friendly day, as congenial as Walter Thompson, who handled the arrangements for the newspapers. It leaves you feeling glad you were there, just as this year's guest will be happy to have attended today's function.

quietness in which we may again reflect upon what we have seen, and enjoy our first Canadian holiday. We hope we will have a chance to return to the West Coast before too long has passed.

"We have found our westward journey invigorating an inspiring. I need not tell you, Mr. Prime Minister, that though we would like to stay with you for much longer we are none the less looking forward to a new wealth of experience as we travel once more across this continent, eastward to the Atlantic."

GIFTS PRESENTED

Premier Byron Johnson, host at the luncheon, took great pride beth and Prince Philip gifts from in presenting to Princess Eliza- the province, chosen especially for their native significance.

Just prior to the luncheon he presented to Her Hoyal Highness a diamond emerald necklace with matching earrings, fashioned after the dogwood, official emblem of British Columbia.

For Prince Philip the premier had matching shirt studs and cuff links, also in dogwood design of platinum with inlaid diamonds.

TOKEN OF AFFECTION

"Your Royal Highness," Premier Johnson sad at the presentation ceremony, held in the main lobby of the hotel, "I have the honor to present, on behalf of the people of British Columbia, a token of their affection and esteem.

"We trust you will accept this gift as a memento of this happy occasion.

"Its design is based on the floral emblem of British Columbia, the dogwood.

"We hope that whenever it is worn it will revive pleasant recollections of your visit to this province.

"We realize how long you have been absent from your children, and how much they anticipate your return.

REMEMBRANCE FOR CHILDREN

"The people of British Columbia, wishing to be remembered to them, hope that you will take to Prince Charles an Indian sweater, and to P rincess Anne, Indian moccasins, which have been sent to Government House."

Prince Philip also was given a gift, with which to enjoy fishing in the waters of Qualicum Bay at Eaglecrest, where the Royal couple will holiday.

"It is the wish of the people of British Columbia that when you return to your home you will take with you some tangible token of their high regard," the premier said as he presented the studs and cuff links to Prince Philip.

ROD FOR SPORTSMAN

"The people of British Columbia also hope that during your brief rest which follows today's functions, you may wish to enjoy some of our famous sport fishing.

"With this in mind," the premier continued, "we have sent to Government House, on behalf of the people of British Columbia, a rod and the necessary tackle.

"We hope that Your Royal Highnesses will enjoy your vacation and carry back to your home many happy memories of your visit to British Columbia."

THE PRINCESS IN OUR MIDST

Waving a welcome to the Royal visitors Sunday was not enough for one Victoria woman.

As H.M.C.S. Crusader was sighted off Trial Island, she stood on the rocks of Gonzales Hill and sang "Land of Hope and Glory."

★ ★ ★

Guides and Brownies of Cordova Bay companies really wanted to see the Royal visitors.

According to Mrs. Ray Ganner, captain of the troop, they pooled their funds to charter a bus into town.

★ ★ ★

Princess Elizabeth is obviously getting used to riding in Cadillacs.

The first thing she did when she entered the car here Sunday night was to push the button which automatically lowered the rear window.

It was noticed that the Princess hit the button without having to look down to see where it was.

★ ★ ★

"I was lucky," said the little old lady, clasping the big umbrella. "I only waited three hours and because I was short someone let me into the front line so I had a good look at the Princess and the Prince.

The old eyes twinkled, and the quavering voice steadied proudly, "She's just like the pictures I see of her. Pretty and good!"

★ ★ ★

"We waited four hours to see her," said Ruth Graham, "and we'd have waited twice that long.

"She's beau-t-i-ful!"

★ ★ ★

"She's beautiful! Pictures don't begin to do her justice!" said George Naylor, down from Duncan with Diana Castley to get a look at the Royal couple.

Those same words were said 12 years ago when the people of Vancouver Island saw Queen Elizabeth for the first time.

★ ★ ★

Twinkling lights on the Parliament Buildings bathed the statue of Captain Vancouver atop the dome in gold.

Perhaps it was imagination—or the movement of a wisp of cloud passing in the twilight sky—but the old boy seemed to stand a little straighter and to even raise his hand in quick salute.

★ ★ ★

Girl Guide Muriel Watt, 13, of 2529 Bowker Avenue, was the only casualty on the Royal parade route Sunday.

City police said a car hooked a rope at the Moss-Rockland intersection which Muriel was holding, throwing her to the pavement.

She suffered abrasions to the knee but refused medical attention.

★ ★ ★

A naval car whisked into Government House grounds minutes before the Royal arrival to bring the Princess' standard, which will fly from the flagstaff, while Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh are in residence there.

Princess Elizabeth is standing up to the strain of the Royal tour "tremendously," a member of the Royal suite said today.

"She's really enjoying it," he said in reply to a reporter's question on how she was bearing up under the burden of official functions, public appearances and about 3,000 miles of travel by train, airplane and ship.

The Princess appeared to enjoy the salt air of Georgia Strait Sunday as she and Philip stood on the bridge of the destroyer Crusader during the voyage from Vancouver to Victoria.

The quiet, alert individuals who are in the background at all major events where crowds gather were out in strength for the Royal visit Sunday.

St. John Ambulance members, posted throughout the mass of people individually and in small groups, numbered close to 100.

Sailor Prince And Wife At Home At Sea

Granddaughter, daughter and wife of navy men, Princess Elizabeth was quite at home on the bridge of H.M.C.S. guard officer, were overcome by it all. They opened their mouths to shout and at that precise moment the lovely Princess looked right at them.

They opened their mouths but nothing came out. Instead of closing their mouths they clasped their hands over the gaping holes and just stood goggle-eyed.

Their Royal Highnesses inspected the guard fairly quickly but obviously were taking everything in. The guard, which had been training for weeks, was immaculate.

"WHICH WAY?"

The heir apparent, after inspecting the guard, appeared uncertain as to where the limousine would be situated. She turned to the Prince as if to say: "Which way?" He pointed toward the hidden cars and the newsmen and photographers had to retreat while they walked the short distance.

When they got in the plastic top limousine, driven by Chief Petty Officer John Rimmer of Victoria, the Prince busied himself tucking a heavy blanket around the Princess.

The parade was led by 11 members of the Victoria Motorcycle Club. Next was a city police motorcycle squad which included Constables Angus Stewart, Joseph Barlow, Arthur Newsome, William Stewart and Lyle Somers.

DUSK FALLS

On the "heels" of the motorcycles was a black sedan carrying R.C.M.P. officials.

The Princess and Prince came next, their car surrounded by red-coated Mounties astride motorcycles.

The procession included 14 more cars carrying members of the welcoming party and the Royal party.

It was almost dark by the time the visitors arrived at Government House gates where the strets were packed with Girl Guides, Brownies, scouts and Cubs, as well as others.

PRESS COVERAGE OF TOUR WINS APPROVAL OF ROYAL COUPLE

Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip were reported in Victoria today to be pleased with the press coverage of the royal tour.

A member of the royal party told newspaper men that the Prince has read the papers all across the country and has "found less twisting of the news in Canada than he's ever seen."

Philip was quoted as saying: "Canadian newspapers write what they see. They give very straightforward accounts of what takes place."

NAVY MEETS OLD COMRADE

Duke's Coal Shoveling Stint Recalled At Stag

His Royal Highness, the Duke of Edinburgh, Saturday night swapped yarns with two of his former commanding officers and a wartime shipmate.

At H.M.C.S. Discovery, headquarters of the R.C.N. Reserve at Vancouver, the Duke met again Capt. Donald Smith, under whom he served in the Empress of Asia, and Commodore Maurice Mayall, who was his skipper in the Empress of Russia. His one-time shipmate was Lieut. James Butterfield, staff officer at Discovery.

During his 40 minutes visit to the Vancouver naval establishment His Royal Highness swapped "salty dips" with his fellow officers of the naval service.

He was reminded that in the spring of 1941, while serving under Commodore Mayall, he other naval officers had gone into the engine room of the liner, converted to troop-carrying duties, and had shoveled coal into her cavernous boilers on a trip from Newport News, Va., to Halifax.

It took less than 40 minutes for the Duke, a lieutenant-commander in the Royal Navy, to endear himself to his fellow officers.

Just before he left the wardroom he joined in a circle and sang "Auld Lang Syne," and as he disappeared into his waiting limousine the chorus of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" rang out.

French Troops Bolster Suez

CAIRO, Oct. 22 (AP)—Britain moved fresh troops into the hotly-disputed Suez Canal zone today as Cairo newspapers reported a guerrilla underground was forming to drive Britain out of Egypt.

A British military spokesman announced that the 1st Battalion of the Cheshire regiment arrived Sunday night from Cyprus to swell British forces holding the vital 104-mile east-west water link.

Egypt's government, meanwhile, was reported to be moving toward general mobilization on a war footing. The government also made public a note charging Britain's actions in the Suez area looked as if Britain was "moving in to conquer the country."

British warships were guarding both ends of the canal and more troops were on the way to strengthen British control of the gateway to the Orient.

Formation of the anti-British underground, similar to Jewish forces which fought Britain in Palestine, was reported in the pro-government newspaper Al Misri and in the leftist weekly Al Gomhour Al Misri.

The latter publication said the "national resistance" movement had asked the Russian embassy in Cairo for "aid against the barbarous aggressions of the British armed forces in Egypt."

The Daily Al Misri reported that Gen. Aziz El Masry Pasha had been asked to command the Egyptian "liberation legions." Masry Pasha was commander in chief of the Egyptian army before the Second World War and during the war was imprisoned by British authorities, who charged him with pro-Axis sympathies.

Fear Thousand May Have Died

TAIPEH, Formosa, Oct. 22 (UP)—The Island of Formosa was rocked by 33 violent earthquakes in little more than 16 hours today. Landslides and broken dams paralyzed transport and communications along a 200-mile stretch of the east coast.

At least 118 persons were killed, according to the first report, 100 of them in Jualien County and 18 in a coal mine explosion believed caused by one of the first earthquakes. Government officials feared the final toll may exceed 1,000.

The Taipeh observatory said 179 tremors had been registered by 9 p.m. (7 a.m. EST), an average of more than 11 per hour. Only 33 were strong enough to be felt by Formosans.

Violence of the 'quakes ranged from sixth to first class on the observatofy's scale. Taipeh itself suffered no material damage but landslides cut roads and communications outside the capital and broke several mountain dams.

The 'quakes started at 5.30 a.m. (3.30 p.m. Sunday EST) and continued through the day.

Foreign Arms Aid Provides House Debate

OTTAWA, Oct. 22 (BUP)—The nation's foreign arms aid program and external affairs policies were thrown into the Commons for debate today while opposition M.P.'s complained bitterly they had no weapons of parliamentary battle left but words.

Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent sponsored a motion to approve the dispatch of 12,000 ground forces and airmen to Europe and renew parliament's approval of Canadian participation in the Korean war. Before the motion was called, however, the Prime Minister asked parliament to give the balance of the new fall session over to government-sponsored legislation.

Bills and resolutions sponsored by private non-government M.P.'s and Senators can still be introduced, but they will make no progress through Parliament. The move was designed to facilitate speedy passage of the government's social security, transportation, veterans' pensions and anti-resale price maintenance legislation.

Approval of the troops-to-Europe motion was expected to be unanimous. The Senate passed the same resolution Friday with only a few minutes debate.

Waterfront Feud Flares

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (UP)—Fist fights and cobblestone battles broke out today in a rapidly spreading wildcat waterfront strike that has bottled up shipping in the port of New York.

It was the first outbreak of violence in the week-old dock strike that was spreading by the hour to New Jersey piers. The walkout also was beginning to affect Boston. Longshoremen stopped unloading three ships there without explanation.

The rock hurling flared briefly on the tense Brooklyn waterfront. Non-striking stevedores, led by waterfront hoodlum Anthony Anastasia, battered strikers with well-aimed cobblestones.

Police broke up the rock barrage.

The Staten Island stoppage immediately threatened delay in the movement of military cargoes and personnel abroad.

While a federal mediation panel prepared to take up the contract dispute today, New York City's police force made special arrangements to cope with any violence that might break out.

Leaders of the International Longshoremen's Association (A.F.L.), defeated in week-long efforts to break up the strike by dissident members, said the city and federal governments now must try to settle the contract dispute.

It was estimated that almost 100 piers and 60 ships were hit by the strike up to Sunday night. The idle docks include army installations in Brooklyn and Jersey City, N.J.

KOREA VOLUNTEERS

OSLO (CP)—More than 1,000 Norwegians volunteered when it was announced the Norwegian surgical field hospital in Korea would be enlarged. Present staff of the 200-bed hospital includes 83 Norwegians plus technicians, nurses and truck drivers. Only about 85 more are needed.

DESTRUCTIVE STORM

A hurricane and tidal wave struck Galveston, Tex., in 1900 is estimated to have caused 6,000 deaths.

Add Princess' Coat Of Arms To Government House Display

Captain J. G. Cromack, private secretary to Lieutenant-Governor Clarence Wallace, has a painting task ahead of him which he says he will enjoy.

An amateur artist of some note, Captain Cromack has made a hobby of painting the coats of arms of all the Goveronr-Generals of Canada. The colorful array adorns the baronial fireplace in the state dining room at Government House.

As soon as Princess Elizabeth and Prince Phillip leave, the private secretary will busy himself painting the coat of arms of Her Royal Highness. It will be placed above the fireplace, immediately below the Royal coat of arms, placed there after the 1939 Royal visit.

The design will be taken from the Princess' standard which will fly at Government House while the Royal couple is in residence.

MEYER RELEASE BID REJECTED

OTTAWA, Oct. 22 (CP).—Canada has rejected a German request that Maj.-Gen. Kurt Meyer, Nazi war criminal, be set free, External Affairs Minister Pearson said today. The request was made a week ago.

Mr. Pearson said Dr. Werner Dankwort, West Germany's envoy in Ottawa, asked the external affairs department a week ago on behalf of his government that Meyer be pardoned.

Forecasts For Tory Victory In U.K. Grow

LONDON, Oct. 22 (AP) — Election campaigning moved into the closing stages today, and political forecasts were almost unanimous in predicting victory for the Conservative party led by Winston Churchill.

Latest reports today from political soundings all over the United Kingdom carried by newspapers, told the same story with varying details—a forecast the Conservatives will defeat the Labor party in Thursday's voting.

Estimates of the expected Tory majority in the House of Commons ranged from 43 to 100 seats.

It is a notable fact that, throughout this campaign, the heavy weight of opinion—as reported in public opinion tests of various types and shapes—has favored the Conservatives.

Not every political observer in London, by any means, is convinced of the accuracy of the polls.

Since the great majority of British newspapers are Conservative, the feeling exists that these uniform results may be a part of a "bandwagon" technique.

Even the Conservative Daily Mail reported that the voters "are not only silent, but secretive." It is said that, despite the polls, the result of the election may well depend on last-minute decisions.

Shakey Stock Market Falls More In N.Y.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (AP)—Prices dropped as much as $4 a share on the stock market today as the decline that started last Friday cut deeper into the market value of stocks.

Most of the declines were a matter of cents but losses of $1 and more became increasingly common as the session wore on.

The entire market moved downward. As a group, however, chemicals showed the greatest weakness.

American Cyanamid and Du Pont recorded $4 losses each at one time. American Smelting dropped $2 and Anaconda and Kennecott $1.25 each. U.S. Rubber was down $3, Santa Fe was off $2, Amerada Petroleum fell $5.

Traders felt the drop stemmed from unfavorable earnings reports of such large companies as Du Pont and General Electric.

Crowd Came With Stools, Ladders, Telescopes 'Gamps'

By DAVE STOCK

It was just as though a master stage electrician was handling lighting effects.

All the tricks of the theatrical business were used to make the Royal couple's entrance to Victoria a smashing, dramatic success.

Although raindrops came just as H.M.C.S. Crusader entered the Inner Harbor, rain ceased as the ship warped alongside the C.P.R. jetty, a brilliant rainbow formed behind the sedate Empress Hotel, an opening came in threatening clouds in the western section of the sky and for a few brief moments the sun shone.

At the same time, electric lights outlining the Parliament Buildings came on. And Causeway cluster lights were illuminated, too.

"Oh, isn't it wonderful," one 'teen ager exclaimed to her friend even before there was any sign of the Royal couple.

Moments before the girl had sighed with disappointment because of the rain and dark sky.

When a tiny lady standing in front of her on Belleville Street had pushed an umbrella over her head, she had cried:

"Oh no, not that. There ought to be a law against people with umbrellas."

To which the lady with the "gamp" replied over her shoulder:

"I'll take it down when they get here. Don't worry. It's just that I want to keep a few drops off."

Another lady nearby turned around and told those behind her:

"I'll take my umbrella down, too, and if my hat is in the way, just take it off."

Many of those in the immediate vicinity of the C.P.R. wharf took up their points of observation a full hour and a half before the actual arrival time. There were a fair number of elderly people among the crowd who had folding canvas camp chairs and a few short citizens with boxes or pantry-style ladders.

The north edge of the beautiful Parliament Buildings lawn was badly "chewed" by the crowd. Soggy after recent heavy rains, it was nothing but mud in many places after the crowd had moved away.

The giant Sequoia tree in front of the buildings—which is decorated every Christmas as Victoria's biggest Christmas tree—was the lookout place for nearly 30 small and not-so-small boys. Many of them proved their agility by climbing the tree one-handed—the other being used to hold flags to wave.

The base of the Cenotaph was crowded. Flowers recently put there were ruined. The concrete base of the flag post was also used as a lookout spot and so was the base of Queen Victoria's statue.

Charles Torhelm, 12, of Central Junior High School, and his pal, Barry Gill, 11, of Doncaster School, managed somehow to stick to a small ledge on the Sir James Douglas needle. They saw over the crowds.

Cameras, of course, were a common enough sight. And some people had binoculars and telescopes.

One man had a cardboard periscope, which he said he bought for 25 cents when the King and Queen visited here in 1939.

The crowd was a credit to Victoria. Despite the danger of bad weather, most of those on the street were dressed in their best to greet the Royal pair.

When one young girl ran from the side of the road to try and touch the Princess as she reached the eastern end of the navy guard of honor, a Mounty strode out from the crowd with just four giant paces and turned the girl round and sent her back without a word.

So quick was his action that the Princess, just six feet away, appeared not to notice. Prince Philip did, though. He jerked his head round, sized up the situation and a faint smile crossed his face.

The Navy guard, color party and band proceeded to the front of the Parliament Buildings after the Princess had made her inspection at the C.P.R. wharf and had left for Government House. Many in the crowd, however, followed the procession, thinking there was to be another appearance by the Princess there.

The throng was bewildered as to what the ceremony was all about, especially when the band struck up God Save the King. The "buzz" was that it was a practice for Monday, but actually the ceremony was for the purpose of returning the colors — the Royal Standard that had been carried ahead of the Princess.

The colors were taken inside the Parliament Buildings before the guard moved away to disperse.

Lieut. E. D. "Ted" Robbins of Victoria escorted the Princess as she inspected the Navy's Royal guard. "It is a very smart guard," she told him.

TEXT OF WELCOME GIVEN BY MAYOR

"It is with a deep and abiding pleasure that I, on behalf of my colleagues of the city council and the citizens of Victoria, extend to you a sincere and warm welcome to this the most westerly provincial capital in the Dominion of Canada.

"We are proud that you have seen fit to honor with your presence a city named 108 years ago for that most revered and illustrious sovereign, Queen Victoria, your great-great-grandmother, whose dignity, graciousness and charm it has ever sought to emulate and preserve.

"We remember with pleasure the all-too-brief visit of your father and mother, Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth, in 1939, when they endeared themselves to old and young alike and left with us, as will you, indelible memories in the minds of all.

"We rejoice in the ties which bind our broad Dominion and our mother country into a great force of freedom-loving people, and we welcome this opportunity to reaffirm our love and loyality.

"We trust and pray that your stay among us will fulfill your every desire and that you will take away with you many happy memories of your brief sojourn in a city whose very name brings us closer to Your Royal Highnesses.

"Therefore, Your Royal Highnesses, we beg you to accept this small momento of your visit to Victoria, the capital city of British Columbia, and shall ever pray that God's blessing will be upon you and that you may live, and in time, reign, in health, happiness and peace."

A Welcome—In Faith And Pride

VICTORIA TODAY WELCOMES TWO fine people, a lovely Princess and her stalwart consort. As such they have captured within the space of a few days the personal admiration and affection of every Canadian community fortunate enough to greet them. Today they have captured ours.

But there is much more to this event than the demonstration of a happy emotion. For in these two visitors, and the Royal Family they represent, reside the meaning and substance of our democratic way of life.

The system of constitutional monarchy which they and we jointly uphold is a priceless possession. Where other ships of state have foundered, or become lost through the divided counsels of the crew, ours has survived the buffetings of the seas of the stormy twentieth century. We have held to our charted course though the ultimate destination is still hidden in the mists of time.

In our royal visitors and in our response to their presence we perceive the whole history of our past, our strength in the present and our hope for the future. Our constitutional form of government, of which Princess Elizabeth will some day become the living symbol, is a unique growth representing centuries of experience, a growth whose exact form could not have been predicted by those who fostered its progress in past ages, but which has matured in spite of all adversities to satisfy our peculiar needs.

In that susceptibility to change and development lies its strength, for the form we see today will itself evolve to meet new needs, new emergencies of the future. We have here no molded frame, no lifeless structure of dry precedent, but a living, pliant organism to be adapted to our unfolding destiny.

Our welcome today is not primarily to the future Queen of England but to a Princess who will be Queen of Canada. She is our guest by virtue of the Canadian monarchy which she will inherit as a Canadian. As such she commands in the people of this country a warmth of sentiment, a oneness of feeling, a sense of personal contact which could be aroused in no other way, by no other person.

It is a paradox of this age that the British monarchy has grown stronger as the units which recognize it have pursued their independent paths. The scattered segments have provided a foundation broader and more secure than any previous centralization could enjoy. While nearly all the hereditary monarchies of the past have gone down to destruction this loose federation of the Commonwealth, bound by ties describable in no treaty, no pact, no political or economic agreement, has moved from strength to strength.

The reason is that the monarchy of Britain and of Canada and the other members of our family, while antique in some of its outward forms, is basically a creature of evolution, harmonizing with our changing life and growing with our maturing society.

Only such an organic institution could have continued to exist in a world-wide Commonwealth of diverse interests, a minority of whose people are of British origin.

As a student of history, the Princess will know that the present constitution of the Commonwealth originated in Canada. It could well be described as a Canadian invention, deriving from the will of Canadians more than 100 years ago to attempt an apparently impossible experiment—a nation sovereign in its own affairs and yet linked with others of a like nature.

The constitutional problem raised after the Durham report was quite insoluble in ordinary logic. For how could the Throne be advised by a Canadian minister on Canadian affairs if the advice conflicted with that of its ministers in London?

At first there seemed no escape from the dilemma. But it was solved eventually, not by logic, but by trial and error, by the answers given through daily experience. Success came mainly by the will of a Canadian people determined on their independence but equally insistent on maintaining their links with the Mother Country.

To meet that dual demand, a process of evolution was launched by such men as Macdonald and Baldwin, carried on by Laurier and Borden, and codified in the Balfour Declaration of 1926 and the Statute of Westminster five years later. The constitutional machinery under which our government operates has thus been slowly perfected to fit the changing times—a creation of simple faith, of human need and high statesmanship.

It is as the future custodian of that constitution still only partially committed to paper but strong for all its intangibility, that we welcome Her Royal Highness today. For she comes to us as the embodiment of our heritage, a powerful symbol which links the people of the Commonwealth together, the inheritor of a great past and the protector of an illimitable future.

But in greeting her as a person and a symbol Canadians will perceive still more.

In the wider sphere, she will some day reign as the head of a world-wide institution which by example and persuasion has done more than perhaps any other on earth to promote the cause of peace and human understanding and pioneer the way to an era of international law and decency. That is a heritage of vast proportions, a responsibility of inestimable importance but one which every Canadian will share with her in faith and pride.

Swing To Powdered Milk

THE BUDGET-PRESSED HOUSEWIFE who turned from steaks and roasts to hamburger, from butter to margarine, is turning again. Where she once looked for milk from contented cows, she's looking now to milk from cans of economic content. Sales of powdered skim milk are increasing.

Households which used to receive two quarts of fluid nutriment a day from the milkman, are showing an inclination to buy one at the increased price. They replace the other with a substitute quart concocted on the kitchen drainboard.

They can do that by mixing a cup of powdered skim milk with a quart of warm water and beating the mixture. It is one more chore for the housewife. She's getting used to the extra chores. Coloring margarine to look like butter made her accustomed to unnecessary annoyance. So she's beating her powdered milk mixture and beating the price rise. The made-up product costs approximately half as much as the bottled and delivered whole milk.

The substitute lacks two important ingredients. It contains no fat and no vitamin A. The household can make up the deficiency, nutritionists say, by increasing its consumption of margarine or butter. Apart from those components, powdered skim milk has the food values of regular milk.

The growing demand for the powder hasn't yet outstripped supply. Provisioners say the product is available from the Fraser Valley, from Quebec and from Ontario. If those sources run short, it could be imported.

The housewife isn't solving the milk problem with a powder, a quart of warm water, a bowl and an eggbeater in the sink. She's only stretching her food dollar.

At the same time she's giving the dairyman a nudge to remind him that fluid milk is being priced off the market. She may also be showing the public the milk picture of the future.

If the trend expands, many of the small farmers of Vancouver Island may question the profit to them of the recent price increase for fluid milk. Their higher margin per quart could gross less money if fewer quarts are sold.

Unless they find ways of processing the milk the housewife is unwilling or unable to buy, the small farmers face a loss. Large farmers might do their own processing. Small farmers might join together for that purpose, sharing the costs of required machinery.

They would still face the competition of bigger operators now producing powdered milk who can sell their product profitably at half the price of whole milk. With efficient production calling for centralized industry in areas where large herds can be maintained, what is the future of the small Island farmer? Is it one of more dairy cattle moving along the already well-worn trails to the slaughterhouse?

Is the time coming when the Vancouver Island child finds no interest at all in Gelett Burgess' purple cow, since the sight of any cow, regardless of color, will be a rarity?

A Piece Of Nonsense

IT IS IMPOSSIBLE TO IMAGINE ANYthing more misleading than the recent statement on the financial page of this newspaper that Mr. Abbott's revenue surplus "is tending to raise prices rather than lower them." As any financial editor should know, this is nonsense.

At first sight government taxes, levied on goods, raise prices, but a financial editor should be able to look further. As every economist, whether capitalist, socialist or communist, will agree, government taxes are the surest method of holding down prices at a time of inflation because they reduce excessive public purchasing power, which is the sole source of inflation.

Moreover, a revenue surplus (a misleading term) not only reduces the public's appetite for goods directly but it actually reduces the total supply of money in circulation when there clearly is far too much of it.

If a government collects exactly as much as it spends the amount of money, all other things being equal, remains the same.

If it spends more than it collects and borrows from the bank to make up the difference then these borrowings create new money in the form of bank credit.

If it spends less than it collects and reduces its debt this revenue surplus reduces also the total money supply, since government debt is the base on which credit is expanded by the banks.

Hence the Canadian government's policy of high taxes and revenue surpluses has two essential results: It scales down a national debt now costing us in interest charges nearly as much as our whole budget before the war; and by deflating the money supply it operates to hold down prices.

Prices have risen not because of the government's policy in this and other aspects of the inflationary problem but because that policy so far has not proved strong enough to turn the tide. Anyone who attacks this deflationary policy is thus urging more inflation.

To put the matter more simply: If it is argued that taxes raise prices then it follows that the government, by reducing or abolishing all taxes, would lower prices.

In other words, if the government financed entirely by borrowing from the banks and creating more and more money, the inflationary problem would be solved. If the printing presses were started in the national mint our troubles would be over. If, in short, we embarked on the wildest sort of inflation then we would have deflation. If we did everything possible to raise prices then prices would fall.

This is the logic of the argument which was presented on our financial page the other day. We hope the public will overlook a thoughtless bit of absurdity.

Loose Ends

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

MY GOOD neighbor, Mrs. Alfred Noggins, who was born in London, was telling me today that she had increased her stake in Canada by the purchase of another government savings bond.

Hutchison

"Not that I like savin', you understand," she said. "I'd druther spend, but the vice of savin' 'as got into me. Savin' is the great Canadian vice. Canadians saved up enough to build the railways and the cities and the 'orspitals and all like that, and if it wasn't fer savin' we'd be back where we was at the beginnin' like the Injuns who never saved nothink. We'd be comfortable and 'appy again in a wigwam, no taxes, no gover'mint and usually not enough to eat either.

"THAT WAS the good life all right, but I doubt we're worthy of it nowadays. We're too wedded to warm 'ouses and meals, reg'lar. But if we stop savin' we can get back to the good old days by wot they call hinflation. A lot of countries like the Romans 'ave hinflated themselves clean out of business and solved all their problems overnight.

"Nobody knows that better than Uncle Joe in Moscow. The other day, they say, old Joe hexploded another hatom bomb, but 'e don't count much on that kind of thing because we've got more of 'em, and bigger. No, sir, Joe is watchin' the bomb of hinflation tickin' right 'ere and it costs 'im nothink but a little 'ollow laughter. But we can't build one bomb, or a tank or a gun or a soldier's boots without savin' the stuff that goes into 'em. 'Tis very hexpensive and unpleasant but I dare say it's better to save ourselves that way than to be saved by Joe and 'is boys.

"THE RUSSIANS are great savers. There the gover'mint doesn't arsk people to buy bonds, no nonsense like that. It tells 'em wot to save and if they don't like it they're given the good life up in the salt mines of Siberia, but it doesn't last long. Over 'ere the gover'mint relies on our common sense, which isn't too common.

"You take George Pudbury, frinstance, and 'is farm down the road. George told me today 'e wasn't goin' to buy no bond because 'e don't believe in 'em. All that stuff, 'e says, is heconomics and we done a lot better in this country before we hinvented heconomics. Yes, I says, and we done all right before we 'ad bath rooms but I kind of like a nice 'ot soak on Saturday nights.

"AND, I SAYS to George, you done all right before you got your tractor. 'Wot's that got to do with it, says George, I bought the tractor myself, the gover-mint didn't buy it for me. Those boys in Ottawa with the long 'air don't 'ave to tell me 'ow to run my farm. Well, I says, 'ow did you buy the farm and the tractor in the first place? I paid for 'em, of course, says George, and it took a long time on a mortgage. In other words, I says, you saved up for 'em.

"YOU MIGHT call it that, says George, but that's my private business. With a gover'mint it's different, 'e says. A gover'mint don't 'ave to save nothink, it can print all the money it likes so long as the ink and paper 'olds out, without arskin' me to buy no bonds.

"That's the gover'mint's affair, not mine, 'e says, so let the gover'mint leave me be, I've got my 'ands full tryin' to buy that forty acres on the other side of the 'ill. That will take all my money for the next ten years, 'e says, without the govér'mint interferin'.

"AND IF THE gover'mint would only print more money 'e says, instead of borrowin' mine, maybe I'd lay my 'ands on some of it and buy the land all the sooner. They ort to be givin' me more money instead of takin' it away from a poor man.

"And if they did, I says, and there was more dollars runnin' around do you think there'd be one extra tractor runnin' around? That's heconomics, says George, and I don't like 'em. Let the gover'mint look after the heconomics and I'll look after forty acres.

"Okay, I says—for I do henjoy a hargument with old George—if they print a lot more money and it's worth a lot less, 'ow much, I says, do you think those forty acres or a new tractor will cost you? That, says George, is the gover'mint's affair and they don't need to load their troubles on me when I've plenty of my own. Let the gover'mint keep prices down so a body can live.

"ANYWAYS, says George, I don't care if prices keep goin' up. Let 'em rip. I'll get more for my milk and potatoes so it don't matter. And anyways, 'e says, I've got money in the bank, I've got life insurance fer my old age so 'm not worryin' so long as the gover'mint leaves me alone. And, I says, 'ow much will your money be worth in your old age if prices keep climbin'? That's hinflation, says George, and I'm against hinflation but wot's that got to do with savin' bonds? You'll find out, I says, and left old George standin' on the road, lookin' kind of puzzled.

"Which reminds me," said Mrs. Noggins, "of my Uncle 'Erbert, who was once an alderman in Liverpool till the auditors took a look at the books. 'Erbert was against savin' on principle and it worked out all right because 'e run off with a widow from Manchester and lived 'appily on 'er savin's ever afterwards. Yes, sir, 'e stuck to 'is principles to the last."

Mr. Acheson has served notice on Egypt that she will not be permitted to carry on her quarrel with Britain in isolation. These matters, as he said—Suez and the Sudan—are of general concern to the free world, affecting as they do the security and defense of the Middle East.

Perhaps more important than this direct intimation to Egypt that she must pull in her horns is the intimation that the United States is prepared to assume some of the responsibilities Britain has carried for so long and is no longer able to support. It was a cause of anxiety in Britain and elsewhere that in connection with the Iran incident the United States was prepared to mediate but nothing more. The answer to Egypt's threat to oust the British is the willing assumption by the United States of the leadership her strength imposes on her.

THAT QUOTATION . . .

Reference Duke Senior's letter of Oct. 17 and his kindness to Mme. Speaker Hodges re quotation from Shakespeare, please see Act IV, Scene IV, "An ill-favored thing, sir, but mine own."

Sometimes pomposity may be corrected by a little more of the same.

"JUNIOR."

. . . AGAIN

In your column "As Our Readers See It" of Oct. 17, a letter appeared over the name Duke Senior referring to a quotation made by Mrs. Nancy Hodges in her column of Oct. 10, and pointing out the origin of the quotation.

May I respectfully draw attention to the fact that both Mrs. Hodges and your correspondent were wrong.

The quotation is from Shakespeare's "As You Like It" correctly enough, and from Act. 5, but from Scene 4, Line 60, and not from Scene 3.

The correct quotation is, "A poor virgin, sir, an ill-favored thing, sir, but mine own."

THE FLAG

I read with keen interest a letter by E. F. Watherston in the Wednesday edition of your valued paper. It dealt with the very controversial question of a Canadian flag. Surely Mr. Watherston is right, surely the answer is, why not?

It seems to me that these dreary people who are always agitating for a distinctive flag, such as S. Johnson, Walter W. Josephs, and O. D. Davis are not really very good Canadians at all. The Union Jack is our heritage and our right, and Canada may well be proud that it is our right! The Union Jack is not only the flag of England as so many people love to say; it is, as the word union signifies, a combination of the crosses of Ireland, Wales, Scotland and England and was carried to the outposts of the Empire by those intrepid people who were our ancestors.

This is the flag, not of England alone, but of the Commonwealth of Nations, of which we, as Canadians, are an important part. A Commonwealth of which we can be justly proud. Where should we be without that Commonwealth?

Without the strength of the entire Commonwealth behind us we should have to look for protection and aid entirely to our cousins to the South. Surely we depend on them and ape them too much as it is.

God Bless 'em, I love em! But let's keep Canada Canadian, and keep our own flag which we already have, and which we have had since the Dominion of Canada was founded, and for which so many of our servicemen have bled and died in so many wars in so many parts of the world.

MULGUY BUS

Just in case Mr. Sturdy should ever go back to Glasgow and wait for a Mulguy bus, may I help him with the information that he hasn't got the spelling right yet. It's Milngavie—not Milnegavie.

A FORMER RESIDENT.

When Split Seconds Count

On Oct. 13, 1951, the Saanich Fire Department received an alarm for a fire from the Colquitz operator, that a call had been received by her, from a woman, but she had not given her address.

Although the operator could trace the call as she knew it to be one of eight parties, this would take time, and she had called the Fire Department to stand by until she traced the call. When she had, she then relayed the same to the department.

On the other hand, it was reported by the woman who had the fire, that she had reported to the operator that her house was on fire and to send the Fire Department to the address which had been stated by her correctly, but for some reason or other, the operator never relayed the message to the department, thereby causing considerable delay.

Now as I have had a great deal of experience in receiving emergency messages over the telephone, both from operators and residents, I think I can say without fear of contradiction, that regardless of who might be on the telephone during an emergency message, there is sometimes a certain amount of excitement in relaying messages, which generally results in severe criticism from the public.

However, regardless as to who might be at fault, which in itself is difficult to determine, it is not my intention to blame anyone. I would at this time like to point out a few facts that might prevent a future delay in relaying a call from the public who rely on telephone exchanges for service.

When a rural telephone subscriber is in need of emergency services of the police, fire or resuscitator, the correct method to obtain these services is as follows: Ring for the operator. In case of another party on the line, ask them to clear the line for an emergency. When the operator answers give her the emergency number G 2323 which should be posted near every telephone, then give the fire alarm operator your name and address and type of fire. If necessary, he can generally get added information that the operator would not obtain.

Contrary to the opinion of a great many, all calls should go direct to the Fire Department and not be given to the operator. If the operator does take your message, it is done as an added service, as the party calling might be in distress.

However, as this is not part of the duty of an operator, should mistakes occur during the relaying of a message to the Fire Department, she could not be held responsible.

I might add that when you consider the great number of alarms received in a year by the department, I would say that the percentage of mistakes on any one's part are few.

Bevan—'Next P.M. But One'

By STEWART ALSOP, From Britain

THE scene is a huge dance hall, hideously decorated with vaguely Latin murals, in a grimy industrial town. On the platform, facing the tight packed crowd is a heavy man with a half-angry, half-amused expression on his broad, pink face. This is Aneurin Bevan, the Labor rebel often described here as "the next Prime Minister but one," and certainly one of the two or three most interesting political figures in England.

Alsop

What manner of man is this, the former coal miner who aspires to the office once held by a Cecil, a Pitt, a Disraeli, a Churchill? He looks, oddly, rather like a bad little boy—his thick grey hair is brushed like a boy's, straight out from the part, as his mother might have brushed it in the dreary Welsh mining town where he was born. And he has something of the wicked humor and the brimming vitality of a small boy.

As soon as he begins to speak, it is clear that he has something else—that rare electric quality which brings his listeners to the edge of their seats, anxious not to miss a word. He starts quietly, in his musical Welsh accent, with a few jokes—his face is not pretty, he says, but at least the audience can see he has no horns on his forehead. Then he begins to talk with an oddly intellectual seriousness, using phrases like "our collective reaction to the external situation."

The Tory hecklers smuggled into the hall soon get to work, and Bevan abruptly changes his tone. "Oh, sit down, Moustache," he shouts at a heckler, or at a strident lady Tory, "I can't abide meat twice cooked or a nattering woman." "What about Abadan?" one heckler yells. "I am coming to Abadan," Bevan shouts back, "and sooner than you'll like." Then he comes to Abadan.

The Conservatives don't want war, he says, with an air of sweet reason. No sane man wants war. But the Tories are "not adjusted" to the changed "external situation." The smaller countries have rights now. "If the United States of America established an industry in Great Britain we would not let the American Congress say what was to be done about it." Although the Tories do not know, what the Tories really mean when they talk of force is—and here his voice rises to a bull roar—"War! War! War!"

ANOTHER SOLUTION

The crow roars back. No, Bevan says, that is not the solution. There is another solution. Small countries, like Persia or Egypt, have a right to manage their own affairs. But—and here his voice rises again—they have no right to deny to the rest of the world what the world needs to live; oil or communications. Thus the matter must be settled within the world organization, the United Nations. This is the real solution.

The crowd seems entirely satisfied by this "solution" and Bevan shifts to firmer ground. He recalls, bitterly and vividly, the miseries of unemployment in the thirties, and points with genuine pride to the raised standards of living for the workers, and the social services, under the socialists. The crowd responds with violent enthusiasm, and as Bevan ends his speech and sits down, it is clear that here is a politician of stature, a man who must be reckoned with.

What is really surprising, in this tired, war-battered country is not that there are Bevanites, but that there are so few of them. The fact is that the British are still basically united on the essential points—the need to rearm, and the need to maintain the Anglo-American alliance.

For they know instinctively that if the dry-rot continues much longer, if Britain ceases to be a great power, it will be nonsense to talk of free false teeth—or even a tolerable standard of living—for the people on this crowded island. One suspects that Aneurin Bevan himself is fully aware of this.

Even so, it is well to remember that the sort of wishful thinking and flaccidity Americans have recently displayed in the Middle East could render a left-wing brand of appeasement a real force in England, which has traveled so long and so weary a road that the temptation to appease is wholly natural.

Ups And Downs

By BRIAN TOBIN

"IT'S A GREAT ART," said the Elevator Man, "to kid yourself into liking what you've got. There's lots of ways it can be done. One way is just to cultivate a taste for second-rate, moth-eaten things and pretend that's your choice. I knew a fella once who wasn't much of a cook. He always burnt his toast when he made it, but he escaped criticism by insisting he liked it that way. That's one way of keeping happy, if you call it happiness. But there's a limit to applying the principle. There's a suspicion you might end up dead before your time because you might have persuaded the fates that you preferred it. If you consistently aim too low, life may cut you down to that size. Mezzanine!

Tobin

"Another way," said the Elevator Man, "to excuse below-par jobs is just to give them a different name. If your cake turns out soggy, call it pudding. That's what the folks in a backward part of the country did, according to the story. A tourist was driving through the district and stopped to chat with a farmer. 'How are the roads around here?' he asked. 'Fine,' says the native. 'We've abolished bad roads in these parts.' 'Pretty big job, eh?' asks the tourist. 'Nope,' says the farmer. 'Wherever the going looks hopeless we quit calling it a road. We just call it a detour.' Going down!

"Usually," said the Elevator Man, "a last-minute substitute for the real thing doesn't work out very well. It falls far short of the requirements. Take that moment last week when they were all set to fire an atomic bomb for a test in Nevada. All the vast machinery got under way. The final seconds ticked off. The button was pushed—and nothing happened. There was such a gaping silence that one scientist said afterwards he wished he'd said 'BOOM!' It would have been a good try. But I don't think it would have quite made up for the bomb."

Weather Synopsis

VICTORIA'S SUNSHINE RECORD TO DATE, 1951—2,360.9 HOURS

SYNOPSIS: Another active Pacific storm is approaching the northern B.C. coast and rain is already falling over the Queen Charlottes and the northern mainland. Gale warnings have been issued for the waters near the Queen Charlottes and northern Vancouver Island. Winds in the southern coastal areas will freshen considerably late today as the disturbance moves down the coast. It will bring rain to southern Vancouver Island and the lower Mainland late today and showers overnight in the wake of the disturbance as it moves inland.

Fresh show is reported in the Cariboo and central B.C. regions of the province with more of the same indicated in the next 12 hours.

REGIONAL FORECASTS VALID UNTIL MIDNIGHT TUESDAY

Competition Lack Means Rate Boost

The latest increase of 10 per cent in the freight rates between B.C. ports, but a boost not applicable between B.C. ports and neighboring U.S. ports, was condemned at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce by director Walter Miles.

"Where there is no competition the steamer rates go up," he said. "Where there is competition they remain unchanged."

For Eczema—Itching Skin

Make up your mind today that you are going to give your skin a real chance to get well. Go to any good drug store and get an original bottle of MOONE'S EMERALD OIL—it lasts many days because it is highly concentrated.

The very first application will give you relief—the itching of Eczema is quickly stopped—eruptions dry up and scale off in a very few days. The same is true of Itching Toes and Feet, Barber's Itch, Salt Rheum and other skin troubles.

Remember that MOONE'S EMERALD OIL is a clean, powerful, penetrating Antiseptic Oil that does not stain or leave a greasy residue. Complete satisfaction or money back. ***

Typewriters Clatter In Busy Empress Hotel Newsroom

55 Newsmen With Royal Tour

Thousands Of Words Go Out Daily On Doings Of Princess and Prince on Canadian Trip

By DON INGHAM

There is nothing like a Royal visit to gather newspapermen.

The Empress Hotel is a seething hive of them, and the staid Princess Charlotte Room today is undoubtedly the busiest news office in Canada.

A party of 55, made up of reporters, radio men, photographers and communications experts have the full use of the room.

There is a constant clatter of typewriter keys as reporters write stories of the Royal visit to Victoria on 30 typewriters. The sharp rat-a-tat of telegraph keys and the slower, steadier thump of teletypes carried their words directly to all parts of North America—and the world.

Cameras, telegraph blanks, a mail box, maps, directives and overflowing ash trays all help to convert the private dining hall into a news room that pulses with activity 18 hours a day.

Some of the people are well known here.

Lotta Dempsey of the Toronto Globe and Mail is a rapid worker who both interviews and writes at the same time.

Miss Grace Davidson of the Boston Post, only United States reporter to make the whole tour, busily trying to recall some of the British Columbia background she learned during the Canadian tour of King George and Queen Elizabeth in 1939.

Allan Kent of the Toronto Telegram, Mrs. H. Geissler of the Toronto Star, radioman George McLean of Buffalo, N.Y. and radio chief E. L. Bushnell of Ottawa are just a few of the men and women whose job is to tell the people of the world all they can of the Royal trip.

Two of the hardest working men in the whole group are John W. Dale, Montreal, of Canadian Pacific Telegraphs, and Tom Merrigan, Toronto, of Canadian National Telegraphs.

For three weeks they have been handling from 35,000 to 50,000 words per day from the small army of newsmen on the tour.

At centres such as Victoria they set up direct wires that carry messages instantly to their destinations.

At other stops they arrange ahead of time for enlarged staffs at their respective offices to move the mass of copy that will be ready to send.

"Sometimes when the train doesn't stop we are ready with our dispatches tied up in a bundle," Dale said. "We throw them at a responsible person—usually a policeman—with a note to take them to the telegraph office. Knock wood, because we haven't failed yet."

"In my three weeks on the job I've come to know the whims of all these newspapermen and women," Dale continued, "and they certainly have their share."

J. Walter Thomson, director of public relations for the tour, keeps a steady flow of information going to the press, and arrangements are made at every centre for a pooling of official pictures, over and above those taken by local photographers.

Minister Admits Dollar Lack Delay

Slow progress in grading the new Patricia Bay highway has been partially caused by financial difficulties of a contracting company, Works Minister E. C. Carson admitted Saturday.

The minister was commenting on criticisms of Arthur Ash, M.L.A., who blamed financial troubles of the original contractor and public works ineptitude for delay and conditions on the scarred highway.

Would-Be Suicide Frustrated

A 65-year-old man who attempted suicide, either did everything wrong or has a very strong constitution.

City police said the man cut his groin with a razor blade in a downtown hotel room Saturday night. He then took a bottle of Frosst's 222's and a bottle of personnia. He survived and is being treated at Jubilee Hospital.

BOSTON, Oct. 22 (AP)—More than 20 policemen donated blood Sunday for Detective Arthur J. Ahearn who, superiors said, is suffering from ulcers apparently generated from overwork in connection with the $1,750,000 Brink's robbery. Superiors said Ahearn had been working a great deal of overtime since the holdup a year ago last January.

Walkie-Talkies Timed Guns

The Royal Canadian Artillery used walkie-talkie sets for split-second timing in the firing of a 21-gun salute on the arrival of Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip. As soon as the Princess placed one foot on the gangway the battery commander at the wharfside, Capt. John Reeves, buzzed Capt. John Robertson at the gunsite on Belleville Street to open fire with four 25-pounders. Battery included 26 officers and men.

APPROBATION FROM POLICE

Crowd, Largest Ever, 'Very Well Mannered'

By ROY "CAP" THORSEN

"Biggest crowd we've ever seen on Victoria Streets, and a well-mannered one, too."

That was the comment of city police today in regard to the cheering thousands who lined the Royal couple's route to Government House Sunday evening.

The great gathering around the Parliament Buildings and the Causeway arrival point was believed by police to be the heaviest in the history of Victoria.

The Fort Street crowd was a little thin in spots, but Cpl. H. Smith, R.C.M.P., thought Rockland Avenue had a much bigger crowd than that at the visit of the King and Queen in 1939.

At several points along the route the crowds surged past the servicemen and veterans lining the route, to get a better view of the Royal couple in their lighted plastic-roofed sedan.

TOO BUSY TO LOOK

"Gee, I was so busy trying to keep them from obstructing the path of the car at Fort and Vancouver I didn't even get a chance to see Princess Elizabeth," lamented one sergeant.

Deputy Police Chief Harry Mercer, in charge of city policing arrangements for the visit, had every man on the force on duty. Police of the surrounding municipalities and the R.C.M.P. aided in the heavy policing role.

NO ACCIDENTS

St. John Ambulance men were stationed at strategic points along the route to take care of any accident victims. Police had cars available along the route to take persons to hospital. There were no accident cases reported.

Police had their hands full for an hour after the parade, unsnarling traffic, especially in the James Bay district, but also on roads leading to the parade route.

"Yes, everybody was very orderly . . . and let's keep it that way for the rest of their stay in Victoria," urged Chief John Blackstock.

City firemen did not have to buck the crowds to get to any fire scenes as there was a clean sheet in the alarm room for the entire day.

Premature Baby Dies After Flight To Vancouver

VANCOUVER, Oct. 21, (CP)—One of three mercy flights carried out Saturday by B.C. Airlines proved to be a futile attempt to save the life of a prematurely-born baby.

The baby, son of Mr. and Mrs. Schultz of Black Creek, 13 miles northwest of Courtenay, was flown from Campbell River but died in hospital here Sunday.

The baby had been given oxygen on the plane and was met by a specially-equipped ambulance at the airport.

Arthur Schwartz was flown here from Britannia Mines after a mine accident. His condition was described as "fair."

Mrs. S. Woods gave birth to a baby boy half an hour after being flown from Squamish.

Philip At Home On Gulf Islands Cruise

By JOHN R. STURDY

A tribute to a young lady, who will be queen some day, was paid on Sunday by the ocean ports of Vancouver and Victoria.

It was all marine, from the moment H.M.C.S. Crusader cast off her lines in Vancouver to the second when she landed Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh at the wharf in Victoria's inner harbor.

It was mostly the navy's day. But it belonged to the merchant service, too, and to a lone piper who stood on the upper deck of one of the coastal steamships and played the royal couple into port at Victoria.

It was that kind of a thing. There were no brass bands to see them off when the royal couple stood on the destroyer's bridge and said "au revoir" to Vancouver. The standard of her Royal Highness flipped out at the yardarm, and as it unfolded the quiet orders went along the decks to let go for'ard and let go aft.

And the ship was under way. A longshoreman, standing at the end of the pier, raised his thumb in salute and shouted: "Take care of yourselves!"

As the destroyer went out into the stream, the whole Vancouver waterfront blew "good-bye for now."

The Princess and her naval officer husband stood on the bridge of the ship and watched as she nosed out towards Lion's Gate and the sea. There was a dignity about this departure that only a waterfront—tough as it is—can achieve.

And Victoria — an older port and a navy town — greeted the Princess and the Prince as it saw them. The people, lined along the waterfront into the Parliament grounds and back to the Empress Hotel, watched them as they came down the ramp from the ship, saw a very young Princess whose chore, now and increasingly in the future, is staggering, and a young man, Lieutenant - Commander Philip Mountbatten, R.N., who is in love with her.

THE PRINCE'S DAY

It was his day really — this navy trip from the mainland to the Island — because he was at home. And she let him take it. For a few hours on this tour he was with men that he knew—in the wardroom, in the chief petty officers' mess, down through the flats, to talk with the seamen, to chew the fat with the boys in the engine and boiler rooms.

They liked it, and I think he did.

The Princess was a navy wife this day. She stayed "Up top." But it was for her that the people crammed on to the end of the piers leading into the Inner Harbor, and shouted and waved. It was for her that other people stood in dense throngs all along the route that they travelled, and it was for her, too, that the naval guard presented arms and caused one of the English staff to say: "On this whole tour this is the finest guard I have seen."

It was spattering rain, on and off, when the Princess and Prince came down the Canadian Pacific Railway ramp in Vancouver on Sunday morning to board the "Crusader." But the sun came through and provided a magnificent backdrop as the destroyer's escorts—"Beacon Hill," "Antigonish" and "Sault Ste. Marie"—left her just outside the harbour and proceeded to their home base at Esquimalt.

FISHING BOATS "CURTSEY"

Outside Vancouver harbor, small power craft and several sailing vessels dipped their ensigns to "Crusader." And later, as the ship wound her way through islands and into Active Pass, fishing vessels did their best to curtsey. And they did well.

The destroyer moved into Victoria's harbour just before dark. As she came in, suddenly on her port side appeared two Indian long boats, each manned by ten braves. Their flashing paddles turned the water into silver streaks as they kept pace with the royal ship.

This, with the backdrop of Victoria's waterfront, must have given the royal couple one of the great thrills of their trip to Canada. The setting, even with lowering clouds, was almost perfect.

How did the Princess look? Well, she looked like a princess.

How did the Duke look? Like Lt.-Commander P. Mountbatten, R.N.

Part of the answer of that is in the Canadian Navy, and the ship that brought them across the Gulf. "Crusader" was built in Britain and just recently was given to the R.C.N. "for services rendered." She is a fleet-class destroyer, a later edition of those veterans of the 26th Destroyer Flotilla, "Algonquin" and "Sioux."

She had a proud heritage. Philip served aboard one of her class—H.M.S. Wallace—and on Sunday he was quite at ease, down ladders and up them, in here and out there.

A HAPPY GREETING

But, coming into a navy town like Victoria, aboard this ship, he was surprised and perhaps a little baffled, and happy, I suspect. For the captain of the ship, Commander Harold Groos, greeted the Princess and the Duke aboard his vessel with all the traditional "piping" of all navies that have their seeds in the Royal Navy, but he met them as a Canadian and took them to his quarters which, although they had been "done over" for the occasion, were still Canadian.

I have an idea they liked that.

And they travelled with another Canadian — Rear-Admiral Creery, officer commanding the Pacific Coast — whose pennant also flew at the yardarm.

The navy is traditionally reserved. But, in its way, the navy puts on a show that makes a man's heart beat a little faster. Like the frigate standing out of Victoria Harbor—giving way for the Royal ship—and every man along her decks joining hands with the next man, in the kind of salute that you can only get from men at sea.

It was a prelude to Victoria's welcome.

It was good.

Dandurand To Resign Post

MONTREAL, Oct. 22 (CP).—Leo Dandurand said toinght he will resign as president of Montreal's Big Four Football Alouettes at the end of the season.

He added, however, that whether he will remain financially interested in the club, hopelessly bogged in the league cellar, will be announced later.

Dandurand said his brief announcement Sunday night was prompted by reports of his retirement but that, originally, he had intended to make the announcement only at the end of the season.

Dandurand did not comment on a report Saturday which said "there has been a smoldering unrest over player policy among stockholding officials of the club."

Rockland Avenue Throngs Waited Cheerily For First Sight Of Their Princess And Her Consort

Little People On Hand Early

Brownies Scatter Marigolds For Princess As Scouts, Guides Cheer To The Echo

BY AILEEN CAMPBELL

The "young people" had their moment with Royalty Sunday afternoon.

They waited long and eagerly in the cold and rain but the fairytale couple they had read and heard so much about made all the waiting worthwhile.

Three thousand Boy Scouts, Cubs, Rovers, Guides, Brownies and Rangers lined Rockland Avenue from Linden to the great iron gates of Government House. Behind them pressed three times their number in adults and other children.

Some, like the 65 Guides and Brownies from Cordova Bay, were in position at Government House entrance nearly two and a half hours before a Victoria Motorcycle Club troop roared up Rockland to herald the Royal arrival at 5.30.

Flashing red lights of the city police motorcycle corps added to the tension for the little Brownies who quickly doffed coats.

They clutched marigolds and michaelmas daisies in their hands and hopped up and down in anticipation . . . they straightened their ties and pulled at their socks.

A low rumbling roar from farther down Rockland became ever more distinct and broke into a crashing crescendo as the illuminated black Cadillac with its royal passengers appeared in view. It was dusk but the faces of Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip were bathed in light.

"Hooray, hooray . . ." rang out incessantly.

The Brownies threw their flowers, in the Guide colors, as the Princess, herself a former Guide, and the Duke smiled and waved, she with a slight motion of the arm, he with a little freer swing.

WHAT A MOMENT

It was all over in a moment, but what a moment!

"We froze until she came, then when she did we were warm with excitement," said 11-year-old Anne Ganner after it was all over.

Thirteen-year-old Althea Dyer put it this way: "We waited two and a half hours to see her and then saw her for two seconds, but it was worth it."

"They're both a way better looking than their pictures," said Verna Walsh, 12.

"I didn't get a good look at Philip for he always has his hat on," commented Anne Sutton, 12, to her friends, all four of whom are members of the Cordova guides.

The hat she referred to, of course, was the Duke's naval cap.

Along the route every stone wall and every high spot from Cook Street up was thronged with people. Friends hoisted friends atop retaining walls and handed up their umbrellas after them. Others sat on folding chairs on the boulevards.

HOUSES BEDECKED

Flags waved in the breeze from many of the big homes and one Garry oak was girdled with a large Union Jack.

Several feet from Government House entrance, a color party composed of Scouts and Guides dipped the flag as the Royal car passed.

Nearly half the cars in the motorcade carried top officials of the R.C.M.P. and city police.

Guarding the Government House gates were scarlet-coated Mounties, who provided picture subjects for several of the youngsters during the waiting period.

Giant Blade Kills Indians

CASA GRANDE, Ariz., Oct. 22 (UP)—A coroner's inquest will be held today into the deaths of nine Indians who were killed when a bulldozer blade sliced through the truck on which they were riding like a giant scythe.

Eight women and one man were killed Saturday night as they were riding to a tribal celebration.

Two trucks were passing in opposite directions on a narrow bridge when the 3,600-pound tractor blade caught on the bed of a two-ton stake truck carrying 23 Indians to a celebration on the Papgo Reservation.

The blade sliced through the truck, cutting one woman in half and hurling the bodies of the other victims from their truck.

Nine other Indians were injured, including a small boy who suffered a possible concussion.

Highway patrolmen said the women were sitting apart on the side of the truck struck by the blade. Tribal custom requires them to sit apart from their menfolk. Officers said the combined speeds of the trucks gave the blade a force of 60 miles an hour.

DUKE TO HAVE LATEST FISHING EQUIPMENT FOR ISLAND HOLIDAY

If the Duke of Edinburgh doesn't catch any fish on Vancouver Island, it won't be the fault of the provincial government.

The sport-loving Prince has been given a fine fishing rod and every conceivable piece of gear necessary to snag the big ones.

The rod and all the latest equipment—described as a fisherman's dream—were awaiting Prince Philip at Government House.

'GOSH, I FORGET'

Guard Officer Excited At Chat With Princess

By GORDON FORBES

Lieut E. D. (Ted) Robbins of Victoria spoke to the Princess Sunday afternoon but 15 minutes later he was still so excited he had difficulty in recalling the conversation.

Robbins was in charge of the naval guard of honor inspected by Princess Elizabeth at the C.P.R. depot. He walked beside the Princess, and talked to her during the inspection.

Asked how the discussion went, Robbins replied:

"Gosh, fine, but I only remember bits and pieces of it."

He said Her Royal Highness commented on the youth of the guard.

"My, they are young men," she remarked.

Robbins told the Princess most of the men on the guard were "new entries."

"It's a very smart guard," the lieutenant recalled the Royal visitors saying.

"That much I do remember," he grinned.

Princess Elizabeth asked if Robbins was a Victoria boy. He is.

The lieutenant was impressed with the Duke of Edinburgh's remarks.

"The Prince said immediately that it was largely a stoker's guard. He saw that right off the bat," Robbins said.

Asked what he said that made Princess Elizabeth chuckle at one point in the inspection, Robbins replied:

"By golly, I don't remember, but she did sort of laugh didn't she. Now what did I say? I'll have to take time to think back."

Arsonists Attempt To Destroy Factory

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 22 (AP)—After getting called twice to put out fires at a tent manufacturing plant Sunday, firemen decided to stick around. They were wise. Six more blazes broke out during the day. Deputy Fire Chief Hugh Lyon said his men later found a large number of waxey cylinders spread around the building which ignited one after another. Police arson squad began an investigation.

The provincial lands department is studying a forest management license application from William Waldie & Sons Ltd., Castlegar, in the Upper Whatshan Lake drainage area.

Only Disinterested Spectator Attracted Attention Himself

Tony was the only living thing in the vicinity of the C.P.R. wharf Sunday night who appeared distinterested in the arrival of Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh.

But then Tony is used to being a centre of attraction himself—and perhaps it was that he didn't understand why all of a sudden people should stop paying him any attention.

Tony, it should be explained, is a 13-month-old English mastiff who only weighs 160 pounds now but will weigh a lot more when he's fully grown.

Tony had all kinds of people stop and pat him during the hour before the Princess' ship arrived but once the Crusader was in sight, he was ignored.

Looking very sad, Tony just stretched out on the green grass of the Parliament Buildings lawn and refused to show any enthusiasm about the goings-on about him. He did look up a tiny bit, however, when the first of the army's field pieces boomed out a Royal salute.

Tony was taken to the Causeway by his owner, A. W. Parry, of 2617 Belmont Avenue, who explained that since Tony is a show dog, he wants him to get used to crowds.

Social note: Tony was wearing a fitted, bright green, quilted overcoat.

ARRIVES IN TOKYO

TOKYO, Oct. 22 (AP)—Mrs. Anna M. Rosenberg, assistant United States secretary of defense, arrived in Tokyo today for a tour of Japan and Korean armed forces installations. She is expected to be in the far east about 10 days.

Welcoming Indian War Canoe Nearly Capsized By Crusader

One of the Indian canoes which welcomed the Royal ship to Victoria Sunday nearly capsized in the Inner Harbor when it was hit by the wash of H.M.C.S. Crusader and a naval patrol boat.

The destroyer and a naval patrol boat passed the two Indian canoes escorting the warship from the entrance of the harbor just as they neared the C.P.R. dock.

One canoe turned her bow to the waves. The paddlers in the other boat were caught by surprise. A wash hit them broadside. Water poured into the boat. The Indians for a moment lost complete control of their canoe.

It was touch and go whether the canoe would turn over. The boat rocked and bobbed up and down in the heaving water like a cork. The rear paddlers managed just in time to turn the bow of the boat towards the waves.

Counter Milk Sale Hearing On Today

Hearings before the B.C. Milk Board opened in Vancouver today on a Canadian Safeway Ltd. application for permission to sell milk over the counter more cheaply than at home delivery prices.

Victoria and Vancouver would be affected if the application is approved. No specific reduction is being asked.

Coleman's Column

By JIM COLEMAN

NOTES ON A TRAVEL-STAINED SHIRT CUFF: Loyal Winnipeggers refuse to concede that Glenn Dobbs is a better quarterback than their own Indian Jack Jacobs. . . . With many of his best running backs out of commission, Jacobs has relied almost entirely on his own whizzing forward passes. . . . In three games which your correspondent watched in the west, Winnipeg threw a total of 86 passes while trying a total of only 79 ground plays. . . . Winnipeg's reliance on the forward pass irks Scotty Melville of the Regina Post to such an extent that he refers to the Bombers as "The Harlem Globe-Trotters."

All the western teams have been particularly fortunate in their choice of American imports. . . . The western coaches offer some contrast in personalities. . . . Harry "Blackjack" Smith is a mild unassuming fellow whose deportment belies his nickname. . . . Those two old friends, Les Lear and George Trafton, are extroverted tear-em-up boys who are ready to fight at the drop of an adjective. . . . Angus MacStukus is—Well, Stuke is just the same old Stuke who dearly loves to needle an opponent and who can drive hostile crowds to distraction. . . . Smith, a 33-year-old Missourian who was All-American at Southern California, was first contracted by Edgar Petersmeyer, the immensely successful Regina farmer who spent his winters in California. . . . Smith still is bemused by Canadians' fanatical interest in football and he was surprised that he, a johnny-come-lately, should be invited to the Lieutenant-Governor's reception to be presented to Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh.

Coleman

Al Ritchie, one of the most entertaining sports conversationalists in the world, still holding down his seat on Regina's Coffee Row and acting as between-the-halves radio commentator at the football games

Big Leaguers On The West Coast

Huckleberry Welch, the old Hamilton Tiger and Montreal Winged Wheeler now the Regina boss of his firm which furnishes appliances for indoor privies. . . . Over lunch the other day, he was talking of the first time that the east saw the forward pass in a dominion final. . . . It was 1929 when Regina Roughriders travelled to Hamilton to play the Tigers. . . . He still remembers Fritz Sandstrom, with blood streaking his blonde hair, hurling the ball all over the field. . . . And he mentioned that Frank Turville, one of the all-time Argo greats, couldn't get tickets for last year's Grey Cup final.

Montreal Alouettes could use "the ones who got away." . . . This boy Chambers is touted as the rookie of the year with Edmonton and Mickey Maguire, who was water boy for the Alouettes a few years ago, is scampering for long gains in the Regina backfield.

Heard Across The Gridiron Belt

Every football star is a broadcaster out on those plains. . . . Glenn Dobbs has a weekly show in Regina and Tom Casey's program in Winnipeg is required listening for all football filberts. . . . It is reminiscent of the season in which Bob Sandberg wrote a column for a Winnipeg paper while playing for the Bombers. . . . Rival linemen used to rub his nose in printer's ink. . . . Davie West, one of many boys who escaped from Toronto Argos, is the fastest back in the west and brings a smile to Les Lear's care-worn face.

Regina captures the title of "Canada's most enthusiastic football town." . . . They have season tickholders in Swift Current (160 miles) and Weyburn (70 miles). . . . One group flies 700 miles from the north for home games. . . . Johnny Esau and Harvey Dryden run a Quarterback Club which packs 'em in every Sunday night. . . . Amby Moran, once the most boisterous of professional sport figures, doing great reclamation work for Alcoholics Anonymous. . . . Ed Champagne, the big American who broke his neck while playing for Calgary this year, will have the cast removed this week and will be able to play again next year—if his wife approves.

Football Players Are Human, Too

Western football fans collected more than $6,000 for Howard Hanson, the Edmonton player who was seriously injured in the car accident which claimed the life of one of his two sons. . . . Hanson's wife died just before the opening of the football season a year ago. . . Players from rival teams contributed generously to the Hanson fund.

Someone has suggested that two western officials should travel east to work in the eastern Canadian finals while two easterners should travel west to handle the final between the prairie football teams. . . . By the way—does anyone have a couple of spare tickets for the Grey Cup final?

ROUGHRIDERS GET BYE

Western Grid In Tie; Big Four May Follow

A sympathetic populace probably would excuse Edmonton Eskimos and Winnipeg Blue Bomber football players today if they wandered the streets chalking up building fronts with mathematical cabalistic symbols. They know the true value of the points-for-and-against columns in the standings.

The eight-week Western Canada Interprovincial Union schedule closed out Saturday with Saskatchewan Roughriders, Eskimos and Blue Bombers in a three-way point tie with eight victories and six losses for each. Then the statistics took over.

Based on those for-and-against columns, it figured out that the Riders were .10 point better than the Esks who, in turn, had a .19 point advantage over the Bombers. In effect, it means the Roughies get a bye into the best-of-three western finals while Eskimos and Bombers meet in a sudden death semifinal at Edmonton next Saturday.

They had to go right down to the wire to decide the issue. Calgary Stampeders, with no hope of catching a playoff spot, came up off the floor Saturday in the last two minutes to defeat the Eskimos 26-25 and Bombers, two points behind Saskatchewan and Edmonton going into the finale, defeated Roughriders 19-13 in the Manitoba capital.

This complicated situation, plus the elimination of Montreal Alouettes from the two-team Big Four play-off picture, highlighted a full football week-end in eastern and western Canada. And now the Big Four is following the western pattern.

With two games on tap for each club before the schedule windup Nov. 3, Hamilton Tiger-Cats, Toronto Argonauts and Ottawa Rough Riders are locked in a three-way first-place tie. This was accomplished by a double Argo plastering of the Als 35-11 and 35-18 in their home-and-home week-end series and a hard-fought 32-16 decision for Riders over the Ti-Cats.

O.R.F.U.: Sarnia Imperials and Toronto Balmy Beach are certain of places in the two-game total points playoffs Nov. 3 and 10. The Imps took over leadership with a pair of week-end victories—31-13 over McMaster University at Sarnia Saturday, and 29-5 over Windsor Royals at Windsor Sunday.

Balmy Beach, two points in arrears, shut out the Royals 19-0 at Toronto Saturday.

Uplands Win Match

The inter-club team match played over the week-end at Uplands Golf Club resulted in a win for the home team over the Victoria Golf Club squad. Uplands scored 25½ points against 14½ points for the losers.

A return match will be played at the Oak Bay course Oct. 28.

Enough Meat For A Long Winter

There will be meat on the tables of Jim Bailey and Barney Barnes, business and hunting partners, for a long time this winter. Jim and Barney went on a combined vacation and hunting trip in the Bridge Lake district on the Cariboo Highway. The huge spread of moose horns belonged to a five-year-old specimen that went 1,000 pounds on the hoof. It was a tribute to marksmanship that the boys brought the monster down with one shot from a .35 Winchester. The smaller spread is from a 600-pounder. Jim (kneeling) and Barney (right), also shot a couple of coyotes and tracked a bear.

Goals Hard Come By In Close N.H.L. Scramble

Maybe the goalkeeping is getting better or the boys up front haven't caught their shooting eyes, but the National Hockey League is shaping up as a tough circuit in which to get a goal. Apart from Detroit Red Wings' 6-1 decision over their "farmhand" Chicago Black Hawks last week, lopsided scores are a rarity of the 10-day-old schedule.

This was evident during the week-end when the four games produced a total of only 12 goals, including 1-1 draws Sunday in the Toronto Maple Leafs-Chicago and Boston-New York encounters. The results left only three points separating the top and bottom-placed clubs.

Montreal Canadiens were shut out for the first time this season by Detroit, who thus climbed into a two-way leadership tie with them. The Red Wings delighted 12,036 home-town fans Saturday night with a goal-a-period 3-0 triumph.

N.H.L.	W	L	T	F	A	Pts
Detroit	3	1	0	12	4	6
Montreal	3	2	0	12	12	6
Toronto	2	2	1	11	11	5
Chicago	2	2	1	10	13	5
New York	1	2	1	8	9	3
Boston	1	3	1	8	11	3

And New York Rangers came up with their first victory of the season on Saturday, a well-earned 3-2 verdict over the Leafs. The decision and Sunday's tie gave them three points, two less than the Leafs and Chicago.

TWO FOR TEN

The Detroit triumph—Terry Sawchuk's second shutout of the season—gave the Wings some revenge against the club that bounced them out of the playoffs last April. They meet again tonight, the only game on the card.

Rookie John Wilson gave the Wings their 1-0 first-period lead and veteran Sid Abel made it 2-0 early in the middle session while Maurice Richard was serving one of Canadiens' eight penalties. Gordie Howe scored probably the weirdest goal of the season when his 85-foot shot skipped off the ice and slithered past goalkeeper Gerry McNeil.

Joe Kulkay sent Toronto away to a 1-0 first-period lead at Chicago on passes from Jimmy Thomson and Fleming Mackell but Jim Peters with help from Bep Guidolin and George Gee made it 1-1 shortly after the start of the second period. From then on it was a battle of goalkeepers. Toronto's Al Rollins and the Hawks' Harry Lumley kicked out labelled shots.

After a scoreless first period at Boston, Don Raleigh put New York ahead at 6.40 of the second. Ed Sandford, on a pass from former Ranger Pentti Lund evened matters at 2.34 of the third and that was it.

Arrows Score Third Straight Cage Victory

Arrow Furniture's strong senior "B" club rolled to its third straight victory in City Basketball Association play at the Victoria High School gymnasium Saturday night by vanquishing Victoria College, 40-20.

Sparked by Ralph Anderson, Howie Tooby and Angus Stewart, Arrows led 10-8 at the quarter and 26-12 at the half.

Chinese Students trampled Scott & Peden 26-17 in an intermediate "A" men's game and St. Louis College intermediate "B" boys whipped St. Louis College juniors, 29-17, in an exhibition.

Line-ups follow:

St. Louis College (Inter. B boys)—Sleep 4, Hitchcox 6, O'Neil 4, McGhee 8, Clarkson 2, Martin 3, Morrison 4—Total 29.

St. Louis College (junior boys)—Housden 1, Perry 6, Cassidy 10, Longpre, Rittich, Law, Sampson, Nadon, Thomas—Total 17.

Scott & Peden—Davies 2, Windle 1, Jackson 4, Veitch 4, Saunders 2, Burton 2, Sim, Hunter 2, Stokes—Total 17.

Chinese Students—Sam 2, Mar, Eng 2, Derr 6, Wong 4, Nipp 3, Lowe, Strank 9, Lou—Total 26.

Arrow Furniture—Castner 6, Prior 6, Stewart 8, Tooby 8, Davison 4, Anderson 8, Ireland—Total 40.

Victoria College—Chuhaywich 1, Paget 2, McIntosh, Bowden 5, Cregg 4, Rapanos, Smith, Preston, Roth 8—Total 20.

Any other teams interested in entering the association should apply this week. Their applications will be received at a meeting to be held this week.

Entries in the senior B and intermediate A men's leagues will probably be accepted.

HAMILTON, Oct. 21 (CP)—Valdu-Illikas of Montreal Saturday won the six-mile Canadian cross-country running championship, beating a field of 35 in the time of 29 minutes, 28 seconds.

Quakers Roll Over Ironmen, Rockets

Move Into Second-Place Tie With Cats

There are plenty of people around the Pacific Coast Hockey League, including some coaches, who will give you plenty of, say, 8 to 5, that Saskatoon Quakers will be the team to beat.

Looking better every game, Bill Cook's contingent won two week-end games, blanking Tacoma Rockets 1-0 Saturday night and drubbing Seattle Ironmen 6-1 Sunday night.

Admitted, the Ironmen didn't have much calcium in their bones last night, but the Quakers were far from home and playing their fifth game in six nights. Of the five tussles, they lost one, tied one and won three in that order. Not bad for their first road trip to the Coast.

Cy Rouse delivered the only goal of the Saturday game, scoring early in the second period. Lorne Worsley, Saskatoon goalie, kicked out 29 shots for his first shutout and the second in the league this season.

Lucien DeChene of New Westminster has the other.

Last night, the Quakers got away to a 3-0 start in the first period, scoring all three within 77 seconds. They led 5-0 after two periods.

George Senick scored twice for Saskatoon and Chuck McCullough, Johnny Chad, Alex Kaleta and Ab McDougall got the others. Nick Tomiuk counted for Seattle.

The win boosted the Quakers into a second-place tie with Victoria Cougars, two points behind New Westminster. The Cougars have played two games less than Saskatoon.

P.C.H.L.	P	W	L	D	F	A	Pts.
Westminster	9	4	2	3	25	18	11
VICTORIA	5	4	0	1	31	14	9
Saskatoon	7	4	2	1	21	20	9

Calgary	5	2	3	0	14	19	4
Vancouver	8	0	5	3	19	40	3

ROYALS BEATEN

Seattle did better Saturday night, knocking off the Royals 3-1. After Don Slater gave New Westminster the lead in the first period, Jack Jackson tied it up in the second and Stan Maxwell scored the winner in the third. Rudy Filion supplied the clincher.

The league is fairly inactive for the next two nights. Vancouver is at Calgary tonight and at Edmonton tomorrow night.

Trail Setting Torrid Pace In B.C. Puck

The big doings in British Columbia senior amateur hockey during the week-end didn't happen in B.C.

At Spokane, Trail Smoke Eaters whipped the Flyers twice, 2-0 and 9-5, to take an imposing four-point lead in the Western International League.

Bill Ramsden knocked in three goals at Spokane last night in Trail's 9-5 victory. He also picked up one of Trail's two goals Saturday night. Victories were Trail's fourth and fifth.

Nelson Maple Leafs posted their first win by beating Kimberley Dynamiters 5-1 Saturday night.

In the only Okanagan League game, Kamloops Elks took over first place with two victories by defeating Kelowna Packers 4-2 in overtime. Andy Clovechuk sewed it up with goals at 3.43 and 8.44 of the extra session, giving him three for the night.

May Sign Pro Contract Today

Dugger McNeill, husky defenseman of the Cougars, is expected to become a full-fledged professional before nightfall. McNeill, who came to Cougars on a three-game trial basis from Montreal Canadiens, will confer with owner Frank Selke of the Canadiens this afternoon. If he agrees to terms he will remain with Cougars. Centre Dewar Thompson has been returned to the Canadiens.

CARSON SECRETARY

Cain Elected Hoop Prexy

Wilf Cain of Duncan is the new president of the British Columbia Basketball Association.

Cain was voted into office for a two-year term Sunday at the annual general meeting of the B.C. body at Nanaimo. He replaces Harry Chapman, who served as president for five years.

Tommy Carson of Victoria was named treasurer and Jack Gillette of Duncan secretary. Andy Bennie of the Interior will be first vice-president.

The B.C. association this year will have the largest force of officers in its history and a full slate of committees to cover all phases of business.

Thirty-three delegates, representing all basketball interests in the province attended the meeting.

One of the most important functions of the meeting was the establishment of a compulsory mutual aid fund which will go into effect immediately. The fund, which will be incorporated into the constitution, calls for every player in the province to pay a registration fee.

Players from intermediate A upwards will pay a fee of $1 and players below intermediate A will pay 50c. The registration fee will provide a reserve fund of not less than $1,500 which will provide payment of medical fees up to $50 during the 1951-52 season.

Concerning Intercity League, it was announced that the two American teams, Bellingham and Mount Vernon, were definitely withdrawing from the league due to their inability to floor teams that would stand up to the rest of the league. This leaves the league with four teams—one each from Victoria and Alberni and two from Vancouver.

BAKER'S BID APPROVED

The entire B.C. body was unanimous in sending to the Canadian Basketball Association a letter recommending the reinstatement of Norm Baker to amateur status.

Sid Watson, manager of the Victoria Individuals with whom Baker will play if reinstated, was confident that the recommendation would have a strong bearing on the decision of the Canadian body. "I hope that the rest will just be a formality," said Watson this morning. "I think we are over the danger point now as far as Norm is concerned."

One note of discordance was injected into the meeting when delegates of the two Vancouver teams in the Intercity League stated their hesitancy in entering the league because they thought that the Alberni entry would not be strong enough to compete with the other teams. From the island point of view this statement seemed remiss since Alberni was the first team to announce readiness to begin playing.

IRISH SOCCER STAR TO ATTEND UNITED DRILL

Roy Whiston, 24-year-old former Irish soccer star, will report back to Victoria United Thursday night, it has been revealed by United president George Eade.

Whiston, who came to Victoria Saturday to discuss possible terms with United officials, will practice with United before being offered a contract. He has promised not to sign with other clubs in the interim.

Whiston formerly played with the Dublin Bohemians (amateur) and Cork United (professional).

COLLEGE RUGGERS WIN

But There Weren't Nobody There

James Bay Rugby XV took the lid off Pandora's Box Saturday and were soon engulfed in a tide of calamity. They suffered an 8-3 defeat at the hands of a gallant Victoria College crew in a Victoria Rugby Union fixture at Macdonald Park.

Not for one moment was there any doubt in the minds of the few spectators that the collegians deserved to win. From start to finish, they played to win and they played like champions.

The only sad part about the game from the college viewpoint was the fact that they had to play it on the lower field. Thus the few fans who sat in the stands and watched the Crusaders and Wanderers battle it out missed the chance of watching team spirit go to work.

College didn't take the victory calmly, either. They walked off the field cheering and singing and they never stopped singing until they had left the confines of the park.

Playing-coach Keith MacDonald walked off the field with the same look on his face that a little boy gets when he sees a Christmas tree for the first time.

James Bay were unable to explain the defeat at the hands of the school kids. Maybe it was the weather conditions, or maybe it was the gruesome night before. And, if it wasn't the weather conditions or the night before, then perhaps the Crusaders should watch out for the Campus Kids in the future.

The scholars gained their game-winning points on trys by Walt Young, Don Hepburn and Ron Edwards, and a convert by Gary Webster.

On the upper field, Crusaders chalked up another win by defeating Oak Bay Wanderers, 17-8. Crusaders drew first blood on a try by John Shipley, but the Wanderers tied the score and then went ahead on a fine convert by Dick Ellis. Then on a fumble by Bigelow, the Oak Bay squad again went ahead, 8-3.

Just before the end of the first half, Crusaders tied it up on a try by Rowe and a convert by Hicks. What went on from there is history and would rather be kept quiet as far as the Wanderers are concerned.

But on two trys by Gibbs and one by Hicks, the Crusaders bounced all over the field like leopards to claw their way to the final 17-8 margin.

Constable Sets Scoring Mark

Charlie Constable, speedy centre-forward of Esquimalt, stole the Victoria and District Soccer League spotlight over the week-end.

Constable had the biggest day of his life Sunday, scoring six first-half goals, as Esquimalt ran roughshod over a short-handed Alcos team, 10-3, at lower Beacon Hill Park. The six-goal feat in one half is believed to be a local record.

Constable scored at two minutes, 15 minutes, 18 minutes, the third going in off an Alco player, and 22 minutes. At this point Alcos were awarded a free kick and Jack Thompson scored the first Alco goal.

Constable more than made up for this one by getting his fifth and sixth goals at 38 and 43 minutes.

Thursiel of Alcos counted at 44 minutes to leave the half-time score 6-2 for Esquimalt.

In the second half, Gordie Hayward boosted it to 7-2 after two minutes but Johnny Rice caught the net for Alcos' third goal. At the 31-minute mark, Bill Walker scored on a neat passing play for Esquimalt's eighth marker and youngsters Alex Stewart and Tim Walker provided Esquimalt with two more goals in the last two minutes of the game.

SADDLER BUSY

In spite of the high score, the outstanding man on the field was Charlie Saddler, Alcos' goalkeeper, who made some amazing stops from the goal-hungry Esquimalt forwards.

At Athletic Park, Sunday, Legion maintained it's first-place standing by edging a stubborn Heaneys squad 2-1.

Stan Wiseman opened the scoring and put Heaneys into a one-goal lead early in the first half. However John Vezza booted in a pair of markers for Legion to provide his club with a 2-1 lead at the half. There was no further scoring in the second half as both clubs were locked between the half-lines.

RICHARDS OUTLUCKED

A long looping shot by Jimmy Rice which goalie Norm Richards misjudged earned Duncan Native Sons a 1-1 tie with Victoria West in Saturday's league match.

The tying goal came when Richards stepped back into the net while playing Rice's shot.

Until that moment late in the second half Wests had hung grimly to a 1-0 lead and appeared about to upset the powerful up-island squad.

Though Richards' error in judgment allowed Sons to knot the count, it was his stellar play that enabled Wests to hold on as long as they did. The acrobatic netminder was easily the individual star of the match.

Don Burgess scored for Wests when put in the clear by Lionel Speller and George Brown on one of the few West threats.

THE PENALTY FOR BACKFIELD IN MOTION

MONTREAL, Oct. 19, (CP).—Add this to your list of hazards faced by football referees: kids with air guns and accurate shooting eyes.

After West Hill High School rolled to a 16-5 victory over D'Arcy McGee yesterday, officials Frank Ulley and Jim Sims reported someone took pot-shots at them. Ulley was hit on the right hand and leg and Sims in the . . . , well, latter end.

Royal Roads Cadets Keep Unbeaten Mark

Still unbeaten and untied, front and centre, the Royal Roads football team.

The cadets did it again over the week-end, extended their winning streak to four straight and running their points-scored total to 130 by downing a tough Whitneys' squad 29-5 at the Royal Roads field Saturday.

The cadets have two games left in which to maintain their victorious record. Next Saturday they meet Oak Bay Goblins and one week later take on Vampires.

As has been the case in most of the Royal Roads games, it was close in the first half but superior conditioning paid off in the second half.

Royal Roads scored their first major on a third down punt. The Whitney safety man could not find a handle on the bounding ball and C. Seymour scooped the ball up and scored. Cal Sergeant converted to make the score 6-0 for Royal Roads at the end of the quarter.

The jewellers struck back quickly with an electrifying touchdown. Barry Caviness took over the safety position and caught a high punt on his own 10-yard line.

90-YARD GALLOP

Twisting, pivoting and reversing his field, he ran 90 yards through the entire cadet team for the longest scoring run of the season. The convert was low and Royal Roads led by one point at the end of the first half.

Head coach Ivan Edwards must have spoken many words to his Royal Roads team because they came out in the third quarter and rolled to three converted touchdowns. M. Rich, J. Standen and K. Hoffer scored the majors and H. Price converted all three.

K. Hoffer scored on a smart end run in the last quarter for Royal Roads to bring the final score to 29-5.

RATTERMAN TO QUIT ALS

MONTREAL, Oct. 21, (CP)—George Ratterman, who caused a furore in international football circles by leaving New York Yankees to play with Montreal Alouettes, won't be back next year.

This was announced tonight by Joe Ryan, an Alouette director, who said Ratterman, starry quarterback, was "leaving on his own accord."

Ryan said Ratterman had come to club officials before Saturday's game in Toronto and told them he felt he had let the club down.

He said he didn't know what had happened but apparently he wasn't able to adapt himself to the Canadian game and wasn't sure he could do it next year, either.

Bigelow Cops Oak Bay Title

Dr. George Bigelow rallied on the second 18 holes to win the recent final of the Victoria Golf Club men's championship from Alan Taylor, 1 up.

Two down to Taylor at the close of the first round, Bigelow won three straight holes. Taylor squared the match for the final time at the 29th but Bigelow's birdie on the 33rd proved the deciding factor.

Each is a four-time winner of the championship.

Clippers In Second Win

Nanaimo Clippers Saturday defeated Kerrisdale Monarchs, 3-1, for their second straight victory in the newly-organized Pacific Coast Senior Amateur Hockey League. Monarchs were victims both times.

HUSKIES TRIPPED

Cal Bows To U.S.C. In Major Grid Upset

NEW YORK, Oct. 21 (AP)—California, the No. 1 team in the United States, fell before the sledge-hammer second half blows of Southern California, Saturday, 21-14, for its first regular-season defeat in four years—but Tennessee and Michigan State, No. 2 and 3, respectively, remained unbeaten.

California was ahead 14-0 at the half and seemingly on its way to another easy victory. But the Trojans, shooting for a Rose Bowl bid, made one score in the third period, and two more in the final for the ball game, before an awed crowd of about 81,000, largest of the day.

Tennessee had a good workout at the expense of Alabama, one of the big Southeastern Conference disappointments, and won 27-13.

Michigan State had to come from behind to pull out a 32-21 verdict over Penn State. It was the Spartans' fifth triumph in a row.

Illinois, nipped Washington 27-20; Princeton slaughtered Lafayette 60-7 for its 17th straight, and Baylor stopped Texas Tech, 40-20.

LOU BOUDREAU BOSOX MANAGER

BOSTON, Oct. 22 (AP)—The Red Sox appointed a new manager today—Lou Boudreau, who joined the Sox last Spring after his release as Cleveland manager. He succeeds Steve O'Neill.

Boudreau, 34, was signed to a two-year contract.

O'Neill, who was a coach at Cleveland when Boudreau led the Indians to the world baseball championship in 1948, will continue in the Sox organization's farm system, it was announced.

RACEHORSE FOR ASKING; GOOD HOME ONLY 'MUST'

ASCOT, Eng., Oct. 22 (Reuters).—Anybody want a prize racehorse? Horsebreeder Sir William Waldron wants to give away 20-year-old Tiberius, winner of the famed Ascot Gold Cup in 1935. At his prime Tiberius was worth about $15,000.

Tiberius was retired to stud after his 1935 victory. Now his owner wants to get rid of him "because I know he would be happier at a small stud." Sir William added he would like to be allowed to send a couple of mares to Tiberius each year."

"But if no small stud owner wants him, then I will consider giving him away to someone who can provide him with a good home," said Sir Waldron. "As long as he goes to a good home I don't want a penny piece for him."

The breeder said he estimated Tiberius was still worth about $3,000.

Logger Jack MacDonald Fells Chief Thunderbird

Logger Jack MacDonald called "Timber," and knocked the pins out from under Chief Thunderbird at the Bay Street Armoury Saturday night. The wrestling chief, who went into the ring looking for his second scalp in two weeks, didn't even get the chance to take the fuzz off the blanket he was carrying.

The Oregon woodsman showed the fans and Thunderbird that he was no slouch. He took the first fall when he pinned the red-blooded Indian to the mat by literally laying on him.

Of course, minutes previous to the fall, the big Chief had been pounded senseless by a fistic battery.

Logger Jack was well on his way to winning the second fall by standing on the Indian's head, when quicker than Nick Harris could say "Geshundheit" on a rainy day, the Oregonian was in the unfortunate grips of the Indian death-lock.

Although both wrestlers had to be parted by their handlers, MacDonald willingly gave the fall to Thunderbird.

In the last round, Logger Jack began gounging eyes, using fist, and kicking, and after approximately five minutes of this child's play, floored Thunderbird to the count of three. One second after the third count, the logger and the Injun were mated once again in the death-lock. This time, Logger Jack was in no hurry to get untangled, for he knew he had won the bout.

Dr. Gallagher performed a successful operation on the unfortunate Frenchie Roy of Montreal in the semi-main event.

In the special event, George Gallagher, the good doctor's little brother, fought to a draw with Vancouver's Cal Roberts.

The local bout introduced Cecil Warsnop to the fans. That bout was also fought to a draw, but Warsnop kept the crowd interested by practicing some new holds on opponent Roy Speller.

Scots Suffer Loss Of Face

Accept Defeat Badly; United Still Unbeaten

United 4, St. Andrews 2

"That's the worst St. Andrews team I have ever played against," goalie Joe Travis of Victoria United said Saturday afternoon following United's 4-2 victory over the Scots at Athletic Park.

Travis wasn't being critical, either. St. Andrews, with its line-up augmented by juvenile players, looked less like the Scots of old than last year's ham bone and the final score was hardly an indication of the tremendous margin enjoyed by United in their fifth game without defeat.

With the first round of the Pacific Coast Soccer League schedule now completed, United can look back on three victories and two ties as a commendable record against the other five teams. The runner-up North Shore Reds, who tasted their only defeat in the season's curtain raiser here, will be back this week in a game which ranks as the most important of the season for United.

North Shore, who defeated Firefighters, 4-1, Saturday for their third straight triumph, are currently only two points behind United and have a game in hand.

In Saturday's other action, New Westminster dropped its fourth game, this time to Vancouver City, 2-0. It was City's first win.

MILLIGAN IN FORM

United playing coach Wally Milligan was the star of the game as he scored two goals, assisted on a third and was in on the play for the forth.

However, Milligan's task was made easier by the improved work of the United machine as a whole. And if it hadn't been for goalie Bob Newbold of St. Andrews, the score could quite conceivably have reached double figures.

Milligan got the first goal at 18 minutes with Cedric Robb and Ab Travis making a picture pattern play to set up the centre-forward.

Travis flubbed a great chance with the ball only a foot from the line and Newbold on the ground before George Keeley tied the count for St. Andrews. But the left winger made amends before the period ended to bang Denny McGee's rebound home and give United a 2-1 margin.

Newbold was particularly impressive in the opening 45 minutes as he cheated Milligan, Robb and McGee out of almost certain markers. Erratic shooting by United spoiled otherwise near flawless work of the local forwards.

Milligan's second goal was a beautiful individual performance as he left the St. Andrew's defense and Newbold truly beaten on the play. Travis got his second on a goal-mouth pass from Milligan and had nothing more to do than push the ball across the line.

Johnny Webber completed the scoring from an all-out scramble in front of the United Goal.

St. Andrews were by no means pleased with the result or the refereeing of Ed Ball and took the defeat in poor taste.

Elizabeth's Smile Is 'One In A Million

By AILEEN CAMPBELL

They say she does not smile often enough—but when she does, it's one in a million!

"Princess Elizabeth . . . what is she like?" that is the most oft-heard question in Victoria today.

Since no one, with the possible exception of her intimate friends, ever gets to know a future queen, until she is history, that query is unanswerable. How she appears at the reasonably close range permitted photographers and reporters is another matter.

At Vancouver I was the regulation 15 feet—and sometimes a bit less when enthusiasm got the better of me—away from the Royal couple as they were received in the big C.P.R. station and again as they stood at the reviewing station on Cordova Street.

Contrary to stories from the east, the Princess did not appear tour-weary.

She was slimmer than pictures indicate . . . more stylishly gowned than any photographs taken in England up to a few months ago, reveal . . . her manner pleasing.

She greets officials with simplicity and dignity. But she definitely does not look like the type of person who would enjoy hockey, box lacrosse or a hot dog feast at an exhibition.

. . . Not mind you, that we want to upset Canada's national game—lacrosse that is.

At Vancouver Prince Philip smiled easily and often . . . the Princess infrequently but when she did, she revealed teeth that Hollywood would envy and a "charm" that has been written about around the world.

To those who actually meet her, "charm" is their universal word.

But this most talked-of, written-of and photographed girl in the world has much of the solemn bearing in crowds which marked the King in the early days of his reign. Not for her is the Queen's quick and frequent smile.

This radiant smile was caught at Winnipeg.

On first meeting the dignitaries at Vancouver, she shook hands pleasantly with but a slight smile . . . later waiting for the royal car she flashed wide and vivacious smiles as she chatted with Lt.-Gov. Clarence Wallace and Mrs. Wallace and Premier Byron Johnson and Mrs. Johnson.

When she took her place in the car, she looked to neither side of the cheering multitude, while her sailor husband grinned in friendly fashion and waved.

"She didn't wave or smile," said one disappointed clerk in the Hudson's Bay Co. basement, as she told a friend about her spot on the crowded streets.

But to a handful of people on the steps of a Burrard Street house that same evening on the return from U.B.C., she waved gaily and smiled broadly.

Smiling does not come easily and the Princess apparently does not force it, making it all the more sincere and warming when she does.

After their journey up Rockland Avenue Sunday there was a faint furrow on her forehead as the Princess gave a last handwave to the children at Government House gates.

Both the royal couple have won affection across the land, but whether smiling or not, the Princess is still the cynosure of all eyes.

Said one young Vancouver business girl.

"I saw them twice . . . first time I concentrated on the Princess and the second time I intended to concentrate on Philip, but somehow it was the Princess I looked at again. . . . Mind you, I don't understand the psychology of it!"

World Merchantmen Will Exceed Total Of Pre-War Fleets

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21 (AP)—The world's ocean-going merchant marine is building up to a fleet 29.4 per cent larger than it was just before the Second World War.

The National Federation of American Shipping, reporting this Sunday, said that 15,300,000 deadweight tons of shipping are under construction or on order throughout the world's shipyards. Upon completion, the world merchant marine will total 102,500,000 deadweight tons.

Counting present ships and those building and on order, the tonnage figures include: United Kingdom 27,394,000 and United States 16,034,000.

PHONED FELICITATIONS— BUT ROYAL LINE IS BUSY

Princess Elizabeth wasn't taking any phone calls after her arrival here Sunday.

Mrs. Lillian McCaig, 313 Cadillac Avenue, found that out.

Mrs. McCaig was unable to get to see the arrival so she phoned Government House at about 6.30 in the evening to tell Her Royal Highness how pleased she was to have her and the Duke of Edinburgh in Victoria.

A woman answered and told Mrs. McCaig the Princess couldn't come to the phone. She asked why not, but was told that Her Royal Highness wasn't coming to the phone.

"I only wanted to welcome the Princess," Mrs. McCaig said.

FRONT SPOTS WENT TO CITY'S CHILDREN

Police Helped To See That Youngsters Got Best Possible Glimpse Of Couple

By DICK PRAUL

The sight of youngsters waving Union Jacks brought warm smiles from Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip along the crowded streets of the city Sunday.

At Fort and Douglas Streets, the point closest to the heart of the city they touched en route to Government House, there was a sea of flags in the hands of tots.

As requested by police officials, the crowds of adults made way for the little ones, and despite the fact the curbs were lined five and six deep, nearly everyone got a good view.

In the last hour of waiting, the crowd was entertained by the Canadian Scottish brass and pipe bands and army units, which marched down Fort Street to the intersection.

City police and the colorful "Mounties" were not needed to keep the crowds from the narrow lane through which the Royal car was to pass.

But, as if to provide every protection against a possibly overly-demonstrative crowd, authorities also posted soldiers every few paces and hundreds of medal-wearing veterans along the main thoroughfares.

WARM RECEPTION

A warm, if not noisy reception was given the Royal couple when their transparent-topped car finally arrived.

As the car rolled up Fort Street, hundreds followed it along the street. But the remaining thousands stood where they had been, as if entranced by what they had seen.

Were they transfixed by the sight of the brave, smiling and lovely Princess? They seemed so. They seemed like the little Girl Guide, who after the car had passed, murmured in an awed tone to her chum:

"Gosh, I forgot to look at HIM!"

Three Canadians Win Photo Awards

The Thunderbird Crest award, top honor of the Victoria Camera Club in the club's international salon of black and white prints, has gone to three Canadians—Rex Frost, Toronto; Hugh Frith, Vancouver, and Alfred Blyth, Edmonton.

Entries from France, Austria, England and the U.S. also won the crests.

Results of judging of the transparencies have not been released.

Burn Kiddies As Punishment

ANAHEIM, Calif. Oct. 22 (UP)—Two women officials of an orphanage school will be arraigned today for allegedly burning the hands of three young boy inmates to discipline them.

The women, Mrs. Julia Elizabeth Ward, 46, wife of the school's head, the Rev. Tilford T. Ward, and Mrs. Carolyn J. Munger, 25, were held in Orange County jail under $2,000 bond each pending their arraignment before Justice of the Peace John Shea.

Deputy District Attorney Kenneth Williams said they would be charged with unjustifiable and cruel and inhumane punishment.

The women are accused of disciplining Leonard Vuckan, Richard Carpenter and Richard Turner, all eight years old, by blistering their hands and wrists with matches because they were "playing with fire."

Mrs. Ward and Mrs. Munger said they "prayed that the fire from the burns" would teach the boys not to play with matches.

Doctors said the boys suffered some third-degree burns and bore blisters "as big as silver dollars."

Hearing Aid Stirs Wave of Enthusiasm

Compact Electronic Unit Without Dangling Cords Hailed in Six Clinics

NEW YORK: After a series of "sneak" previews in six hearing clinics throughout the Metropolitan area, tabulated reports of hearing experts working in the Acousticon Public Education Department reveal a spontaneous acceptance of a new and revolutionary scientific development for the hard of hearing.

No longer is it necessary to wear a tell-tale cord dangling from the ear. The new Acousticon has no box, nothing of any kind to hide in the clothes. On most women, it cannot be seen. The wearer is free both from cords and clothing noise. Using the telephone is a natural function.

A woman can wear even a strapless gown or swim suit without revealing the fact that she is hard of hearing. Because of the way it is worn, it assures clear, effortless hearing — in fact, better hearing than with any conventional hearing aid known.

This amazing new development may be seen and tried without cost or obligation at Acousticon, c/o Modern Pharmacy, 1327 Douglas Street, Victoria; or, a FREE illustrated booklet will be sent by writing the above address.

'SHE'S LOVELY'

Seamen Revere Their Princess

By HUMPHRY DAVY

I was among a small group of newspapermen, seamen, soldiers and police officers who got the first glimpse of Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip in Victoria.

We were allowed a position on the C.P.R. dock near where the gangplank was put ashore.

As the destroyer Crusader approached her berth, two Indian war canoes slid alongside in miniature escort. They provided the only color on the dark, slate-colored water, the crews in bright shirts and headbands with feathers.

The Princess and the Duke stood together on B gun deck of the Navy ship at the docking.

OUT OF PLACE

The "Sweetheart of the Empire" appeared small and out-of-place standing on the cold, grey deck of the fighting ship.

The delicate and lovely features of her face stood out against the background of the ship's armour.

She appeared to be wrapt in thought—perhaps of home.

There was a trace of sadness in her eyes.

"She's lovely," gasped an able seaman beside me.

She was lovely standing there.

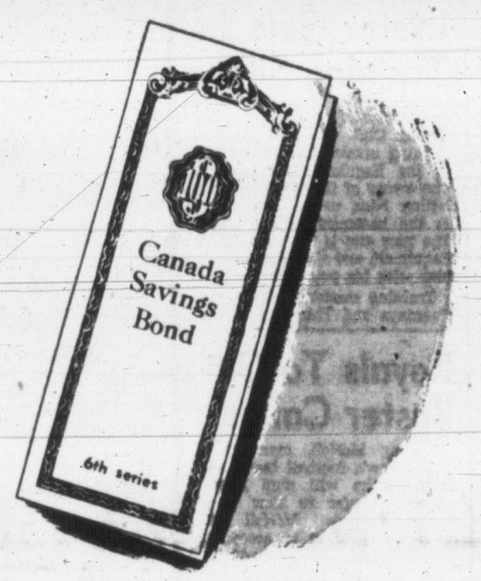
No other bond like it anywhere...



WHY?

BECAUSE IT CAN ALWAYS BE CASHED AT FULL FACE VALUE PLUS INTEREST.

There is no other security which offers this unique feature. All other bonds which Canadians can buy are subject to market quotations from day to day. The price at which they can be sold is the price someone else is willing to pay. But Canada Savings Bonds can be cashed for 100 cents on the dollar anytime without delay.

In addition, they pay a handsome return (averaging 3.21% per year if the bond is held to maturity).

They are registered in your name, offering you protection in case of loss or destruction.

They are backed by all the wealth and resources of our country. There is no argument—the man who owns a Canada Savings Bond has made the finest investment available today. If you have not made your arrangements yet to take advantage of this opportunity, see your investment dealer or bank without delay. Or ask about the Payroll Savings Plan where you work.

U.S. Newspaperwoman Excited Observer Here

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Busiest person Sunday in the spot reserved for press and photographers at the C.P.R. depot was Miss Gwladys Bowen, social editor of the Portland Oregonian.

She was in the city on a roving assignment for her paper, to get personality stories and pictures of the Royal visit.

Heavy set, with short cut, greying hair, and wearing a black wool coat and mannish hat, Miss Bowen was carrying two cameras, a bag of flash bulbs and a pencil and notebook.

She took pictures of the crowd, the Royal guard of honor, the Royal standard, the Mounties, and anything else that caught her fancy.

She asked questions—and she got answers, too. Her pencil was just as busy as her camera.

"We're as interested in your Princess and her Duke (she pronounced it "dook") as you are," she said with a wide grin.

"That's why I'm up here."

Her ears caught the marching tune of the R.C.N. band, leading the Royal guard of honor along Belleville Street. And her eyes twinkled excitedly.

"I wouldn't have missed it for anything," she said wholeheartedly.

"I was here 12 years ago when your King and Queen visited Victoria. I saw the Royal colors presented out at Beacon Hill at that time. And I've waited to see those same colors dipped to welcome another Royal generation.

"That's the real reason I'm here."

Hilltops In Fourth Win

REGINA, Oct. 21 (CP)—Saskatoon Hilltops breezed to their fourth Saskatchewan junior football championship in five years when they trounced Regina Bombers 20-2 Saturday in the second game of a two-game, total-point final. Saskatoon won the opener in Saskatoon, 23-12.

Stskatoon now meets the Manitoba champions in the western semi-final.

JUNIOR FINAL SQUARED

EDMONTON, Oct. 21 (CP)—Edmonton Maple Leafs defeated Calgary Bronks 13-6 today to deadlock the Alberta junior football finals. Third game of the best-of-three series will be played next Sunday in Edmonton. Calgary won the first game 22-13 in Calgary a week ago.

LANGFORD CLUB TO MEET

LANGFORD—Annual meeting of Langford Community Club will take place Wednesday at 8 p.m. at Langford Community Hall, Island Highway.

RAINBOW MADE HALO AROUND HEAD OF BEAUTIFUL PRINCESS

"It was just like a halo for our Princess."

That was the observation of Mrs. Cecil Clifford, 950 Market Street, as she watched with fascination the rainbow that appeared over the Empress Hotel as the warship bearing the royal couple slid into the Inner Harbor.

"It was really a beautiful sight the way the sunset suddenly burst forth to form the rainbow—a beautiful tribute to our beautiful Princess," Mrs. Clifford said.

She was in the Belleville crowd with her children, Ronnie, aged 2, and Beverley, 6, and Mrs. Eethel Mobey.

Crowds Throng Beacon Hill For First Sight Of Ships

"They're she comes, dad, look, look . . . !

And as the destroyer Crusader emerged through the dull grey mist and fine rain off Discovery Island, the excited cry that went to the lips of 10-year-old David Taylor was repeated a 1,000 times over from Ten-Mile Point to the outer wharf.

It was Victoria's first welcome to her future queen and consort.

As the destroyer hove into view with escort ships H.M.C.S. Antigonish and Sault St. Marie, at about 4 in the afternoon, the dull clouds parted momentarily to hint of the rainbow that was to brighten the arrival of Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh, an hour later in the inner harbor.

High on the rocky cliffs of Gonzales Hill, David and his father, Howard, watched the ships come in.

No first sunny Sunday of spring ever brought out more sightseers to marine drive. A continuous stream of cars, many laden with children travelled the route to follow the ship's progress.

One couple sat for over an hour out on the farthest point of Gohzales, damp wind and all . . . atop the observation tower on the heights, stood a woman and young child . . . people everywhere scanned the water with binoculars.

By 3.15 Beacon Hill Park's lower lookout was filled with cars. By 4.15 every street corner on the Royal route was packed with men, women and children.

Lyster Gets Training Site

Nick Lyster of the Esquimalt Boxing Club will hold his first training session in his new hall at the Esquimalt Bowladrome. The owner of the bowladrome is letting Nick use a large room in the basement of the alleys. The new site is well centred in Esquimalt, and should prove popular with his youngsters.

Training sessions will be held Tuesdays and Thursday at 7.30.

Royals To Get Buster Cairns

Tommy McNeil, manager of St. Andrew's football team, said Saturday he will sign Buster Cairns' transfer to New Westminster Royals. McNeil had previously refused to accede to Cairns' request for a transfer.

It was also announced that Roy Dixon, former Vancouver City netminder, had been added to the Scots' roster.

It Was A Good Show—But Where Was His Daddy?

By DAVE STOCK

The tiny, serious-faced little fellow in the green raincoat and matching sou'wester thought the arrival of Princess Elizabeth was just fun.

He hadn't been able to see very well until he was swung up on this reporter's shoulder, but then he confided he was much impressed by the navy's smart guard, by the army's tin-helmeted soldiers and by the red-coated Mounties.

An he came right out finally and said he liked the Princess very much, too. But gosh, gee, dad wasn't there.

He was sure he would be—but he couldn't see him.

"I see the Princess," he exclaimed, as he scanned the C.P.R. ramp, "but I wonder when my daddy's coming off."

Like most other youngsters the little fellow was fascinated by the naval guard.

"Those boys," he pointed out, "look like sailor boys."

Although he was a little frightened at first by the noise of the soldiers' guns, he afforded them a compliment, too.

"They made lots of smoke," he told his mother as the firing came to an end.

If only dad had been around, it might have been a perfect day.

"I'd sure like to see my daddy," he said, as he gazed longingly across the Causeway at the ship only partly visible behind the C.P.R. wharf buildings. "I want to get up on that bridge. He said one day he'd take me."

"This daddy of yours" we wondered out loud, "must be an important fellow. Is he a policeman?"

"No," said mommy, softly, but not a little proudly, "Daddy is Cmdr. Charles Groos, captain of the Crusader."

I wonder if young Charles, when daddy takes him up on that bridge, would invite an old marine-type reporter to come along?

Requests Prayers For Catholic Youth

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (AP)—Francis Cardinal Spellman in a broadcast Sunday urged 6,000,000 members of the Roman Catholic youth organization to offer daily prayers this week for Catholic youth behind the iron curtain. He spoke over the CBS network in a program launching Catholic youth organization week. The Cardinal asked his hearers to pledge themselves to God and their country.

Thieves Snatch Gear From Parked Motors

Two citizens reported thefts of articles from their cars over the week-end.

A tire and wheel were stolen from the rear luggage compartment of a car owned by J. Petne, 1463 May Street.

R. Lyall, 777 Blanshard Street, reported someone pried open his car door and stole a pair of sun glasses. There were also jimmy marks on the kitchen door of his house.

A cost of living bonus of one cent per hour for one and one-third points advance in the Dominion Government Cost of Living Index has also been offered retroactive to July 1.

A direct quotation from the Board of Conciliation Report:

From statements made to the Board it would appear that the scale of wages paid under these agreements is the highest in Canada in the brewing industry, while other allowances and working conditions are most favorable; these latter include: (a) Closed Shop; (b) Check-off; (c) 5-day 40-hour week; (d) Night differential of 5c per hour, payable between 5 p.m. and 8 a.m.; (e) Nine statutory holidays with pay; (f) Annual vacation—for service over one year, two weeks per year with full pay. For service over 15 years, three weeks with full pay; (g) Social Security—$1,000 life insurance for each employee Medical Services Association, group sickness and accident coverage, weekly indemnity of $20.00. The cost of this protection is borne equally between the company and the employees; (h) Year-end bonus (payment of which is not however, obligatory by the company).

The social services quoted in the Conciliation Board Report cost the companies 27.24c per man hour in addition to the direct wages offered. This means that the lowest paid worker would receive wages and benefits amounting to $1.8287 per hour.

The facts are that the lowest paid employee of these companies would receive a higher wage than in any comparable category of employment in British Columbia industry or any brewery in Canada.

Resumption Of Cease-Fire Talks Seen For Tuesday

MUNSAN, Korea, Oct. 23 (Tuesday) (AP) — Everything was set today to resume Korean truce talks as soon as Communist negotiators ratify a security agreement.

Allied and Communist liaison officers completed the pact Monday, detailing ground rules for renewing armistice negotiations after a two-month break. The United Nations command promptly ratified it and called on the Reds to reopen talks "without further delay."

The Reds didn't answer Monday.

Brig.-Gen. William P. Nuckols, U.N. command spokesman, said if the Red answer is received Tuesday morning a full-scale negotiation session may be called for the afternoon.

The general view in this Allied peace camp was that truce talks will be under way again by Wednesday, at the latest.

Meanwhile United States tanks rumbled into flaming Kumsong today for the second time in three days as Chinese retreated before advancing Allied infantrymen.

For four hours the tanks shot up the former Communist stronghold on the central front. Then they lumbered back through mud and heavy mortar fire to their own lines.

Allied infantrymen, striking out of the fog, overran two hill masses including the highest yet taken on the 15-mile Kumsong front.

The Reds put up a hot fight on one ridgeline for a little while. Then they withdrew, and the United Nations infantrymen advanced unopposed through the mud.

Despite the soggy going, the advance was so rapid engineers had a hard time keeping up with the infantrymen.

Forty-two Chinese didn't bother to retreat. They surrendered.

A front-line officer estimated Red casualties in the 10-day offensive would exceed 15,000.

Nevada Atom Blast Neither Felt Nor Seen

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Oct. 22. (AP)—The Atomic Energy Commission announced that it set off a nuclear explosion at its Yucca Flat test site shortly after 6 a.m. P.S.T. today. It was not visible nor was it felt in Las Vegas, 75 miles away.

It was the sixth atomic blast in Nevada. Five others were set off at the A.E.C. proving ground near here last winter.

An A.E.C. spokesman confirmed that the shot was made from the top of a 100-foot steel tower, similar to the structures used in the original A-bomb blast at Alamagordo, N.M., in 1945 and also later at Eniwetok in the Pacific.

The absence of any flash would seem to confirm speculation that the A.E.C. has developed a similar nuclear weapon. Speculation on such weapons has included artillery-type shells and guided missiles with atomic warheads.

This, however, was a stationary or fixed-point detonation and would indicate that the atomic scientists have developed what might be termed a baby A-bomb.

Joe, Dom Both Hit For Route

TOKYO, Oct. 21 (AP)—The DiMaggio brothers, Joe and Dom, hit home runs today and led the touring American baseball all-stars to an 11-0 victory over the Mainichi Orions.

Dom DiMaggio hit a two-run homer in the fourth inning and Joe clouted his in the Americans' sixth inning. Bob Schantz also hit a homer, good for two runs, in the sixth.

BRITISH SEEK COMPENSATION IN IRAN CASE

TEHRAN (AP)—Iran, it was learned reliably today, has asked the last remaining British oil representative in Tehran to start negotiating compensation for the nationalized Anglo-Iranian Oil Company or get out of Iran.

A finance ministry official was reported to have handed the request Sunday to Richard Seddon, resident manager of the A.I.O.C. whose wells and refinery in Iran have been nationalized by the Iranian government.

Meanwhile, Iran handed a protest note to the British Embassy Sunday accusing Britain of a warlike act in confiscating a shipment of sugar en route to Iran.

It was the third such note in the last week.

Rule Provinces Can't Control Highways

OTTAWA (CP)—The Supreme Court of Canada today unanimously ruled that provinces cannot constitutionally control inter-provincial and international highway traffic.

The judgment, upsetting a New Brunswick Supreme Court decision, virtually assured the federal government that it now may obtain exclusive control over the growing traffic between provinces and between Canada and the United States.

In particular, the court found that New Brunswick had no right or power to prevent MacKenzie Coach Lines of Lewiston, Me., from picking up or dropping off bus passengers at New Brunswick points on its route from Boston to Halifax and Glace Bay, N.S.

Since court action in the case was launched before the end of 1949, the decision of the Supreme Court of Canada may be appealed by the province to the judicial committee of the Imperial Privy Council.

The issue has been a long time in dispute, with the provinces claiming that motor truck, bus-line and other forms of highway traffic are a matter for provincial jurisdiction and that the federal government cannot interfere. The federal government claimed that such jurisdiction rightly belongs to Ottawa.

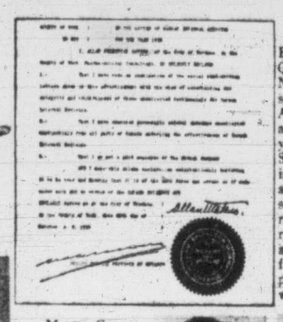
SWORN PROOF SARNAK RELIEVES THOUSANDS



Mrs. May H. Bell, Liverpool, Queen's Co., N.S., writes—"I suffered with Arthritic pain for almost three years but last Spring the pain in my shoulder, arms, fingers and ankles became so intense that I started to try different kinds of remedy. Nothing seemed to give me relief. A friend told me about Sarnak and I have taken eight bottles so far for it is just wonderful the way my pain is relieved and I wouldn't be without Sarnak in the house."

Mrs. Phil Annweiler, 225 Avenue E. South, Saskatoon, Sask., writes—"For the last fifteen years I have suffered greatly with Rheumatic pain and pain rising from a Gall Bladder condition. Although I have taken many forms of analgesic, nothing I took seemed to help me. Just recently I read about Sarnak and bought my first bottle. I am thankful to say that Sarnak has been a great help to me right from the very first. It relieves my pain as nothing else I have taken and I am going to continue taking it and I advise anyone suffering as I did to try Sarnak."

Mrs. George Weston, Selkirk, Man., writes—"I must thank you for what Sarnak has done for me. I am now starting my fifth bottle. I have suffered with the pain of Varicose Veins for a long time and Sarnak certainly has relieved my pain and made me feel so much more alive and active. The pain was so bad that I was unable to do my housework but since I started taking Sarnak I am able to get about my work as usual."

Mr. M. R. Sereda of Beaverdale, Saskatchewan, writes — "For quite some time I suffered with Neuritic and Arthritic pains in my left leg and shoulder. I couldn't move my leg or walk during my last attack for the pain. I started taking Sarnak and after my first bottle the pain was relieved and I can now get around and do some work. I am going to continue with Sarnak for I know it will continue to be a great help."

Parade Colors Were Presented By King

Officer-In Charge Of Princess' Guard Was Ordinary Seaman In 1939 Guard

By GORDON FORBES

The King's Color paraded at the C.P.R. Dock on the arrival of Their Royal Highnesses Sunday, was the same one presented to the Royal Canadian Navy by Princess Elizabeth's father, King George VI, during the Royal visit of 1939.

The color was "shown" in a special ceremony before the arrival of the Royal couple.

After the Royal Guard was drawn up on Belleville Street awaiting their arrival, the Color Guard and Color Escort Party marched in the King's Color.

When showing the Color, the Color Guard and escort slow-marched between ranks of the Royal Guard, returning to their position in front of, and midway between the right and left sections of the guard.

When the Color was presented 12 years ago it was the first time a reigning monarch had presented his Color to any Commonwealth Service on its own soil.

During the 1939 ceremony Lieut.-Cmdr. E. P. Tisdall, R.C.N., was officer-in-charge of the Royal Guard. He is now Capt. Tisdall and commanding officer of the cruiser H.M.C.S. Ontario, which will carry the Royal couple to Sydney, N.S., and St. John's, Newfoundland, later in the tour.

Also in the Royal Guard of that year was OD. E. D. Robbins of Victoria, who, on Sunday, as Lieut. Robbins, was officer-in-charge of the guard for Princess Elizabeth. The Color Officer in 1939 was Lieut. J. C. Hibbard, now Commodore Hibbard, chief of naval personnel at naval headquarters.

Color Officer in Sunday's ceremonial was Lieut. C. E. M. Leighton. C.P.O. William Kelly, P.O. Harold Penny and Leading Seaman Robert Robertson comprised the Escort.

The Royal Guard was trained by Commissioned Gunner E. A. MacFayden, who was Petty Officer MacFayden in the Royal Guard in 1939.

Tug Blew First Note Of Welcome

By BILL HOLLAND

A whistle from a deep-sea salvage tug in the Inner Harbor brought a stir among the crowds awaiting the arrival of Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip Sunday on Douglas Street behind the Empress Hotel.

The Inner Harbor view blocked, there was no visible means of telling how much longer the wait would be.

But when the Salvage Queen let go her blast of welcome everyone knew the time was close at hand.

Minutes later the 21-gun salute by the Royal Canadian Artillery confirmed the story the tug had told and a few of the spectators "broke ranks," not able to stand the suspense any longer.

Pushing through the crowds, lining the curbs and covering most of the sidewalks, they ran toward Belleville Street to get an earlier view.

Most were disappointed. Belleville was even more crowded.

The sight of "hawkers" selling souvenir Royal visit programs and flags on the streets brought thoughts of May 24 parades.

But no Victoria Day celebration ever drew such mobs of people.

Thieves Lay Off For Royal Visit

VANCOUVER Oct. 21 (CP)—Thieves decided to leave Royal Visit crowds alone here during the week-end—or almost.

Only two thefts were reported to police by persons who saw Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip.

A purse containing $50 was stolen from a woman and a wallet containing $5 was stolen from a man.

Rock Slides Cover Italian Village

ROME, Oct. 22 (Reuters)—Masses of rock and earth tumbling down a mountain pass in Sardinia have swallowed part of the village of Osini and today threatened to bury the rest.

Its 1,500 inhabitants fled from their homes Sunday and spent the night on the open mountainside. Torrential rain loosed the landslide.

Downpours over much of Italy have caused about 100 deaths and great damage.

A six-hour cloudburst today swamped the Italian Riviera.

Strikers Back In Shipyards

Boilermakers Win 30-Cent Hourly Raise Over Companies' 25-Cent Boost Offer

Full-scale operations at Victoria's two shipyards were resumed today with the return to work of 400 boilermakers and helpers after a 26-day-old strike.

The men reported for work this morning under terms of a new wage contract negotiated and signed Saturday afternoon. The new agreement provides them with a 30-cent-an-hour raise, bringing the basic wage for mechanics to $1.80 an hour.

The contract will run until Aug. 1, 1952.

The union originally sought a 50-cent hourly pay boost. The companies—Yarrows Ltd., and Victoria Machinery Depot—had offered 25 cents and certain extra holiday concessions.

Most of the extra concessions were deleted from the signed contract.

"The final settlement," said H. A. Wallace, of Yarrows, and Harold Husband, of V.M.D., "amounts in take-home pay to exactly the same amount in dollars and cents as the agreements previously signed with other trades at our yards with the exception of machinists, who have a two-year agreement."

John Meadley, president of the boilermakers' union, admitted the wage increase gained was not as much as unionists had hoped for, and indicated boilermakers would seek another raise next year.

The new rate will be paid automatically to boilermakers employed at H.M.C. Dockyard under a defense department agreement to meet local commercial rates.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES

No new "Elizabeths" or "Phillips" had been born in either of Victoria's hospitals up to press time today.

"All the babies born here so for today already had their names," the maternity ward of Royal Jubilee Hospital reported.

"None so far as we know," added the maternity ward of St. Joseph's Hospital.

Condition of Diana Steward, 12, of 2310 Lee Avenue, was reported as still "satisfactory" at Jubilee Hospital today.

The girl was injured and suffered serious internal injuries last week at a physical training class at Central Junior High School.

James Duncan, 47, formerly of Glasgow, in city police court today got a month in jail for shoplifting

He pleaded guilty to stealing two sweaters from a department store, having been caught red-handed. Duncan, who came from Scotland to Canada a few years ago, was given a similar sentence in 1948 for the same crime.

Duncan's plea for a "break" as he had a steamer ticket to get out of town, fell on deaf ears.

A pick-pocket was at work in the closely packed crowds in front of City Hall to view the Royal couple today.

Jong Wing Kai, 559 Cormorant Street, complained to police someone had stolen a wallet from his pocket containing $191.

A flag which was hung for Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee was shaken out of its careful folds in honor of Princess Elizabeth today.

Mrs. Jessie Salmon, 70, at 861 Esquimalt Road, has kept the relic bright and chaste since her early girlhood.

"It's faded, of course," said Mrs. Salmon. "But it flew when the great Queen rode in her carriage through the streets of London when I was a girl, and it flew from my father's shop in Caledonia Road when the Boer War ended. I've kept it ever since."

When a roadster sped up Rockland 20 minutes before Their Royal Highnesses' car, one spectator quipped: "Somebody's got to hustle and get the kettle on."

War Amputees Meet Visitors

"A lovely girl and a fine, young fellow."

That was the description of Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip given by a group of war amputees who had an opportunity to chat with them for a few brief minutes this morning outside the Parliament Buildings.

The royal couple went over to talk with the amp's before leaving the buildings for Thunderbird Park.

W. C. Warren, of Saanichton, was the first Princess Elizabeth addressed. She noticed from his medals he had seen service in the South African War.

"She asked me what regiment I'd been with," Warren said. "I told her the Royal Canadian Regiment and told her it was just 52 years ago to the day that we left for the front."

Richard Caldwell, 582 Hillside, was the first to speak to the Prince.

"He asked if we were all amps, I told him yes."

Arthur W. Hammond, of Royal Oak, was asked by the Princess what he did. "I told her about the fruit farm I have," he said.

The amps, who had special reserved seats for the occasion, gave three rousing cheers and a tiger for the Princess as she and Prince Philip left in their open car. Members of the public joined in.

A woman cried out: "God bless you, dear."

3 Men Injured In Malahat Auto Accident

Three men were injured and $1,500 damage done to vehicles in a Saturday night Malahat crash, R.C.M.P. mighway patrol reports.

It was the only serious accident recorded on Victoria and district police records over the week-end.

Police said a light delivery truck driven by Oliver Fortin, 750 Market, went out of control near the 16-mile post on the Island Highway.

It collided with a car driven by George L. Lovitt, 1199 Monterey.

Both drivers and Walter Parker, 2033 Allanby, passenger in the Lovitt car, were treated for minor injuries at Jubilee Hospital.

City police said a car driven by Helen J. Taylor, 1002 Vancouver, hit a parked car owned by William Heller, 1147 Fort, Saturday night.

Impact caused the Heller car to slip its brakes. It rolled down the hill, went through the fence at 1124 Fort and came to rest on the lawn.

City officers typed damage as medium to cars driven by Neil G. Gallas and Stanley Crittenden, 1112 McKenzie St., when they collided at Yates and Broad Saturday night.

Fairly extensive damage was caused in a View-Blanshard collision early Sunday morning between cars driven by Jean D. Ferguson, Tod Inlet, and Donald Wong, 950 Mason St., police said.

Tots Wait Patiently For Peek At Princess

Some of them waited over two hours for Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip, but all of Victoria's little people had a big smile and an eager wave of welcome for Her Gracious Highness and consort, who acknowledged their shrill cheers. But it was a long wait for a little glimpse.—Times Photo.

HIS HAND WOULD LIVE FOR EVER

Wistful Descendant Songhees Prince Wanted Honor From Queen's Line

"If I can shake hands with these people from Queen Victoria, my hand will live forever."

These were the words of the last living direct descendent of a famous Songhees prince standing among hundreds of Indians who welcomed Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip at Thunderbird Park today.

He was 77-year-old Jimmy Fraser, grandson of Prince Freezy, who met the first Hudson's Bay traders to Victoria.

But the lovely Princess and the handsome Prince standing on the platform never shook hands with the kindly old man. They had no knowledge of his wish. If they had, there is no doubt they would have been glad to make Jimmy's hand "live on forever."

The Royal couple also did not know that Jimmy was doing them a great honor.

He carried with him a sacred "rattle" named "Tanaksen" which is usually brought out only at night on special ceremonial occasions.

The rattle, Jimmy explained, was tabooed to the eyes of white men.

"But it is quite alright for the Princess to see it," he said. "It will bring her good luck as she is the descendant of a great queen who now rules over many people in the land of plenty.

Jimmy also carried with him three old family masks which he fondled lovingly with his fingers.

GUNSHOT WOUND IN HEAD SAID RESPONSIBLE FOR MAN'S DEATH

R.C.M.P. said today Harry Vater, 45, of Nanaimo, missing hunter whose body was found Sunday, died from a gunshot wound in the head.

Vater has been the object of an extensive search since Oct. 15. His body was found near his car abandoned by the Nanaimo River.

Police earlier dragged the river for the body. Coroner W. H. Jones will conduct an inquiry.

Still being sought in the bush country east of Wellington is Steve Walhowsky, 22, missing from his home since Oct. 14.

Belief is the missing man intends to "hole up" in the woods for a time. He left carrying two rifles, a sleeping bag and food supplies.

Aged Chinese Beaten, Robbed By 3 Bandits

Three young thugs strong-armed and robbed a Chinese in the city Sunday night.

They only got $2.10 for their efforts.

Wong Quan Lee, 1808 Government Street, told police he was accosted by the trio of white men in an alley off lower Herald Street shortly before 9.15.

Wong said that while one man held him, another went through his pockets and took the money and three keys.

Crowd A-Tiptoe For Glimpse Of Princess

By BILL RAYNER

"It was fine, what I saw of it."

The words, expressed by dairy employee John Dreaper, summed up the reaction of back-of-the crowd hundreds who greeted Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip at City Hall this morning.

Waiting expectantly long before the scheduled arrival of the Royal couple, the warm-hearted crowd ignored a chilly breeze that whipped flags and bunting decorations.

While waiting, people in the crowd checked on the City Hall clock, speculating as to whether it showed the correct time.

Eyes followed patrolling R.C.M.P. officers in their colorful full-dress uniforms.

BELLS PEAL APPROACH

Suddenly the distant sound of church bells electrified the throngs.

"They must be coming, they must be coming," said one woman standing on a chair. The cry was taken up, and soon the motorcycle escort turned the corner of Douglas and Fisgard.

"I want to be up at the front," complained a little boy. "I can't see anything from here."

Trying her best to hold her son higher, his mother replied, "Well, your daddy isn't here to hold you up real high, so that's that."

PAST POLICE LINES

Excitement swept through the crowd as the Royal car went by, and the crowd pressed in past police lines, cutting off most of the cars in the motorcade.

Mayor George has never had a more attentive audience than the waiting crowds who heard, through loudspeakers, his words of welcome to the Royal couple.

"Will she come out on the balcony? Oh, I hope she comes out on the balcony." Soon the balcony became the focal point; but the crowd was disappointed. The Royal party left the building, and when their car was two blocks south on Douglas Street, back-row people were still standing on tip-toe, straining their eyes to catch a glimpse.

The band of H.M.C.S. Naden struck up, and a burly police sergeant immediately froze to rigid attention, then relaxed just as quickly when the selection being played turned out to be a march.

His action summed up the feeling of the crowd—keyed up, expectant, excited by the presence of the Princess who some day will be the Empire's Queen.

Blessings Of Providence Asked For Royal Couple

Premier Conveys People's Message

Following is the text of the address welcome given by Premier Byron I. Johnson to Princess Elizabeth at the Parliament Buildings today:

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR ROYAL HIGHNESS

On behalf of the people of British Columbia, I have the honor to approach Your Royal Highness to convey to you the unbounded pleasure with which we greet your presence amongst us.

It is with heartfelt devotion and fealty that we welcome you to this most westerly province of Canada.

We embrace in these humble, yet sincere greetings, your Consort, His Royal Highness, The Duke of Edinburgh, who is held in high esteem and warm affection by the people of British Columbia.

It is our earnest desire that you both will enjoy, in full measure, your sojourn with us.

We have looked forward to this joyful occasion with pleasant anticipation, having in our memories the happy recollection of the visit to this province of Their gracious Majesties the King and Queen.

The health of His Majesty has caused his people deep concern, and we would humbly petition you to convey to him our sincere hope for his speedy recovery.

We also pray that you will manifest to him our deep and abiding sense of loyalty and affection, uniting with these expressions of attachment, our esteem and affection for your beloved mother, Her Majesty the Queen.

May the blessing of Divine Providence accompany you on your return journey home, and may health and happiness ever be the experience of Your Royal Highnesses and your family.

I have the honor to be, Ma'am, with every sentiment of respect, Your Royal Highness' most humble and obedient servant.

Marnie Got A Good View

A fine of $35 was imposed against Vernon B. McBeth, 423 Durban Street, when he pleaded guilty in city police court today to a charge of careless driving. Charge arose from an Oct. 7 Douglas-Fisgard collision.

Union Attacks Arena Choice Of Engineers

Memorial arena commission is to hold a special meeting this week to consider a formal protest from the International Union of Operating Engineers concerning appointment of William Bridgewood as assistant manager of Memorial Arena.

The protest was submitted to Commission chairman Carl Pendray by Ed Callan, business agent for the Victoria local of the engineers' union.

The union maintains the commission erred in hiring Bridgewood, an outsider, and that, instead, it should have promoted an arena staff member to the job.

The new job was advertised, Pendray answered, but none of the staff engineers applied.

Bridgewood, a former arena commissioner, was picked as being best suited for the job, he said.

Royal Couple Surpass All Childhood Dreams

By PENNY SAVER

Now we know!

All through childhood we heard romantic tales about beautiful princesses and prince charmings but, like most of the other ficticious characters between the covers of those books of our dreams, we never met them in our own world.

That is, not until today!

Here, in our own surroundings, our dreams of fairy tale royalty on dashing white horses or in elegant gowns, came to reality.

Our own Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip warmed our hearts with their dignity and charm.

They smiled and waved as they toured our city so that our people might see them.

It was not an effort for them—you could sense that—they were truely happy to be among Victorians. And we showed our joy at having them.

* * *

It was a great day, but now that it's over we will all want souvenirs of the historic visit.

Many of the stores in town have a wide selection of Royal booklets which are selling for 50 pennies.

Here is a list of those available, H.R.H. Princess Elizabeth Silver Souvenir; H.R.H. Duke of Edinburgh, K.G.; H.R.H. Prince Charles of Edinburgh, H.R.H. Princess Anne, First Souvenir Book; H.R.H. Princess Elizabeth's Siamese Kitten; "Timmy;" and many others.

Also you can buy attractive booklets of photographs at 60 cents each.

* * *

Chinaware souvenirs are also popular and will be a lasting momentum of the visit.

China busts, 4½ inches high, replicas of the Royal couple, will take a place of honor in your home. They are $1.75 a pair.

Now here is one way to get your children to save their pennies. For $1.25 you can buy a piggy bank in the shape of the Royal crown. They'll be proud to drop their pennies in it.

For your own use around the house are souvenir tumblers. They are eight-ounce size and are 35 pennies each.

Women From Overseas Plan Late Autumn Bazaar

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

'Geriatrics'—A Word With Great Meaning For You

In my estimation there is nothing happening in this day of miracles half so exciting as the things scientists are learning about prolonging life, and even better, prolonging the youthful part of life.

We are hearing more and more about that fairly new department of medicine called geriatrics. I imagine you think of it much as I did until a short time ago; simply as care of the aged. I kept thinking, "If they can do so much for older people, surely many of the things they are learning can be applied to younger ones, as preventive medicine."

Because of my own intense interest and because I feel an obligation to my readers to call their attention to the things being discovered in the research laboratories, I began studying geriatrics and talked with leaders in this field. I was amazed!

While this branch of medicine can do wonders for the older person its real dream and vision is properly to feed, observe and direct an individual from birth on, and his father and mother before him. Geriatrics also renders a great service to middle-aged men and women who wish at 40 or 50 to adopt an outline of living, scientifically and individually planned for them; the goal being prolonged youthfulness and vitality.

Already there are many startling and exciting examples of men and women who have been aparently rejuvenated through a change in diet, exercise or other habits of life. Ponce de Leon looked in the wrong place for the fountain of youth. It now seems as if it lies in fine nutrition and its effects on the organs, on circulation and the glands of the body. Geriatrics is actually applying the findings of science to the everyday men and women with wonderful results.

Geriatric service is made up of three parts. First, the prevention or postponement of aging (this includes the physical examination). Second, treatment and rehabilitation. Third, lifetime coaching, guidance and management.

Dr. C. Ward Crampton, one of New York's distinguished consulting physicians, medical co-chairman of New York's Mayor Impellitteri's committee on aging, former assistant professor of medicine of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and chairman of the subcommittee on geriatrics and gerontology of the Medical Society of the County of New York, is one of the leaders of this movement.

As a matter of fact, Dr. Campton has been practising geriatric medicine for many years. In the 1932 edition of Preventive Medicine, published by the Academy of Medicine, he said, "We have studied diseases but not lives. We need lifetime diagnosis. We need lifetime management. We shall get lifetime results."

For years physicians have been trying to impress the public with the importance of a yearly examination as preventive medicine. The large percentage of the public has procrastinated. In St. Louis last month, at The International Congress of Geriatrics, Dr. Crampton proposed the following: Since the average person will not go yearly for a check-up, and since it is so essential to know his background from birth on in order to diagnose and manage him best later on, why not try to get six thorough complete examinations in a lifetime?

These should be done at six important epochs: At birth, at school age, at puberty (between 12 and 16), at marriage or not later than twice puberty, at menopause, geriatric (five times the age of puberty but not later than 65).

Between Ourselves

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Princess Elizabeth Alexandra Mary, heir presumptive to the throne of England, came to Victoria yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

And one minute after she had stepped out from the flag-decked runway leading from the C.P.R. dock to the pavement in front of the depot, she had conquered this farthest western city on her Canadian tour.

It wasn't the way she walked. Although there was grace in her steps—and more than a hint of determined purpose in the way she placed her heels squarely on the pavement, as she inspected the royal guard.

It wasn't her smile. For, in those first few minutes she smiled only fleetingly.

It wasn't the beauty of her face. Although I doubt if many woman in Victoria could boast as delicately clear a skin. Nor was it her smart chestnut brown ensemble with its fitted velvet coat with silk braid trim; small off-face brown felt hat with circlet of tiny brown ostrich tips, brown leather bag and shoes with silk ties.

"Bessie"

Rather, it had something to do with the expression on her face as she looked at the crowd, lined five and six deep at vantage points near the depot.

There was shyness in that look. Shyness as she bent her head in the face of dozens of flash bulbs; as she turned to speak to His Honor The Lieutenant-Governor, who walked beside her.

There was diffidence, too. A diffidence that could only shine in the face of a young woman of 25 years thrust suddenly under the eyes of a nation.

There was pride in the lift of her head and a knowledge of things that must be done in the steady curve of her mouth.

But it was in her eyes that one found the message that conquered this city.

For, as Princess Elizabeth stood for a moment before inspecting the royal guard of honor, she looked out at the men, women and children surrounding her.

It was a shy glance—but friendly. Wistful. Perhaps a little pleading.

"Here I am!" it seemed to say, "I really do like you! I want you to like me!"

Even in the midst of excitement, noise, glaring flash bulbs and the ringing voice of the officer commanding the guard of honor—that message got across to the people.

And when it did the city of Victoria gave Princess Elizabeth Alexandra Mary it's heart!

Early November Marriage Foretold

The engagement is announced of Marilyn Elizabeth (Lynn) Pelling, only daughter of Mrs. Hazel M. Pelling, Gladstone Avenue, and late Mr. Pelling, to William Allan Richards, only son of Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Richards, Prior Street. The wedding will take place in St. John's Anglican Church, Nov. 9 at 8. Canon George Biddle will officiate. The bride-elect has chosen Misses Norma Lidstrome and Joyce Townsend as her attendants. (Photo by Ken).

A FIRST IMPRESSION

By DAWN VAN NORMAN

Victoria came through!

Within a twinkling of the docking of the Crusader, the heavy clouds that had curtained the sky parted and released silver-toned rays which illuminated everything in its path.

The Empress Hotel stood boldly before the royal couple beneath a perfect rainbow arch. Each leaf of the ivy that cloaks the hotel was picked up by the impromptu rays.

A mass sigh of relief passed over the anxious crowd. Mother Nature had done her best to show our city to full advantage before our special guests.

If you let your gaze wander for a minute from the centre of activity, the dock, you were stricken with the impressive statue of Queen Victoria silhoutted against the bright autumn sky as the last light of this important day reached for the horizon.

Yet another look revealed the staid government buildings outlined in brilliant lights and dressed in patriotic bunting, waiting patiently until it too, would attract a royal glance.

It was amidst this picture of beauty that Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip left the destroyer Crusader and entered our capital city to be met by cheering, happy throngs.

Heather Sent From Scotland For Marriage Of Joy Simm

Mauve, pink and white chrysanthemums with mauve heather sent from Scotland, created an attractive setting in First United Church Saturday evening for the ceremony which united in marriage Jocelyn Naomi Simm and Otto Nurfied Fedun.

Rev. Moir A. J. Waters heard thhe nuptial vows of the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Simm, Elford Street, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fedun, Yorkton, Sask.

During the signing of the register Mrs. N. B. Bertucci sang "All Joy Be Thine," accompanied by Mrs. Roberta Wood.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white slipper satin fashioned with mandarin collar, fitted bodice and lily-point sleeves. Her floor-length veil was topped with a finger-tip veil which her mother wore at her marriage 25 years ago. They were caught in a beaded tiara. She carried a bouquet of red rosebuds and white heather sent from Scotland.

Mrs. Glenn Priestley, matron of honor, chose a gown of shell-pink eyelet organdy over satin complemented with a bouquet of mauve and white chrysanthemums.

Seve Fedun was best man for his brother and ushers were John Naysmith and Otto Zilkie.

A three-tier cake centred the bride's table at the reception in Newstead Hall. It was also recorated with white candles in silver holders and covered with a lace cloth. E. G. Rowebottom proposed the toast.

Upon leaving for her honeymoon motoring to Los Angeles, Mrs. Fedun wore a cerese taffeta dress topped with a grey coat with a gardenia corsage.

Roaf, O.B.E., E.D., and Mrs. Roaf, Lieut. C. N. W. Woodward and Mrs. Woodward.

Informality will mark the evening affair. If Their Royal Highnesses wish, there may be dancing in the striking gold and crimson ballroom.

Several reels of moving pictures are ready to be shown, including "The Law and the Lady" with Greer Garson, Marjorie Main and Michael Wilding.

Mrs. Clarence Wallace will wear for thee evening a gown of dull satin in the golden blonde tone of champagne, appliqued with gold sequins and beads in a curving feather pattern across the left hip. From the eembroidery blonde tulle cascades in a narrow floating panel to the hemline, which extends into a court train. The golden embroidery also sweeps up over the diagonal decolletage which covers one shouluder, the other shoulder strapped in a wide satin fold.

Clarence Wallace will entertain wear for the evening a gown the embroidery blonde tulle which covers one shoulder, the Reminiscent of the magnificent models worn by Queen Elizabeth for formal occasions is the gown in silver grey brocade in pale gold and yellow to be worn by Mrs. E. W. Hamber.

Mrs. W. C. Woodward will wear a dinner gown of sheer black lace and net; fair-haired Mrs. Richard Wallace has chosen nacre de perle tulle, ankle-length, star-dusted in a sparkling shower of beads. Her sister-in-law, Mrs. David Wallace, will wear a picture gown of pink velvet.

Demonstrate weaving—Evening Study Group, Victoria Hand Weavers' Guild has been meeting at the home of Mrs. Sydney Pickles where Miss Marjorie Hill gave demonstrations of sectional warping methods and modern ways of threading and sleying the warp through the heddles and reed. Miss Hall also showed members process known as "weaving as drawn in" which was used by colonial weavers. Members will now weave their own samplers. Other lessons have been planned by Mrs. Pickles.

In only 3 minutes you can bring a delicious, steaming bowl of Brex to the breakfast table. And Brex will bring the children running. They love the tempting nut-like flavour of wheat germ with other parts of wheat. Growing, active children need the solid nourishment Brex supplies every day. Serve Brex tomorrow—the whole family will enjoy it.

She visits us as daughter of the King,
Heir presumptive to the Throne
And all the high traditions of the Crown—
The Crown that binds in close-knit unity
A Commonwealth of freedom-loving nations
Of many races, languages, and creeds.
Look on this land, Elizabeth, and know
Our loyalty is yours, and deep affection.
From sea to sea across this great Dominion
Our hearts rejoice in tribute and in welcome
To you and to your consort, Philip.
May all the best of earthly dower
Attend you in the years ahead,
And may, through you, be strengthened and preserved
The ties of friendship, custom, and of culture
That link this Commonwealth in common cause.

TOP-RANK BRITISH NEWS CAMERAMAN COVERS TOUR

Victorians have already gotten extensive glimpses of the royal tour in other parts of Canada, thanks to the enterprising work of John Turner, top-ranking British newsreel cameraman, and the J. Arthur Rank organization.

Turner

Turner's newsreel showing of the tour, which have been shown at the Odeon Theatre here, will include the Victoria welcome.

The films are being shown in England less than 48 hours after the actual events. Theatres in the U.S. are also running the continuing screen story.

Turner filmed many historic events in the last war, including the Malta convoys, battles with the Italian fleet in the Mediterranean, invasion of sicily and landings at Salerno, D-Day on the Normandy beaches, and part of the Burma campaign.

PEACEABLE RUSSIANS

HOVE, England (CP) — Air Chief Marshal Sir Guy Garrod said in a speech here the average Russian "is rather a happy type who wants to be left alone and live his life in peace." Formerly on the United Nations military staff committee, he said "Personally, I am quite certain they hate this regime under which they are living."

Charlie Coburn Defends Rights Of Poker Players

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 16 (AP).—Poker players of North America, you have a champion.

He is that Georgia gentleman with a monocle, Charles Coburn, carrying on a campaign to protect the rights of card-playing citizens.

Coburn has more than a passing interest in the subject. He and a few Hollywood cronies were recently interrupted in a friendly poker match by a couple of police officers. The players were accused of breaking the gambling laws and were fined $15.

ALL A MISTAKE

"It was all a mistake," said the actor, who is oddly enough working in a picture called "Oh Money, Money." "It seems that some neighbors had called the police about a licensed bridge club nearby. But when the officers arrived, only our light was on and they steped in on us.

"We didn't have to appear in court. We saw the judge in his chambers and he admitted that the law was ambiguous.

"That's why I am campaigning for a better law. After all, laws are made to protect peaceful, respectable citizens, not to punish them. . . This is a bad law. It permits law officers to enter private homes without a warrant. . .

"The police have enough crime to take care of, without breaking up poker games. . ."

IN THE VESTRY

Coburn said he received a flood of consoling mail after his citation. One letter was from a southern bishop who said he himself enjoyed "the Saturday night poker sessions in the vestry."

What about playing poker with women?

"I don't recommend it," Coburn said. "I never like to play it tough with women, because I hate to see them lose. But on the other hand, they show no mercy. They can be just as tough in a poker game as any man."

Victoria Sets Pace For RCAF Recruits

Young men of Victoria like the air force for a military career.

Flt-Lt. Hugh Campbell, officer in charge of recruiting here for the R.C.A.F., reports that 50 new members were recruited at the 1315 Government Street office last month. This put Victoria in the lead for recruiting on a per capita basis across the Dominion.

Local unit was inspected by Group-Capt. R. S. Turnbull, D.F.C., A.F.C., D.F.M., director of personnel manning for the R.C.A.F., Sunday afternoon.

Imperial Club Variety Show For Solarium Christmas Party

Victoria's new Imperial Club will give a show next Monday night at 9 in the Fox Theatre in aid of Queen Alexandra Solarium's Christmas party fund.

Local artists to appear will include Reginald Stone, Gerry Gosley's Smile Show troupe, Frank Merryfield, Sheila Reardon, Joan O'Neill's Red Triangle group, a popular local dance orchestra. Ed Farey of Radio Station CKDA will be master of ceremonies.

Admission will be free. A collection will be taken in aid of the fund.

McKELVIE TO SPEAK

Bruce McKelvie, B.C. historian, will be guest speaker at the annual dinner meeting of the St. Mary's Men's Guild next Thursday at 6.30 in the parish hall.

BEDTIME STORY

by Thornton W. Burgess

Lovely Lady Autumn had painted the Green Forest and all the roadside trees and some of the bushes in lovely colors. In many ways it was the most beautiful season of all the year.

Peter Rabbit had been out all night. It is Peter's way. Somehow he just cannot stay at home in the dear Old Briar-patch when the dusk of evening softly falls.

This morning Peter was safely home in the dear Old Briar-patch before jolly, round, bright Mr. Sun began his daily climb up in the blue, blue sky. He was tired, for he had been roaming about all night. Now, like most of the Green Forest and Green Meadow folk, Peter is a light sleeper. He had been asleep but a little while when he suddenly sat up, his eyes wide open and his long ears standing straight up. At first he wasn't sure what had awakened him. Then he heard a sound that made his heart jump a little. tI was the hatefulest sound. Not only was it the hatefulest sound to Peter, but it was the hatefulest sound to all the Green Forest and the Green Meadow folk. It was the sound of a gun.

Peter shivered. It wasn't that he was afraid for himself just then; he wasn't afraid. That sound had come a long distance. The hunter with that dreadful gun was much too far away to be feared at present. But Peter knew what that hatefulest sound meant. He knew that from now on for many frightful weeks no one among the furred and feathered folk, save the very smallest ones, would feel safe during the daytime. Only after the Black Shadows had crept out from the Purple Hills and drawn the curtain of darkness over the Green Meadows and the Green Forest, the Big River and the Old Pasture, would those who lived in those places be released from constant fear.

Peter couldn't go to sleep again. Mrs. Peter joined him at the edge of the dear Old Briar-patch. They sat there with their long ears straight up listening for that hatefulest sound. They heard it again and yet again.

Declares Communism Would Still Thrive

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (AP)—If there is a war and if the west is Victorious, Communism nonetheless will continue in China and Russia, "for some time," Lord Bertrand Russell, British Nobel prize winner, said Sunday. That is because "it would be too expensive for us to run their governments," he said. But eventually Communism will disappear, Russell added, because "it is based mainly on poverty which would be wiped out."

CHAMPION IMMIGRANT

LONDON (CP)—Britain's professional lawn tennnis champion, Derek Bocquet, is sailing with his wife and family to make their home at Hamilton, Ontario. His wife is the former Pamela Seaton, a star at lawn tennis, squash and field hockey.

PACIFIC MANTA

Victorians Held Excitement Until Last Possible Moment

By DON INGHAM

Victorians almost—at least until the actual arrival—took the Royal visit in their stride.

By 3 Sunday afternoon bus stops throughout the city held little family groups, with children carrying flags, and by 4 the Causeway and Belleville Street from the C.P.R. wharf to Douglast Street was jammed with a calm and happy crowd.

Old and young—white, yellow and brown—they waited quite patiently and with calm expectancy for the Royal visitors.

Fifteen minutes before the Crusader was due to dock trees and lamp standards were festooned with eager spectators ensuring themselves a good view.

TREE CLIMBERS

Among these was an elderly but brisk lady who made an unsuccessful attempt to climb a tree at the foot of the Empress Hotel driveway. A few minutes later she was comfortable in a smaller tree where she could see over the heads of the thousands lining the roadway.

A pair of athletic "zoot-suiters" put on quite a show as they aided each other to points of vantage in a large fir tree at the other side of the driveway.

Soldiers lined the route but had no trouble with the jolly crowd. Ambulances were spotted at clear points, but these too were not needed.

Just before 5 there was a scream from a youngster—"I see it, I see it!"—and the crowd suddenly came to life. There was an immediate stir as the Crusader hove into view, and from then on one and all positively danced with impatience until the Royal car passed.

FAMOUS EXPERIMENT

Benjamin Franklin's experiment with a kite in thunderstorms, proving lightning is an electric discharge, was made in 1752.

Smelters Dip $7 As Markets Follow U.S. Lead

TORONTO, Oct. 22 (CP)—Support weakened steadily toward the close today as stock market prices declined.

Trading eased to the slowest pace in about two months.

Industrial issues posted a wide list of losses ranging to more than $3. Agricultures, constructions, banks, textiles and miscellaneous industrials weakened. Papers, utilities, steels, foods, liquors, refining oils, manufacturing companies and retail stores turned sharply lower.

Consolidated smelters led base metal losses with a dip of more than $7. Other market leaders, including Hudson Bay, International Nickel, Noranda, Quemont, United Keno Hill and Waite Amulet posted declines ranging to more than $2.

Western Oils showed a wide list of losses ranging to about 60 cents. Anglo-Canadian, Canadian Colleries, Devon-Leduc, Federated, National, Selburn, Trans-Empire and Redwater-Piccadilly were among the losers.

Seven senior golds showed dips ranging to 75 cents. Juniors posted 43 declines to nine advances.

Depressed Oils

VANCOUVER—Depressed by falling prices in New York, the market was sympathetically lower all along the line today. Oils were marked down almost without exception, and in largely the same proportions.

Home at 16¼ was down ½; Royalite at 17 was off ¾, and Anglo-Canadian at 7.55 was off 20 cents. Britalta dipped 10 cents at 4.90, Central Leduc was 2.45, off 10 cents; Calvan lost 30 cents at 6.30. Britalta at 4.90 and Vulcan at .75 each lost 10 cents. Other minor losers were Superior, 1.45; Vanalta, .50; York, .52; Del Rio, 1.56; Long Island, .55.

Western Uranium was weakest feature in mines, losing 25 cents at 5.00. Silvan was 1.40, off 3 cents; Quatsino, 49, off 2 cents; Estella 1.81, off 4 cents. International Coal was a lone exception, adding 4 cents in active trade at .90.

Powell River and MacMillan each lost $1 at 28, while Canadian Western Lumber was 12½, off ¼.

Wall St. Sags

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (AP)—Prices fell fractions to around three points on the stock market today as the declining trend that began last Friday rolled on.

Chemicals led the decline but there were substantial losses in every major group.

Traders attributed the sagging market in large part to disappointment over earnings of such large corporations as Du Pont and General Electric.

Dupont was among the heavier losers during the session and was down 3½ at times. American Cyanamid was off 2⅞ and Allied Chemical and Dow Chemical were off 2½ each.

Bethlehem Steel dropped more than a point and U.S. Steel, Republic and Youngstown recorded lesser declines. General Motors and Chrysler were down.

General Electric and Westinghouse lost more than a point each. Amerada Petroleum fell as much as eight points at one time.

Canadian issues were mostly lower. Canadian Pacific was off ⅞, International Nickel plunged 1⅛, Hiram Walker lost 2 and Distillers Seagrams dropped ⅝. Dome Mines gained ¼ and McIntyre advanced ¾.

Market Leaders Drop

MONTREAL, Oct. 22 (CP).—Stock prices tumbled sharply towards the close today.

Fractional declines of the opening were changed to point losses in early afternoon dealings, some leaders ranging down to more than four points.

Senior metals and senior oils took the lead. Steels, papers and miscellaneous industrials were weakened by major losses in each section.

Utilities, beverages and banks showed a majority of fractional declines, while carriers continued irregularly easier.

Consolidated Smelters dropped 4½ points to 178½, as International Paper fell 2¾ to 51¾. Placer Development, MacMillan "B", Canada Cement, Price Brothers, Fraser, Bathurst "B", Walker, Noranda, Asbestos Corporation, Aluminum, McColl-Frontenac, International Petroleum, Imperial Oil, Algoma Steel, Ford "A", National Steel Car and Stelco all lost a point or more.

Mines followed the industrial market from the opening, while western oils dropped considerably from an early mixed path. Changes were generally limited to about 25 cents.

Bonds Turn Dull

MONTREAL, Oct. 22 (CP)—Prices were generally slightly easier today on the Montreal bond markets. Government of Canada issues were quiet, while provincials were weaker in dull trading. On the corporate market, C.P.R., Brazil and B.A. Oil convertibles dropped in some interest.

Oil Output Higher

Crude oil production in Alberta in the week ending Oct. 15 averaged 176,427 barrels per day. This was an increase of 15,000 barrels daily over the previous week, and compared with 96,323 barrels a year ago.

BETTER TIMES COMING, BUT—

Wall St. Finds Tax Pill Hard To Swallow

By HARRY YOUNG, Times Business Editor

Although the United States taxpayer has known for the last nine months that his bill for defence was going to be substantially higher, the pill was none the less distasteful when it eventually had to be swallowed last week-end.

The new tax bill now finally approved is no bigger than was expected, $5,700,000,000 against $11,000,000,000 sought by the treasury. Yet the news depressed Wall Street operators and on Friday and Saturday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped over six points. Today the decline continued, with the average down 5.70 points in the first four hours' trading.

Young

What the new tax bill has done is to make it almost certain that, despite increased production, few firms will be able to maintain their high net earnings rate of the past year.

The corporate income tax has been raised from 25 per cent on the first $25,000, to 30 per cent. For the remainder of the profit the increase is from 47 per cent to 52 per cent. The exemption from excess profits tax is also lowered by about 2 per cent.

In effect, most big business will be paying considerably more than half their profits in one form of taxation or other.

However, the situation may not be as black as it appears. The set-back in profit may be overtaken as 1952 progresses.

Defense mobilizer Charles E. Wilson has always maintained that the U.S. can have butter as well as guns, and he gives it as his opinion that after a "shady" first half of 1952, the country will be through the worst of the woods and into a clearing.

Wilson believes than once the initial demands of the defense program are met, there will be bigger allocations to industry for consumer goods.

It would, therefore, seem that the decline in Wall Street stock prices must be based on short-term results. The fundamental corporation values remain unchanged.

Victoria, which is contemplating adopting the Canadian National Building Code to the exclusion of its own compilation, is shortly to have an opportunity of examining the draft of the revised 1952 version.

B. P Scull, officer in charge of the building practises group of the National Research Council in Ottawa told Victoria builders last week that the committees working on the various chapter had now almost completed their tasks and that it was hoped to send out the draft to interested parties before the end of the year.

Mr. Scull who hoped that Victoria would keenly scrutinize and criticize the new draft pointed out that one of the big alterations from the 1941 code was the provision made for climate. "The code will have special provisions to cover all the varied climatic conditions experienced across Canada.

Canadian Steel Supply Steps Up

MONTREAL, Oct. 22 (CP)—K. S. H. Harris, steel comptroller, said in an address Saturday that despite the fact that steel output in Canada is being stepped up from 3,500,000 to 5,000,000 tons annually and productive capacity is being increased by one-third, it will remain in tight supply until the last quarter of 1952.

Addressing delegates to the 26th Canadian Purchasing Agents' Conference, he said strategic materials are being used to enable Canada to expand her industrial output capacity.

London Optimistic

LONDON, Oct. 22 (Reuters)—The Stock Exchange today ushered in election week with a continuation of recent optimism.

Following a hesitant start, markets produced a widespread firmness in many of the domestic groups, particularly textiles, rayons and electrical equipment issues.

Coats gained 1/6 to 6⅛ while among the miscellaneous leaders Imperial Chemicals featured at 53.

6 MEMORIAMS

DAY—"Cissie". In ever-loving memory of my dear wife who passed away October 23, 1932.

"If we could have our dearest wish fulfilled
Or take our choice of all Earth's treasures too,
Or choose from Heaven whatsoe'er we willed
We'd ask for you."

—Ever remembered by her loving husband Bob and daughter Gwen.

BRIDGE LESSON

by Oswald Jacoby

I often wonder why people do it. A bridge player will know in advance that a certain play cannot possibly work, but he'll try it anyway. Why doesn't he try something else?

Take today's hand, for example. South shouldn't have been playing the hand to begin with. North would have had an easy time with a contract of three no-trump, or even with five diamonds. The actual contract of four hearts was the least desirable of the possible game contracts but it should have been made.

West opened the jack of spades, and declarer finessed dummy's queen. This lost to East's king, much to declarer's disappointment. Nobody can blame South for taking this finesse, and nobody can be surprised at his chagrin when the finesse lost.

East returned the six of spades to dummy's ace, and declarer finessed the queen of hearts. This finesse lost to West's king, but this time South knew in advance that the finesse would lose. He knew that West had made a vulnerable overcall on a jack-high suit; so it was clear that West needed all the missing high cards to justify his bid.

The result was exactly what South expected. He lost a second trump trick to East, and also lost a trick to the ace of clubs. Down one.

Now, there was a way to make the game contract so there was no need for South to grit his teeth and take a finesse that was bound to lose. The right play is to take the ace of trumps at the third trick, after the first two spade tricks have been played. Then South leads a low trump from his hand in the hope that West will have to play the king whether he likes it or not.

Actually, West would have to play the king of hearts. That would leave South in position to draw East's remaining trump with the queen of hearts. South would lose only one trump trick, and would therefore make his contract.

IN TUNE WITH THE TIMES

By TOMMIE WALTERS

THE RYTHM PALS—Mike, Mark and Jack—who have been proving such a hit in the early a.m. over CKWX, have decided to catch up on some lost shut-eye. After springing out of bed hours before our breakfast to cavort in front of the microphone around 6 a.m. daily over the past few months, they are moving their broadcast time to 4.05 in the afternoon. Their program features music and songs with a distinctive western flavor, as well as popular tunes of the day.

* * *

"Headliners" is the title of another new series of programs to be heard each evening, Monday through Friday, over the same station. In them Larry Henderson brings listeners stories and glimpses of personalities behind the news. He shows history in the making and introduces the men and women who make it, reporting incidents as they happen, on-the-spot. After covering the British election campaign and the United Nations General Assembly in Paris, he will take off aboard the Orient Empress for the Middle East. Henderson has been commentator on the program for over two years and has just completed a round-the-world trip.

* * *

There will be no actuality broadcasts during the next three days, Oct. 23, 24 and 25, as Their Royal Highnesses, Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh are taking advantage of the lull in their official visit to rest up and enjoy a well-earned vacation on Vancouver Island. Only limited coverage will be permitted from their holiday retreat at "Eaglecrest," near Qualicum Beach. The late evening program, "Royal Tour Diary," has also been suspended for this period.

* * *

TONIGHT—"Voice of Firestone" at 5.30, with Thos. L. Thomas on KOMO. "Lux Theatre" at 6 on CBR and KIRO has Jeanne Crain and Hugh Marlowe in "Margie"—a boy-meets-girl setting from the nostalgic late 20's. "Hollywood Varieties" at 6.30 on KOMO. "Mario Lanza" at 7 on KOMO. "Frankie McPhalen Show" at 7.30 on CBR. The "Railroad Hour" at 8.30 on KOMO has Mimi Benzell and Gordon MacRae in Victor Herbert's memorable "Sweethearts." Michael Rabin, 15-year-old violin prodigy, is guest on the "Telephone Hour" at 9 on KOMO. "Opportunity Knocks" at 9 on CJVI (can also be heard on CJOR at 7). "Royal Tour Diary" at 10.15 on CBR and CJOR (10.45 on CJVI).

JOCKEYS ASKED TO HELP STOP RACE SCANDAL

PROVIDENCE, R.I., Oct. 20 (UP — A Rhode Island horse race "fixing" scandal which has resulted in the indictment of six men, including three jockeys, has threatened to spread to tracks throughout the east.

Attorney-General William E. Powers asked for the co-operation of jockeys in New Hampshire, New York and Maryland and said that "No set of circumstances would induce me to prosecute those jockeys who voluntarily implicated themselves in order to reveal the identity of others."

WITH THE FORCES

Trio Of Africa Veterans Hub Of R.C.A.F. Reserve Squalron

By ROY THORSEN

Three veterans of the African campaign are the boys around which the local reserve squadron of the R.C.A.F. has been formed.

They are Flight-Lieutenants R. C. Steele, W. M. Martin and Alan Davies.

Steele was a member of the R.A.F. in 1939 and during that hot African campaign he was chief radar controller in the Middle East. He transferred to the Canadian air force at the end of the war.

"His experience as a radar expert will be invaluable to our squadon," said Flt.-Offr. Dick Higgins. Steele is the chief radar officer of the local squadron.

Martin is the unit's chief technical officer. He was with the R.C.A.F. attached to the R.A.F. in the Middle East during the Second World War.

African veteran of the battle from the "top side," Davies is adjutant of the squadron. He was in charge of the base post office for the British North African forces in the latest world war.

The squadron is being led by Sqdn.-Ldr. P. D. P. "Pip" Holmes, who saw plenty of the "rough" in the air during the Second World War.

The O.C. of the unit said that uniforms will be issued to the W.D.'s (women's division) of the squadron next Thursday night at 8 in the Begg Building H.Q.

The W.R.C.N.(R) — women's division of the Malahat naval reserve starts training tonight at Moresby House. The "sailor girls" will receive instruction and basic training from S-Lt. Margaret Trevor, W.R.C.N.(R).

Tonight's parades have been cancelled for all other divisions of H.M.C.S. Malahat due to the Royal visit.

A non-Victorian, Flying Officer R. F. M. Walker, from Montreal, has joined the local 2 A.C. and W. air force reserve squadron. He has just returned from an extensive radar course in England. During the last war he was a fighter pilot with the R.C.A.F., F.O. Higgins reports.

Among the soldier-Victorians on the special Canadian 27th Army Brigade to take part in the European defense plan are Lieut. Howard Schoening and Cpl. Bernard Pauls.

Those two, along with Pte. D. O. Mills, Pte. Norman Rice and Sgt. Glenn Akehurst, all of Victoria, are among the personnel on the 27th's advance party to continental Europe.

The pilot model of an entirely new military six-wheel-drive truck that can travel under water came off the assembly line of General Motors of Canada in Oshawa last week. The military truck is new—it's faster, lower, easier to drive and maintain, and is able to carry heavier loads than any similar vehicles used in the last war.

The Belmont Housing Settlement—just beyond Colwood Corners—is booming. Present plan is to accommodate close to 400 families and about half that number have moved in and more are being added to the military community every week.

LIEUT. H. SCHOENING

CPL. BERNARD PAULS

The 21 naval divisions which serve as recruiting centres across Canada have been authorized to enroll — on the spot — all applicants for the rank of ordinary seaman who are medically fit and otherwise fill the requirements for entry.

It is a new system designed to accelerate recruiting. A man can be attested with the minimum of delay.

Army headquarters at Ottawa reports that a new cap badge has been authorized for the Royal Canadian Engineers.

Surmounted by an Imperial Crown, the badge will consist of the Garter and motto "Honi Sont Qui Mal Y Pense." Within the Garter is the Royal Cyph and outside a wreath of Maple Leafs "Royal Canadian Engineers" is inscribed on a scroll on the bottom of the wreath. Other rank badges will be made of brass and white metal. Those for officers will be of guilt and silver.

Prince George Youth Chosen To Represent B.C. At Toronto

Keith D. Johnston of Prince George has been selected to represent British Columbia as the provincial contestant for the Eaton Agricultural Scholarship to be awarded at the 1951 Royal Agricultural Winter Fair at Toronto.

Agriculture Minister Harry Bowman, who made the announcement, said it was difficult to reach a decision because all of the boys seeking to represent this province were of exceedingly high calibre.

Johnston, both in his scholastic and junior club activities, had a high academic standing and in addition gave evidence of ability in organization and leadership.

The T. Eaton Company has arranged the contest which requires each province to send a representative to the Royal Winter Fair. From these will be selected one young man who will receive the Eaton Scholarship, which will defray to a large extent his expenses in securing a degree at the university of his choice.

Remembrance Book Being Compiled

Under the direction of one of the pioneers of veterans' organizations, Bob Knight, a Book of Remembrance is being compiled by the Britannia Branch of the Canadian Legion to replace the Memorial Board in the rotunda of the club.

The increasing number of deaths of First World War veterans with the advance of time has made it impossible to find space for all on the board.

The Book of Remembrance will be similar to the one at the Parliament Buildings at Ottawa.

The present names will be transferred to the parchment pages it will contain and others added as the need arises.

An alcove will be built on which the book will be placed on a stand.

Gasoline War Makes London Motorists Gay

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Motorists flocked joyously during the week-end to London service stations which have cut gasoline prices as much as eight cents a gallon.

But no one else seemed happy about a gasoline price war which has continued since September. Regular gasoline now is selling at some stations at 32 cents a gallon (regularly 40) and premium gas at 34 (regularly 42).

Some dealers have indicated they will cease operations until the matter is settled. Others, operating at a deficit, have reduced staff.

On the other hand, those selling gas at the lowest prices reported such a rush of business they have had to take on extra help. Cars lined up for blocks Saturday at a few stations.

Because dealers pay 33.6 cents a gallon as their general basic price, those with the deepest cuts are selling at a loss. All dealers agreed the price war was helping no one.

But there was no hint of settlement.

The price war started late in September when Sun Oil Company dropped its price from 42 to 39 cents a gallon. No reason was announced. Shell and McColl-Frontenac followed suit.

Will Replace Duncan Bridge

DUNCAN.—The wooden bridge crossing the Cowichan River on the old Island Highway at Duncan will be replaced as soon as materials are available, according to the Department of Public Works.

In a letter to G. M. Berry, Duncan city clerk, N. M. McCallum, Works Department engineer, said every effort was being made to secure steel or timber, and that construction would begin in the "not too distant" future.

Mor than one year ago an appropriation of $65,000 was made to replace the structure, known locally as the "White Bridge" or "Duncan Wagon Bridge." Since that time it has been condemned and bus runs have been discontinued.

BEHIND THE SIGNS WITH Jim Nesbitt

Mason Street, off Quadra, just north of Pandora, was named for Henry Slye Mason, an adventurous Englishman who arrived here in the early 1860's, having come around "the Horn" in the sailing vessel Norman Morison.

Before going in for law, Mason was registrar-general of the Crown Colony of B.C. He studied law in the office of Seabright Green, was called to the bar in 1873, and for eleven years served as solicitor in the Attorney-General's Department. He resigned this position to enter the real estate and insurance business of Alsop and Company, today the B.C. Land and Investment Agency.

In 1870 Mason married Annie Eliza Thorne, who had come to Victoria from England in 1853. The first Mason home was in Birdcage Walk. In the 90's the family moved to Dallas Road, where Mr. Mason died in 1899 and Mrs. Mason in 1901.

ROYAL PAIR CAPTURES CITY'S EAGER CROWDS

Lovely Princess Inspects Artillery Guard At Parliament Buildings

Double rows of press photographers lined steps of Parliament Buildings this morning when Royal couple made appearance there today. Maj. J. A. Cook, commander of Royal Guard, is shown turning smartly as Princess Elizabeth makes her way to inspect guard, made up of 119th anti-aircraft artillerymen from Gordon Head. Premier Byron Johnson is seen behind and Prince Philip, in naval uniform, is at the right. (Times Photo).

Wild Welcome Warms Hearts Of Princess And Her People

Victoria opened its heart today to the gracious young lady who will one day be Canada's queen.

Thousands upon thousands of flag-waving adults and children thronged the streets as Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip drove to City Hall to receive an official welcome.

Despite a chilly wind they drove in an open car and the waiting crowd forgot discomfort in a spontaneous surge of enthusiastic cheers.

From City Hall, the Royal couple went to the Legislative Buildings for the province's welcome, then to Thunderbird Park to see Indian dancers, and finally to an official luncheon at the Empress Hotel.

In front of City Hall people assembled before 9 in the morning to get good places.

So thick were the people on the sidewalk that a store plate glass window was broken by the surging mass.

On the curb sat children and old people wrapped in blankets to keep warm.

As the Royal car drew up at the entrance of the City Hall a loud cheer went up. The spirit of the welcome was such that Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip appeared to be touched.

Civic Veterans Form Guard

As they stepped out of their car they were greeted by a guard of honor of civic employee veterans.

In the council chamber they captivated the audience with gracious smiles, they bid good-bye and the council chamber rocked with applause.

They offered their hands in friendly fashion and the Duke detained more than one alderman a moment, with an interested query.

Kilted Pipers Ian Duncan and Jim Marrs preceded the Royal visitors up the carpeted stairway and corridor, which was latticed with roses.

They halted before the Chamber and the Princess, clad in her now-famous Edinburgh green velvet fitted coat with stand-up collar, cloche hat of the same shade and brown accessories, entered.

On her lapel was the diamond maple leaf brooch given her by the Queen. She wore small pearl earrings.

Mayor Percy George escorted same pen and at the same table used by the King and Queen. the Princess, followed her into the Chamber. Then came the Duke with Mrs. George. The Royal couple then stood together in front of the dais which was banked with fern and great baskets of mauve and white chrysanthemums.

The Princess held her suede-gloved hands waist-high, one thumb gently rubbing the other.

Reeves of the four municipalities with their wives, aldermen of Victoria and their wives, chairman of the school board and his wife and Miss Elizabeth Dolman, May 24th queen were then presented, as 125 guests looked on from the public gallery.

The Royal visitors signed the city's book and the mayor indicated the signature of the Princess' mother and father in another book. They signed simply "Elizabeth," "Philip," with the Wild With Enthusiasm

It was when the Royal couple stepped out of the City Hall that the people went wild with enthusiasm. They shouted, screamed, pushed and shoved to get near the Royal couple.

Police struggled to keep the masses in check. Then someone started to sing "There Will Always Be An England." The rest of people surging near the Royal car took up the song.

Prince Philip gave a hearty laugh. He began to shout something to the people crowding around the car. His words were drowned by the shouting and cries.

Before stepping into the Royal car, Princess Elizabeth shook hands and spoke a few words to James Stothard, in charge of the guard of honor of veteran civic employees who stood outside the entrance of the City Hall. He was introduced to Her Royal Highness by Mayor George.

At the Parliament Buildings Prince Philip was first to acknowledge the cheers from the crowd with a slow salute and a flashing smile. He saluted smartly as the Canadian Scottish Regiment played the Royal salute.

While inspecting the 96-man Royal Canadian Artillery guard of honor, the Princess chatted freely with Major J. A. Cook, officer in charge.

The Duke, who appeared to be extremely observant, seemed to take in every detail of each soldier's dress. He walked down the lines with his hands clasped behind his back.

The Princess found herself walking up the spacious steps without her husband — he had stayed behind for a further chat with the Guard Officer.

Petite Connie Cownden, flower girl, presented the Princess with a colorful bouquet. She looked like a princess herself as she curtsied very properly.

Relax, Chat With Legislators

Promptly at 10.45, cheers drifting in from the grounds and boom of saluting artillery announced the arrival of the royal party at Parliament Buildings. Cabinet, members of the legislature, holders of the Victoria Cross, deputy ministers and their wives were lined up, waiting to be presented.

The legislative chamber was banded with chrysanthemums, ferns and palms. Two high-backed chairs were placed in front of the Speaker's dias. A small table held the Parliament Buildings guest book.

Premier Byron Johnson escorted Princess Elizabeth through the golden gateway to the floor of the House. Mrs. Johnson walked with Prince Philip.

The royal couple signed the Guest Book.

Then Premier Johnson started the presentation.

First member presented was Tom Uphill, of Fernie, with Mrs. Uphill.

Both Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip were relaxed, smiled frequently, and spoke directly to several of the M.L.A.'s.

The soft clear voice of the Princess could clearly be heard in the high-ceilinged room.

The Royal Couple chatted at length with Hon. Nancy Hodges, the Speaker of the Legislature.

The Prince asked Mrs. Tilly Rolston what consituency she represented and followed this with a question as to how many women were in the Legislature.

"Two," said Mrs. Rolston, "but I'm the one who does the talking."

Frank Calder, full-blooded Indian M.L.A., chatted for some time with Prince Philip.

Princess Elizabeth was gowned in forest-green, the long velvet coat in the fitted style that is becoming so much a part of description of her ensemble. Her small hat was matching green felt, trimmed with tiny feathers. Her bag, gloves and medium heeled leather shoes were brown.

FINAL BULLETINS

Report Third Atomic Explosion

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (AP)—The White House announced today a third atomic explosion has taken place in Russia.

Presidential Secretary Joseph Short called the new explosion "apparently" a part of a test series.

Typhoid Threat Ends; Schools Open

MACLEOL, Alta., Oct. 22 (CP).—Schools were reopened today following a two-day shut-down as a precautionary measure against a typhoid outbreak in this Southern Alberta town.

Dr. W. H. A. Gordon, town medical officer, said today drinking water from the town water system need no longer be boiled.

Pearson Sees Danger In Pact

OTTAWA, Oct. 22 (CP)—External Affairs Minister Pearson said today that any attempt to negotiate a Pacific pact at this time would weaken rather than strengthen Pacific security.

Speaking in the Commons during a defense-foreign affairs debate, Mr. Pearson said that the impracticability of a Pacific pact at this time was underlined by the action of the United States in concluding separate security pacts with Japan, Australia and New Zealand, and with the Philippines.

Arrival Here Like Fairyland

Victorians Overawed By Spectacle As Princess, Philip Step Ashore

Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh stepped ashore into a veritable fairyland setting in Victoria Sunday afternoon. As though it had been stage-managed, the setting sun broke through angry storm clouds just as H.M.C.S. Crusader poked her nose into the Inner Harbor.

It threw a golden glow, almost unreal, over the entire harbor front. A brilliant rainbow in the east framed the Empress Hotel for the Royal couple's first view of the city. It seemed the heavens had thrown a giant spotlight on the scene.

LIKE A HALO

"Like a halo for the Princess," one elderly woman on the causeway described it.

Victorians who had waited as much as three hours in intermittent rain for the Royal couple were almost overawed by the spectacle.

But a swelling cheer broke out over the waterfront just before the army started the 21-gun salute from a battery on Belleville St.

Between 50,000 and 60,000 people lined the mile-and-three-quarters route from the dock to Government House. At some points people were lined six and eight deep, and only in the section of Fort between Quadra and Vancouver were there vacant spaces on the sidewalk.

Perhaps reacting to the reports of rowdy welcomes in the East, Victoria's crowds were orderly, but enthusiastic. Most noticeable was the sheer jumping for joy of 'teen-age girls who were everywhere through the throng.

EXCITED HUSH

Cheers rang from the curbs in anticipation of the approach of the Princess and the Duke, but when they were at close hand, an excited hush seemed to fall over the throngs.

To the murmuring welcome, the Princess and Prince smiled and waved acknowledgement.

The strange, bright light marking the arrival of the destroyer bringing them from Vancouver under escort of three other navy ships, caught the paddles of two Indian war canoes in the Inner Harbor to greet the warship.

The Crusader tied up exactly on the dot of 5 as scheduled.

Lieutenant-Governor Clarence Wallace and Mrs. Wallace, with Premier and Mrs. Johnson and Mayor and Mrs. George went aboard to welcome the royal couple.

A cheer welled up along the harbor front as the Princess, walking beside the Lieutenant-Governor led the official party to the dock.

MOVE CAMERAMEN

As photographers moved in to snap their pictures, onlookers in the rear ranks shouted their disapproval and red-coated R.C.M.P. officers shooed the persistent cameramen away.

Walking toward the naval royal guard which she inspected, the lovely woman who some day will be Queen appeared to some to be a trifle self-conscious. She didn't smile for several minutes, but had a good chuckle at something said by Lieut. E. D. Robbins, in charge of the smart guard.

Prince Philip was the first to acknowledge the crowd's applause with an easy wave. This fired the crowd's enthusiasm ever more and they responded with a resounding ovation.

Two little girls, standing only a few feet from the Royal couple when they walked toward the

Karsh Was Captivated By Happy Royal Family

The pictures of the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh which appears on Page 1; and of the Royal couple with their children, Charles and Ann, which appears on Page 3, were taken by Yousuf Karsh, the noted Canadian portrait photographer. This is what Karsh has to say of his sitters.

"The photographs were taken in the afternoon of July 30 at Clarence House, the official residence of Their Royal Highnesses the Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh. Their private sitting room, exquisitely and tastefully decorated, was the setting.

"I found them most charming and agreeable—simple and dignified—informal and gracious. The Princess is a most gracious young matron—the Duke an extremely handsome man. From a personal point of view, what impressed me most, perhaps, was their willingness, one might almost say their anxiety, to co-operate in every way possible. Like all truly great people, they seem to have an instinctive appreciation and understanding of the artist's needs and desires.

"The fact that I had photographed the Royal Family before was recalled by Princess Elizabeth.

"The efficiency and courtesy of their entourage, their knowledge and understanding of my work, made my visit an easy and memorable one."

Ships Of Royal Escort Made Wartime History

By ARCHIE H. WILLS

King George and Queen Elizabeth were transported to and from Vancouver Island on their visit here in 1939 by a flotilla of ships that wrote a great page in the history of the Royal Canadian Navy in the Second World War.

They came to Victoria aboard the C.P.R. steamer Princess Marguerite and went back to Vancouver on the C.N.R. steamer Prince George.

Their escort, both ways, was provided by the four destroyers, Ottawa, Restigouche, St. Laurent and Fraser.

Three months to the day, Aug. 31, after they took Their Majesties to Vancouver the Ottawa and Fraser were at Vancouver for civic ceremonies. The distinguished guests who were aboard were quickly put ashore and within two hours both ships were hustling for Halifax, N.S. On the day Canada declared war, Sept. 10, both destroyers were in the Panama Canal.

FIRST TO SINK

H.M.C.S. Fraser was the first of the flotilla to come to grief. With Restigouche she had participated in the evacuation of troops from St. Jean de Luz, on the coast of France, and was heading for England on the black night of June 25, 1940, when she was cut in two by the British cruiser Calcutta and sent to the bottom. Forty-seven Canadian seamen lost their lives.

H.M.C.S. Ottawa was the next to go. While on convoy duty on the Atlantic she was hit by two torpedoes about midnight on Sept. 13, 1942. She sank fast and five officers and 109 were lost.

H.M.C.S. Restigouche, which had been affectionately nicknamed "Rusty Guts," was the workhorse of the fleet. She came through unscathed after many engagements and had to her credit one German submarine.

SAVED PRISONERS

H.M.C.S. St. Laurent, nicknamed the "Sally Rand," also survived the conflict with a tremendous record. One of her first acts on the Atlantic was to rush to the aid of the British steamer Arandora Star, which had been torpedoed on the morning of July 2, 1941. The Arandora Star was carrying 681 Italian prisoners of war to Canada. St. Laurent rescued most of them and steamed into port without even standing room on her decks.

St. Laurent next saved the Swedish steamer San Francisco, which caught fire on the Atlantic. From this job she was ordered on a submarine hunt and was credited with her first victory. Before the war was over she got her second German sub.

Of the two Royal ships the Princess Marguerite was lost in the Mediterranean in 1942 while carrying Indian troops from Port Said to Tobruk.

CAUGHT THE WESER

The Prince Robert proved to be the most spectacular ship of the R.C.N. She was taken to Vancouver shipyards and her great superstructure was removed, two funnels took the place of her peace time three, and she was converted into an auxiliary cruiser. The paint on her was hardly dry and her crew aboard when she was ordered to the Mexican coast to shadow the German express freighter Weser, which was reported ready to make a break for the open sea.

On the night of Sept. 25, 1940, Robert caught the Weser sneaking out and captured her, bringing her to Esquimalt.

Prince Robert then escorted the transport Awatea to Hong Kong with the ill-fated Canadian force. From there she helped shepherd the Canadian and U.S. forces which assaulted Kiska and Attu, only to find the Japs gone.

Prince Robert underwent her second conversion and went to the Atlantic as an anti-aircraft carrier, where she saw plenty of action. With the wind up of hostilities there she was sent to the Pacific and reached Hong Kong in time to send a landing party ashore to release the Canadians from a prison camp.

Prince Robert then came back to Victoria and was later sold.

Dartmouth College Where Prince Learnt Naval Ways

Naval cadets on parade in front of the Royal Naval College at Dartmouth. It was here that the Duke of Edinburgh (inset), then Philip Mountbatten, received his early naval training. A brilliant student, he was awarded the King's dirk as the best all round cadet of his term.

No Privileges Wanted By Navyman Prince

By STEPHEN SCHOFIELD

When the King and Queen, Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip visited the Isle of Arran in Scotland, big cars with chauffeurs and detectives stood waiting.

As the party walked over to the cars, Prince Philip spoke to the King, who smiled and remarked, "It's a very heavy car . . ."

The King and Queen got into one of the cars. Then Prince Philip opened the front door of another, helped Princess Elizabeth in, walked around and took the wheel himself—leaving a somewhat amazed chauffeur and detective to unaccustomed plush of the back seat.

This was a Royal drive without precedent.

LIKES TO SPEED

Prince Philip is a bit of a fire chief on the road. He has a snappy sports car and often drove a 100 miles from Corsham to Buckingham Palace in two and a half hours, which is pretty fast in England. Only the other day, in fact, the King reprimanded him for driving too fast—with a very important young lady beside him.

As a youth he wanted to enter the Royal Navy. His uncle was Lord Louis Mountbatten. Thus a certain very important person offered to facilitate his entrance.

"I'll get in on my own," said Prince Philip, "or not at all."

BEST ALL-ROUNDER

He came to England as a small boy, attended school at Gordonstoun in Scotland, thence to the Royal Naval College at Dartmouth, where he won the King's dirk and first prize as best all-round cadet.

As a midshipman he fought his first and only major fleet action at the Battle of Matapan. He was in charge of searchlight control when, in five minutes, three British battleships blew two Italian cruisers out of the water.

Once, two midshipmen off an armed merchant cruiser were being entertained at Halifax, Nova Scotia. They had difficulty holding their spoons and forks, their hands being badly blistered because, they explained, they had for a time been volunteer stokers when the Chinese stokers went on strike. One of the midshipmen was Prince Philip.

PINK GIN AT SEA

Prince Philip likes to drink beer ashore and gin afloat, his favorite wardroom drink—a pink gin. Generally he smokes cigarettes, occasionally a cigar.

He played skittles at a public house in Corsham, as a member of the ship's team. One of the regular customers said of him: "A cheery and unassuming bloke. We all like him."

His father was Prince Andrew of Greece, his mother Princess Alice, a great granddaughter of Queen Victoria. In February, 1947, he renounced his Greek titles and became a British subject. This cost him the same as it cost anyone else, £2.2.6, or about $30. Nine months later he was married.

FINISH IN HEDGE

In his MG sports car the Duke skidded around a corner near Corsham, knocked down an alder tree, smashed five yards of fencing and came to rest in a hedge.

The news was telephoned to Princess Elizabeth. She immediately set out in a car, without telling her parents, to his bedside.

Just after she left, another call came through to Buckingham Palace, that Prince Philip was only slightly hurt (limping and had a twisted knee).

When the King heard that his daughter had left, he called Scotland Yard. Mobile police stopped the Royal car just outside London.

Hence, a policeman explained to the Princess that Prince Philip was only slightly hurt. While speaking to her he turned his head away, for she was crying.

In 1948 a London taxi and private car collided at Hyde Park Corner. Taxi driven by M. M. Poluck. Car driven by the Duke of Edinburgh, who had his wife with him. Only damage: taxi dented.

"What's your name?" asked the taxi driver. "The Duke of Edinburgh," came the reply. A policeman noted the details. The Duke drove the Princess on to the Palace and then went to the Admiralty.

The speed limit on Constitutional Hill, which runs along by Buckingham Palace, is 20 m.p.h. Just before his wedding, the Duke was warned by a policeman for exceeding this limit. "I'm sorry, Officer," he said, "I have an appointment with the Archbishop of Canterbury."

ANXIOUS FATHER

When the Princess's baby, was about to be born, it was arranged that as the anaesthetic was being administered, the Duke should be present to comfort her, and to be the last person she saw as she lost consciousness; and then, when it was all over, to be again at her bedside, to be the first person she saw on regaining consciousness.

The Duke was extremely anxious. To relieve tension he went to the palace squash court—telling the doctors where they could find him—and knocked the ball about.

When he was called he hurried along the corridor, and stood at her bedside, still wearing the flannels and open shirt in which he had been playing squash.

Referring to baby Prince Charles, a visitor remarked, "He's the image of his father."

"I know," replied the Duke, "but maybe he will improve as he grows older." (The long noses on the Duke's mother's side are an old family joke.)

SPEECH WAS CHANGED

General F. "Boy" Browning, manager of Clarence House, once wrote a speech for the Duke, and went along to the function to listen.

"It was all different," he said. "It was not my speech at all. And I have not been asked to write another one since."

When the Duke speaks in public and the Princess is present her eyes never leave him.

FAVORITE DISH

His favorite dish is roast duck and apple sauce.

* * *

He refuses to wear the traditional Royal bowler hat. On some official occasions, he makes the concession of carrying a bowler, but he never puts it on.

* * *

At a party, before his engagement was announced, one girl was paying close attention to him. Prince Philip was heard to remark, "I'm booked."

The saluting Duke of Edinburgh was commander of his own ship in the Mediterranean before state duties interrupted his naval career.

Duke's Equerry Is Naval Friend

Equerry in waiting to the Duke and Duchess on the Canadian tour is Australian-born Michael Parker. A bronzed former Royal Navy lieutenant, he is private secretary to the Duke and a close personal friend.

Parker first met Prince Philip about 11 years ago when they were serving in the same flotilla on an east coast convoy route. Their friendship ripened later when, as first lieutenants on different destroyers they had the usual contacts between commanders.

PRINCESS LOVED HISTORY BUT SHE HATED ALGEBRA

By ALAN HARVEY

Elizabeth Alexandra Mary Windsor is a princess in the modern manner. Almost from infancy, her training and education have been influenced by a 20th-century concept that members of the Royal Family should enjoy greater freedom and informality.

One incident illustrates the new approach. On one of the victory nights in 1945, Princess Elizabeth whispered a few words to her father, threw a scarf over her head and with sister Margaret left the balcony of Buckingham Palace to mingle freely with the happy crowds.

It is even said the sisters joined in the sport of knocking off hats —something that would have been a sensation in Queen Victoria's day.

But if the human touch has not been wanting in Elizabeth's training, there has been no lack of emphasis on her responsibilities. The possibility that she might one day succeed to the throne has been recognized from the feverish days of her father's coronation. Even before that the Duchess of York, soon to become Queen Elizabeth, sought to instill in her daughter a sense of the courtesies demanded of royalty.

Her studies covered a wide range, but as Louis Wulff writes in the book, "Queen of Tomorrow," she was never "forced precociously in a hothouse of Royal learning, nor circumscribed in her studies and entertainment when she grew older."

Elizabeth's first lessons came at her mother's knee in a nursery on Piccadilly. When she reached school age it was decided she should be educated privately. For years she kept regular school hours in an upstairs room of the Picadilly residence, studying under Marion (Crawfie) Crawford, a graduate of Edinburgh University who became one of the Princess' closest friends.

Her favorite subjects were history, literature and languages. She disliked arithmetic and algebra. She became fluent in French and enjoyed the works of Moliere, Racine and Corneille. One of her early favorites was Alphonse Daudet's "Lettres De Mon Moulin."

But for the Second World War Elizabeth probably would have been the first British Princess to go into residence at a university. Instead it was decided to entrust her advanced studies to Sir Henry Marten, provost of Eton College. Her curriculum covered such relatively abstruse subjects as the theory and law of land tenure and the history of British agriculture. Controversial questions were not shirked and among other things Elizabeth received instruction on the French problem in Canada.

Before she even came of age an Act of Parliament stipulated that she would become regent of Great Britain in event of her father's disablement and that she would act as one of five counsellors of state, who discharge the sovereign's functions when he is absent from the realm.

PLACED A WREATH

One of her first major public duties was Nov. 11, 1945, when as representative of the youth of the Commonwealth she placed a wreath on the Cenotaph in Whitehall. Two years later, on her 21st birthday, she recognized the extent of her duties in a moving speech dedicating herself to the peoples of the Commonwealth.

As a child Elizabeth was quickly aware of her Royal status. On daily drives through Hyde Park, she precociously waved to cheering crowds on the streets. As early as her fourth birthday she took the salute from the Scots Guards.

At the height of the last war the voices of two young girls were heard over the radio one evening. They came from an underground studio of the BBC—a studio then without a name because it was in the heart of bomb-torn London.

One voice was that of the small Princess Margaret, bidding goodnight to all British children who had been evacuated to other countries.

The other was the voice of Margaret's not-so-much-bigger sister Elizabeth — grey-eyed and just 14.

"I can truthfully say to you, that all we children at home are full of cheerfulness and courage," said Elizabeth.

It was one of her first public speeches. Many more were to follow, but perhaps this and others she made as a child growing up in the midst of a broken world were the ones in which Elizabeth first touched the heart of a kingdom.

It was shortly after her 11th birthday in 1937 that her future suddenly became apparent to Elizabeth. She was still too young to realize the significance of the moment when Uncle David, Edward VIII, had abdicated and her father became George VI. But she came to understand in the little changes around home.

"MUMMIE" WAS QUEEN

The weight of what had happened fell upon her one day when she saw a letter addressed to "Her Majesty the Queen."

"That's mummie now, isn't it?" asked the small Elizabeth.

There were still carefree days for a girl who liked to collect cocoons, who could dance an Irish jig and ride a bicycle. But studies became more important than ever. And Queen Mary herself undertook to teach etiquette and diplomatic convention to young "Lilibet" as she was known throughout London.

Those were the growing-up years of the Princess Elizabeth Alexandra Mary who now as a young married woman of 25 is making her first visit to Canada.

When the war began Britain's future queen was a little girl wearing skirts up to her knees and indulging in good-natured wrestling with young Margaret. At its end she was a serious young woman.

Princess Elizabeth Asked For Dirty War Job—And She Got It

Princess Elizabeth work on a car engine? Soil her hands in grease and dirt? Let her drive a truck downtown and on the highway alone?

Oh, no. Certainly not. Suppose she had an accident, as anyone might? Too dangerous—for her. (That was the attitude of the British government).

But she did it. And more.

When her friends left to enter the war services, and later came home on leave, telling her of new adventures, the homecoming soldiers and excitement . . .

Despite official objection, the Princess pleaded to be allowed to enter the A.T.S. (similar to the C.W.A.C.) Her father agreed and made one stipulation: No favoritism.

The girls were divided into working parties of threes, and the two who were to be the Princess' closest companions were selected with some care. But that was all.

GIRLS KEPT SECRET

Thus, in secret, the Princess attended a training school somewhere in the south of England, with several hundred other girls, who were put on their honor to keep their mouths shut and treat her as they would anyone else—and, astonishingly, they did.

She learned to change tires, grind valves and decarbonize an engine—soiling her hands with grease and carbon, which she showed to her friends with much pleasure.

The first car she had to handle was a 1½-ton truck, then an ambulance, and later a staff car. On the road the Hon. 2nd Subaltern the Princess Elizabeth had to take her chance with the rest.

THROUGH PICCADILLY

Wearing battledress in a camouflaged army truck, she drove through London traffic, sometimes during blackouts, and around Piccadilly Circus twice. No police or outsiders knew. And no one recognized her.

What a thrill for her to drive through the gates of Buckingham Palace as the policeman on duty, who stopped the car, stood pop-eyed in astonishment when he recognized the girl in battledress, beaming with satisfaction, at the wheel of an army truck. He could scarce believe his eyes.

KING AMUSED

When the Princess came home on leave, conversation at Buckingham Palace sometimes dwelt on piston rings and spark plugs and horsepower, much to the amusement of the King.

When she finished the course in safety, high officials breathed more easily, and it was decided that repetitions of the risk were out of the question, a decision which the Princess then readily accepted.

Princess Learns About Engines

During the war the Princess joined the A.T.S. and took a course as a motor mechanic. When the King and Queen paid her a visit they found the Princess stretched under a truck smeared with oil but enthusiastic about her grease monkey job.

"Once Upon a Time..."

I was just 2 years old, my Daddy tells me, when the King & Queen, we went to see. About the whole thing, I wasn't very keen, because in OUR family . . . I reigned as Queen. So I kicked up a fuss, trouble, then some, & at two I could throw, a hefty tantrum. They got me up early, a secret hush-hush, so to get down town, before the big crush. On the Parliament lawns we waited for hours, Daddy kept tugging me away from the flowers.

With that hateful harness, 'n he used real force, instead of a Queen, I felt like a horse. Then a man stood up on some granite boulders, & I was hoisted on Daddy's shoulders. I was still annoyed from my broken routine, so I've no recollection of a King or Queen. I was pitched in the go-cart, & against my will, shot at great speed, over Beacon Hill. To a vantage point, thru the broom a loop-hole, the Queen powder-blue with a pert parasol. They left me a moment to better see, a bike had been thrown . . . there beside me. So while they thrilled at the colorful sight, from that bicycle chain, I got some graphite. And smeared my face & new pink dress. Mummy says I was . . . one royal mess. 'Course I didn't stay two, I had to grow, & one sad day, to school I did go. Where I learned to write & and then to read, soon 'Black Beauty' my favorite steed. The one day, I think I was seven, I went to a movie, 'n I thot it was Heaven. 'Cause I saw the Princesses in lovely clothes, Princess Elizabeth . . . and Margaret Rose. And then in the years gone between, of their lives I've read in a magazine. And wondered at times, I must confess, how I'd feel, if born a Princess. And if I'd be scared & much too frail, when MY Prince went in search of the Holy Grail?? And so I was thrilled, when he returned, & of their marriage I learned. And now they are here, myself can't convince, I'm to see the Princess & her handsome Prince. I'm not one for shouting, 'tho my heart will glow, but I know, this once, I'll let myself go. I'll be thinking too, as I wave and screech, how happy they'll be at Qualicum Beach. And imagine them strolling hand in hand, with the wind in their hair on the hard-packed sand. And the gold of the maples dripping down, on the easy head of curly brown. And then these embers, waved by a wand, as a gift for the Prince who is tall & blond. Just like it says in the fairy book rhyme, beginning as always with, "Once Upon a Time." And then going on . with Love and laughter, and so 'They Lived Happily Ever After."

Garden Where Many Royal Children Have Played

Charles and Ann like royal children of past generations find the garden at Clarence House a wonderful playground. Here they are with their parents, the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh in a recently taken picture inside the grounds.

Royal Couple Live In Historic London Home

By KATHLEEN COURLANDER

When Princess Elizabeth drove from Buckingham Palace to Westminster Abbey to be married on Nov. 20, 1947, she passed Clarence House which was to be her future town residence.

Clarence House, overlooking the Mall, lies about two or three minutes' walk from Buckingham Palace. It overlooks, too, the serrated roof of London's historic St. James's Palace, and is practically in line with Marlborough House, home of Queen Mary, outside of which two sentries stand.

As Clarence House suffered a certain amount of damage from air raids during the Second World War, the royal pair could not set up house there immediately.

Instead the Duke and Duchess rented the lovely Surrey country home of Windlesham Moor, near Sunningdale, which became their first home after their marriage.

Clarence House which is of brown grey stone stands on the site of a wing of St. James's Palace which was destroyed by fire. It as rebuilt during the years 1825-1829 for the Duke of Clarence, son of George III, who became William IV in 1830, and this monarch occupied it for some time after his accession.

When the house was finished for the Duke of Clarence, it was described as a handsome building with two stories, the lower being of the Doric and the upper of the Corinthian style of architesture. After William IV ceased to occupy it, Princess Augusta, the sixth child of George III lived there until she died in 1840.

For the next 20 years the house was lived in by Queen Victoria's mother, the Duchess of Kent. Some years after the Duchess's death in 1861, Queen Victoria ordered the house to be prepared for her second son, the Duke of Edinburgh.

He lived there with his wife, the Princess Marie Alexandrovna, only daughter of Alexander II, Czar of Russia. The Duke of Edinburgh made considerable alterations to Clarence House and transformed it into a three-storey building with 16 principal rooms. Exquisitely furnished, it became famous as one of the handsomest houses in London. It was this Duke who moved the entrance from opposite Stafford House in the quiet turning off Cleveland Row, St. James's, to a portico overlooking the garden and the Mall.

In 1901, Clarence House passed to the late Duke of Connaught, Queen Victoria's seventh child, and his wife. The Duchess of Connaught was an invalid and over the portico of Clarence House, a conservatory was built especially for her so that she could see the Mall and the trees in St. James's Park.

When the Duchess died in 1917, her apartments were preserved for many long years in the exact state in which she left them. On the death of the Duke of Connaught in 1942, during the Second World War, an auction sale was held and many of the treasures in Clarence House, the bronzes, the pictures and the furniture, were disposed of publicly.

RED CROSS WORK

Later the mansion, unoccupied by any member of the Royal family, was let to a branch of Britain's Red Cross and St. John organization for the direction of some important war work. Then they were replaced by Britain's Central Chancery of the Orders of Knighthood, who were working there in some of the rooms when the announcement was made regarding the future of Clarence House.

The great house is situated in a charming, quiet garden where Charles and Ann are the latest of many royal children to have spent many happy hours.

Princess Likes Informal Dinners

Britain's most-talked-about young married couple live at Clarence House in the heart of London and are raising two youngsters who are just as full of mischief as other children.

Princess Elizabeth and her husband like to entertain, frequently hold small semi-formal dinner parties to which guests are invited by phone the same day.

Elizabeth's favorite menu? Lobster soup, chicken Maryland (pieces of chicken dipped in egg and breadcrumbs) and fresh fruit trifle served with ice cream.

Quebec City's present to Princess Elizabeth was this yellow and white gold brooch of the city coat of arms. It is set in rubies. Mayor Lucien Borne presented the brooch during the Royal visit to Quebec.

HEADS SOCIETY, COLLEGE

In 1943 Princess Elizabeth became president of the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children and a short while later accepted the position of president of the Royal College of Music in place of the late Duke of Kent.

ANECDOTES OF PRINCESS

Prime Ministers Were No Problem To Lillibet

By STEPHEN SCHOFIELD

Princess Elizabeth is managing to cope with Louis St. Laurent. She has always been easy with Prime Ministers. Recognizing Ramsay Macdonald one day at the Palace, she went up to him and said, "I saw a picture of you in 'Punch.' But you were a gander leading some ducks."

On another occasion Stanley Baldwin was at the Palace. And a small boy, somewhat younger than the Princess, had arrived to play with her in the palace grounds.

The boy had a great fuzz of curly hair. The Princess took off her gloves in order to—as she said—"feel his hair." Then she led him up to Mr. Baldwin and remarked, "He's quite nice, isn't he?"

MUMMY WAS LOVELIEST

She became very friendly with the palace clock-winder, who came around once a week, and to whom she would divulge her latest news: "I've got a new nursery maid . . . the policeman outside is wearing a new stirrup . . . such lovely ladies to dinner last night, but Mummie was the beautifullest of them all . . ."

At first she could not pronounce "Elizabeth." She called herself "Lillibet."

One afternoon while listening to the band playing in the courtyard, an officer approached her pram, saluted and said: "Have we your Royal Highness's permission to dismiss?"

She responded with a solemn salute and shouted: "Yes, please," and then, turning to her nurse, she added, "Didn't Lillibet say it loud?"

Princess Elizabeth and her sister both learned to ride on Peggy, a pony. Peggy died, and a visitor, unaware of the tragedy, enquired, "Are you going to ride Peggy today?"

"No," said the Princess. "Peggy's dead. She's gone to heaven and I suppose Jesus is riding on her now, instead of that donkey Mother told us about."

When first told that some day she might be Queen, the Princess said, "If I am ever Queen, the first thing I shall do will be to make a law that people cannot drive horses on Sunday. Horses must have a holiday."

She used to call King George V "Grandpapa England." Between them they had an arrangement. At a certain time he would be at his window in Buskingham Palace, looking in the direction of her home, then on Piccadilly, and she would wave a handkerchief in his direction. Thus each day the two wished each other good morning.

He loved her. She loved him. When he died something irreplaceable went out of her life. For some time her health was affected. But she attended the funeral service, a pale little girl in black, tremulously she curtsied her last good-bye to Grandpapa England.

One evening during fervent prayer she was heard to ask for something to happen—something not altogether wise; someone told her—whereupon she added, "Oh, that will be all right. Grandpapa is up there now and he will see to it."

And another time she remarked, "Grandpapa is in heaven now, and I'm sure God finds him very useful."

REBUKED BY GRANDMA

She often went shopping with Queen Mary. One time a crowd gathered outside the shop into which the two had entered, and the Princess said to her grandmother, "Oh, there's a big crowd waiting to see me come out."

Queen Mary took her out by a back door, and no one saw her. The little girl, the Queen averred, must first learn to be a lady.

At her first concert, she became spellbound at the frenzied movements of the conductor. "Oh, Mummie," she whispered, "Look how his black hair is jumping!"

During another concert in Albert Hall, Princess Margaret put her feet on the velvet parapet of the royal box. This comfort did not last long. Princess Elizabeth's hand shot out and removed her sister's feet.

The Princess, shortly after moving into Buckingham Palace, and still rather awestruck with its wide open spaces, was coming downstairs with a guest one day. She noticed a letter on the hall table. She picked it up. It was addressed to "Her Majesty the Queen." "That's Mummie now, is it?" she asked, a slight tremble in her voice.

Later she was heard to complain, "Since Poppa turned King, I don't seem to be anybody at all!"

FIRST ENGAGEMENT

Princess Elizabeth carried out her first public engagement, the inspection of the Grenadier guards on her 16th birthday.

A LOVING COUPLE, THEY'RE ROYAL BUT REAL

Philip And Elizabeth Symbolize Youth, Hope, Charm, Good Looks And Domestic Happiness

Talking with Elizabeth and Philip is as uncomplicated as a visit with the folks next door.

For all the glamor and dignity that surround her as the first girl to stand directly in succession to the British throne for more than a century, Princess Elizabeth has the unfailing ability to put people immediately at their ease.

To her husband, Prince Philip, who has spent most of his life among the ordinary people of many lands, easy and informal conversation is as natural as breathing and as unpatronizing as a high school class reunion.

The 25-year-old Princess with the peach complexion has what is described as the "most generous smile in Europe." Her 30-year-old sailor Prince is six feet tall, athletic, and Viking-blonde. Together, they are more than a man and woman destined to some day rule the vast British Commonwealth of Nations as Queen and Consort.

In austere Britain—and even much further afield—they are an effective symbol of youth and hope, of domestic happiness, good looks, easy natural charm, and all the other factors that go to make up a real belief in the future.

The marriage of Elizabeth and Philip in 1947 was no "royal match made in the Chancelleries of Europe."

Elizabeth's father, King George VI, was far too liberal a monarch, too fond a parent and too conscious of his own happy marriage to permit anything other than a genuine love match for his daughter and heir presumptive.

MET CAPTAIN'S DOGGIE

In August, 1939, a year of great personal significance for Princess Elizabeth, she sailed with her parents and sister on the Royal Yacht for an official visit to the Royal Naval College at Dartmouth, England.

"Captain's Doggie" at the college was a blond naval cadet named Philip, who had to entertain Elizabeth and Margaret as part of his orderly duties while the King carried out inspection.

Obviously impressed with the tall young man whom she had met several times at the Lord Mountbatten house, Elizabeth proceeded to feed him a royal luncheon such as only a hungry young seaman could tackle.

Her instinct was accurate. When the visit was over and the King and his party set sail again, Philip rowed his dory so far out into the Channel in the wake of the royal yacht that he finally had to be ordered back.

ROMANCE BEGINS

Philip was on promotion leave when he again met Elizabeth, and the romance began in earnest.

But the romance of the young pair was not just roses all the way once they had discovered they were in love.

At first, there was the war. Philip went back to battle service, this time in the "little ships." At 21 he was first lieutenant on a destroyer, one of the youngest men in the Royal Navy to hold down such a responsible wartime job.

There were letters, but Elizabeth wanted a bigger share in the war. Finally, she broke down her father's opposition and, at 18, went to camp in the Auxiliary Transport Service.

Elizabeth and Philip saw each other fairly frequently in the last few months of the war. Whenever he could wangle leave from his temporary duties as instructor, he would burn up the road to London or Windsor to visit with the Royal Family.

OBVIOUSLY IN LOVE

It was obvious to the family that Elizabeth and Philip were in love, but the subject of possible marriage between them was never openly discussed.

The King and Queen admired Philip for his achievements as a naval officer, for his keen mind, and perhaps most of all for his integrity in maintaining strict silence—even among his closest friends—about his feelings for Elizabeth.

Since prolonged royal betrothals are traditionally frowned upon ("A change of mind would be bad for everyone concerned") Elizabeth and Philip, head-over-heels in love and longing to tell the world about it, had to behave as mere acquaintances.

Acting such a part had been tough enough for them when Elizabeth was in the public view only on official occasions. Now that she was in the social whirl it was worse. Only as individuals among a crowd of young socialites could they be together at all.

At that they had to appear completely disinterested. Even a privately shared joke had to be treated with decorum. For a couple to whom laughter was as natural as breathing, this, in itself was a major problem.

On the rare occasions when they dared dance together Elizabeth and Philip would fix it through one of their closest intimates for the band to play the "Oklahoma" hit tune, "People Will Say We're in Love."

That lyric—which both knew by heart—became the theme song for the sad little Princess and her Prince without-a-name.

WHOLE WORLD WATCHED

When eventually Philip, by Royal consent, slipped the betrothal ring on Elizabeth's finger and, for both of them, the world rejoiced. The long months of waiting to declare their love were over.

On their wedding eve, Philip had been created Duke of Edinburgh, Baron Grenwich, Earl of Marioneth and had his right to the title "Prince" restored to him by the King.

Their wedding was celebrated before the assembled royalty of Europe and a great host of nobles and commoners in Westminster Abbey on Nov. 20, 1947. It was a wedding the whole world watched.

Without a home of their own, Elizabeth and Philip returned from their honeymoon to live for a while in the Princess' old apartments in Buckingham Palace. Philip told his friends: "We're moving in with the in-laws."

However, Clarence House—just across the Mall from the Palace—was being restored for them and much of their first months of married life was spent in planning the way they wanted their home to look and feel.

While Elizabeth selected the furniture and supervised the decorations, Philip—a gadget fan from 'way back—spent hours at home exhibitions looking for modern labor-saving devices.

In making decisions for herself on matters which affect both her public and private life, Elizabeth showed that her preparations for Queenship do not include a fear of personal criticism.

She already knows from her ailing father that the job of a constitutional sovereign is no sinecure, nor just a matter of parades, processions and ceremonial.

Elizabeth will have a constant finger on the nation's political pulse when, with the support and undoubted guidance of Philip, she will act as Regent for the King during his visit to Australia next year.

As Consort to Elizabeth, the quickly maturing Philip also faces a difficult and delicate task. In each there has emerged an independence of personality which, fortunately, is complementary each to the other.

HE RULES AT HOME

But while Elizabeth must always be in the forefront of affairs of state, there has never been any doubt who is the leader of their domestic life and master of the home.

Philip is directing the upbringing of their children and has firmly insisted that his son, Prince Charles (second in line of succession to the Throne), shall not be spoiled by a predominantly feminine household. For instance, he has forbidden any further gifts of toys to Charles until Christmas.

These facts do not mean that there is or has been any clash of wills between Elizabeth and Philip. They are in fact just a young couple very much in love.

Just Another Happy Family

Fairy Tale Princess In Fairy Tale Setting

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Princess Elizabeth's standard is flying tonight atop the flagpole on the Government House lawn that faces out to the Olympic Mountains.

And watching it flutter in the breeze, every Victorian knows that the most outstanding moment in the history of the 47-year-old castle has come—and is nearly gone.

There have been other great moments at Government House as each succeeding Lieutenant-Governor has played host to distinguished visitors.

But none has ever had as romantic an appeal as the present visit of England's fairy-tale Princess and her Prince Charming.

Lights blaze in the windows of the 47-year-old castle tonight, etching vine-covered turrets and the mellowed brick walls in an aura of subdued light.

Framed in a background of great trees that move fitfully in the late autumn winds, Government House has a look of quiet pride, for within its walls a Princess walks and talks.

BUILT IN 1904

The present turreted stone and brick castle was built in 1904, when Sir Henri Joly de Lotbiniere was Lieutenant-Governor.

It stands at an elevation of some three hundred feet above the sea, and barely a mile from the southern shoreline of the Island.

There is a commanding view from every window: To the east, the Gulf of Georgia, Mt. Baker and the mountains of the lower mainland; to the south, the Strait of Juan de Fuca and the Olympic Mountains in the State of Washington, and to the west, Victoria and the Sooke Hills.

Eastern and southern views from the terrace around the house are world-famous and have been painted, sketched, etched and captured on color film by many distinguished persons who have stayed at Government House while in Victoria.

There are approximately 28 acres of grounds, laid out in flower gardens, shrubberies, lily pools and kitchen gardens, after the manner of an English country home.

HAS 30 ROOMS

Government House is not large as official residences go, containing only 30 main rooms. These include, on the first floor, the dignified entrance hall, the official quarters of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Wallace, small private drawing-room, state drawing-room, ball-room, sun room, dining room with service rooms attached, kitchens and the office of the private secretary and staff.

On the second floor is the royal suite, containing bedroom, sitting room and bathroom, a second suite containing bedroom, dressing room and bathroom, His honor's private suite, Mrs. Wallace's private suite and in an attached wing, offices.

Servant's sleeping quarters are on the third floor and there is a large games room down a short stairs from the main floor.

VISITED BY KING

The only British King or Queen who have stayed at Government House are Princess Elizabeth's parents, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, but members of the Royal Family and many other distinguished persons have on many previous occasions, been visitors at the present Government House and at Cary Castle, first Government House, which burned at the turn of the century.

There was the Marquis of Lorne and Princess Louise, Marquis and Marchioneess of Dufferin and Ava, the Earl and Countess of Aberdeen, Lord and Lady Jellicoe, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and Princess Patricia, the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, Lord and Lady Byng, Lord and Lady Bessborough, Lord and Lady Tweedsmuir, Viscount Alexander of Tunis, Viscountess Alexander and Princess Elizabeth's uncles, the Prince of Wales, now Duke of Windsor and the late Duke of Kent.

PROLONGED THEIR STAY

When the Marquis of Lorne and Princess Louise visited Victoria on their world tour in 1882, their original intention was to stay 10 days, but so delighted were they with this city and the view from the terrace of what was then Cary Castle, and Princess Louise was so anxious to sketch some of the view from this terrace, they prolonged their visit for 10 weeks.

And in his diary the Marquis of Lorne wrote: "No words can be too strong to express the charm of this beautiful spot!"

Yesterday afternoon, Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip arrived at Government House. They looked from the windows on the same scene of mountains and sea; perhaps they strolled on the same terrace, changed only through the passage of time and the wishes of succeeding chatelaines at Government House.

So history repeats itself!

Battle-Scarred Hero At Esquimalt

After sinking two German cruisers in 1915, H.M.S. Kent hirpled into Esquimalt for refit. In the battle of Falkland Islands she sank the German cruiser Nurnberg, and then disposed of another cruiser, the Dresden, which had escaped from the battle and was seeking safety in the harbor of Juan Fernandez.

Esquimalt Has 106 Years Of Proud Naval History

By ARCHIE H. WILLS

For over a century, Esquimalt has been a naval base. From 1845 until 1905 it was used by the Royal Navy and from 1910 until the present time has been the home of the Pacific squadron of the Royal Canadian Navy.

H.M.S. America was the first ship of the Royal Navy to be stationed here. She arrived in 1845.

Since then Esquimalt has been a useful base in three wars. In 1854, five ships flying the White Ensign were stationed here, but when war with Russia broke out the squadron was reinforced by three more warships. Russia, in those days, owned Alaska and cast covetous eyes on other parts of the continent. The tension eased in 1856.

Duke of Gloucester, uncle of Princess Elizabeth is acting for the convalescent King during the heiress presumptive's Canadian tour.

When war came on Aug. 4, 1914, an old-fashioned cruiser, H.M.C.S. Rainbow, was stationed at Esquimalt. She was the nucleus of the Canadian Navy, which had been instituted in 1910. Rainbow went on patrol off the Pacific Coast as it was feared units of the German fleet which had escaped from China would make for this coast. Rainbow just escaped a brush with the German cruiser Leipzig off San Francisco. Ships of Britain and Japan used Esquimalt as a refueling and provisioning base for the four years of the war.

BOUGHT TWO SUBS

Esquimalt saw one of its strangest sights in August, 1914. People here were fearful that the German fleet might bombard this area. Ottawa was far away from harm and offered little help. Sir Richard McBride, Premier of British Columbia, took matters into his own hands and purchased two Chilean submarines, Iquique and Antofagasta, which were awaiting delivery in Seattle. He paid $1,500,000 for them.

The two subs sneaked into Esquimalt harbor during a fog and, when sentries sighted them, batteries were alerted and almost fired on the craft.

Residents here felt much relieved when it was announced the submarines would protect the coast.

However, what they did not know was that the submarines had no torpedoes and that in the whole of Canada there were only two men who had had any submarine experience. These major defects, however, were corrected in a couple of weeks and the subs were a familiar sight off the waterfront.

DID YEOMAN SERVICE

It was a different story when war struck in 1939. Esquimalt had developed considerably and four modern destroyers were based here. There was no danger on the Pacific at that moment and the need for ships for Atlantic convoy was urgent so the four destroyers—Ottawa, Restigouche, St. Laurent and Fraser, which only a few months before had formed the escort for the King and Queen on their trip to and from Victoria—were hurriedly despatched to the east coast.

After the attack on Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941, Esquimalt was in a dither. With the United States fleet badly disabled, the Royal Canadian Navy threw out a thin screen over much of the Pacific Coast. By this time many corvettes, minesweepers and Fairmiles had been constructed and they did a yeoman job in those perilous days.

It was during the Japanese pressure at Kiska and Attu, with the threat of further extension of their eastern advance towards this coast, that a massive object appeared off Esquimalt. It turned out to be the greatest ship afloat, the Queen Elizabeth. She had been hustled here to enter drydock for painting and construction of additional accommodation for troops, which she would take from California to Australia.

Esquimalt had the only available drydock on the Pacific that could accommodate the Queen Elizabeth. There was considerable concern while she was in dock as everyone felt that the Japs would surely stage an air raid and disable her. However, nothing happened.

The only prize the Canadian navy took on the Pacific during the Second World War was brought into Esquimalt. The auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert, under command of Cmdr. Charles Beard, had shadowed the German express freighter Weser off the Mexican coast and put a prize crew aboard her before the Germans could scuttle her. The Weser's crew, as prisoners of war, were taken ashore here and the ship was reconditioned for the merchant navy. She was later torpedoed in the Atlantic.

MOST SCARRED SHIP

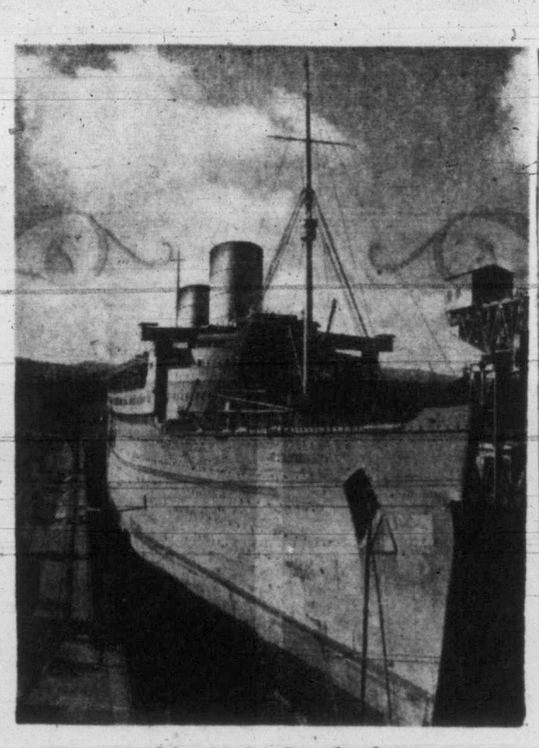
The most battle-scarred ship to anchor in Esquimalt harbor was H.M.S. Kent. She arrived May 24, 1915, after being in two naval engagements. In the Battle of the Falkland Islands she pitted her armament against the German cruiser Nurnberg and sank her. Then coming up the Pacific Coast she caught the German cruiser Dresden, the only enemy ship to escape from the Falkland Island battle, in harbor at Juan Fernandez. In five minutes Dresden was sent to the bottom. By this time Kent was in need of repairs and her crew wanted some relaxation. Capt. John D. Allen brought Kent to Esquimalt for a spell.

Over the years, and particularly since the outbreak of the Second World War, Esquimalt has made other contributions to the cause of freedom. Its shipyards have built many craft, including corvettes, frigates and minesweepers and a number of merchant ships. And it has done its part in training officers and men to man these ships.

No old-timer will forget the loss of H.M.S. Condor in December, 1901. She was a sloop-of-war, manned by 125 officers and men. She had finished her commission at Esquimalt and was homeward bound for Portsmouth. She cleared the harbor on Dec. 2.

That night a violent southwest gale broke off Cape Flattery. Nothing more was heard of the Condor.

Some time later a lifebuoy bearing the lettering "H.M.S. Condor" was picked up on the west coast of Vancouver Island. It now hangs in St. Paul's Naval Church in Esquimalt.



Lizzie In Drydock

When the Queen Elizabeth needed drydock facilities during the war, there was nowhere else in the Pacific except Esquimalt where she could be drydocked. This picture shows the world's greatest liner on her appearance here during the height of the Pacific warfare. The Queen Elizabeth took her name from the Queen who christened her at her launching at John Brown's yard on the Clyde.

PREMIER'S WELCOME TO ROYAL COUPLE

I wish to express the sentiments of the people of British Columbia and say how happy we are to welcome to this most westerly province of Canada Their Royal Highnesses Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh.

"In extending our welcome we couple with it our sincere good wishes for a very pleasant trip as well as our expressions of deep devotion and fealty."

BYRON JOHNSON,
Premier of British Columbia.

Officers For Canadian Services Train At Dunsmuir's Old Home

Few will probably recall that after the First World War a lively Royal Canadian Naval College thrived at Esquimalt. Many of our past and present senior officers got their start there. By 1922 people were convinced that there would be no more wars and felt anyone wanting to spend money on the armed services was a war-mongerer. The Dominion government closed the naval college.

When the guns of war began to bark in 1939 Canada was really alive to the need of adequate personnel for its navy. Hatley Park, the mansion of the Dunsmuirs facing on the Esquimalt Lagoon, was purchased by the government for a reputed $75,000.

It became a training centre for officers for the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve. Six classes of 125 officers each were hustled through three-month courses and graduated with rank of sub-lieutenant.

With sufficient personnel trained Admiral Percy Nelles, the mainspring of Canada's great naval effort, decided to make Hatley Park, which had been renamed H.M.C.S. Royal Roads, a Royal Canadian Naval College. Boys with high school graduation standards were selected from all over Canada and sent there for a two-year course.

This type of training continued until it was evident that there must be closer co-operation between the services. Royal Roads became a college for three services and was renamed Canadian Services College. Today, cadets from the R.C.N., Army and R.C.A.F. are training there and their different uniforms are familiar to all Victorians.

A great training base for ratings is maintained at H.M.C.S. Naden. At certain times there have been a thousand men there. Naden has certain climatic advantages over the east coast, where H.M.C.S. Cornwallis was a tremendous training centre during the last war.

THE UNVISITED

Written for the people of the remoter parts of our island, who cannot hope to see the royal visitors.

This is the song, Elizabeth,
Of the unvisited.
It is the sound
Of words you will not hear,
From lips you will not see.
It is the welcome
Of the furthest
West.

Far up the shore, Elizabeth,
Are friendly faces
Browned by the sun
And by our western wind . . .
And their eyes, too, are lit
By the far greeting
Of the furthest
West.

These, too, have paused, Elizabeth,
To say Godspeed to you.
And though their hands
Are scaled by fish or roughed
By axe, or hempen rope . . .
Listen! That is the clapping
Of the furthest
West.

High rise the hills, Elizabeth,
And deep the thunder
Of the western sea.
Far sweep the trees, and over them
The lost skycalling of
Our wild geese on the wing.
White man, and Indian,
And long-forgotten totems in the mist.
This is the song, Elizabeth,
Of the unvisited!

—CECIL MAIDEN.

HIS MAJESTY KING GEORGE VI

A Salute To The Royal Family

HER MAJESTY QUEEN ELIZABETH

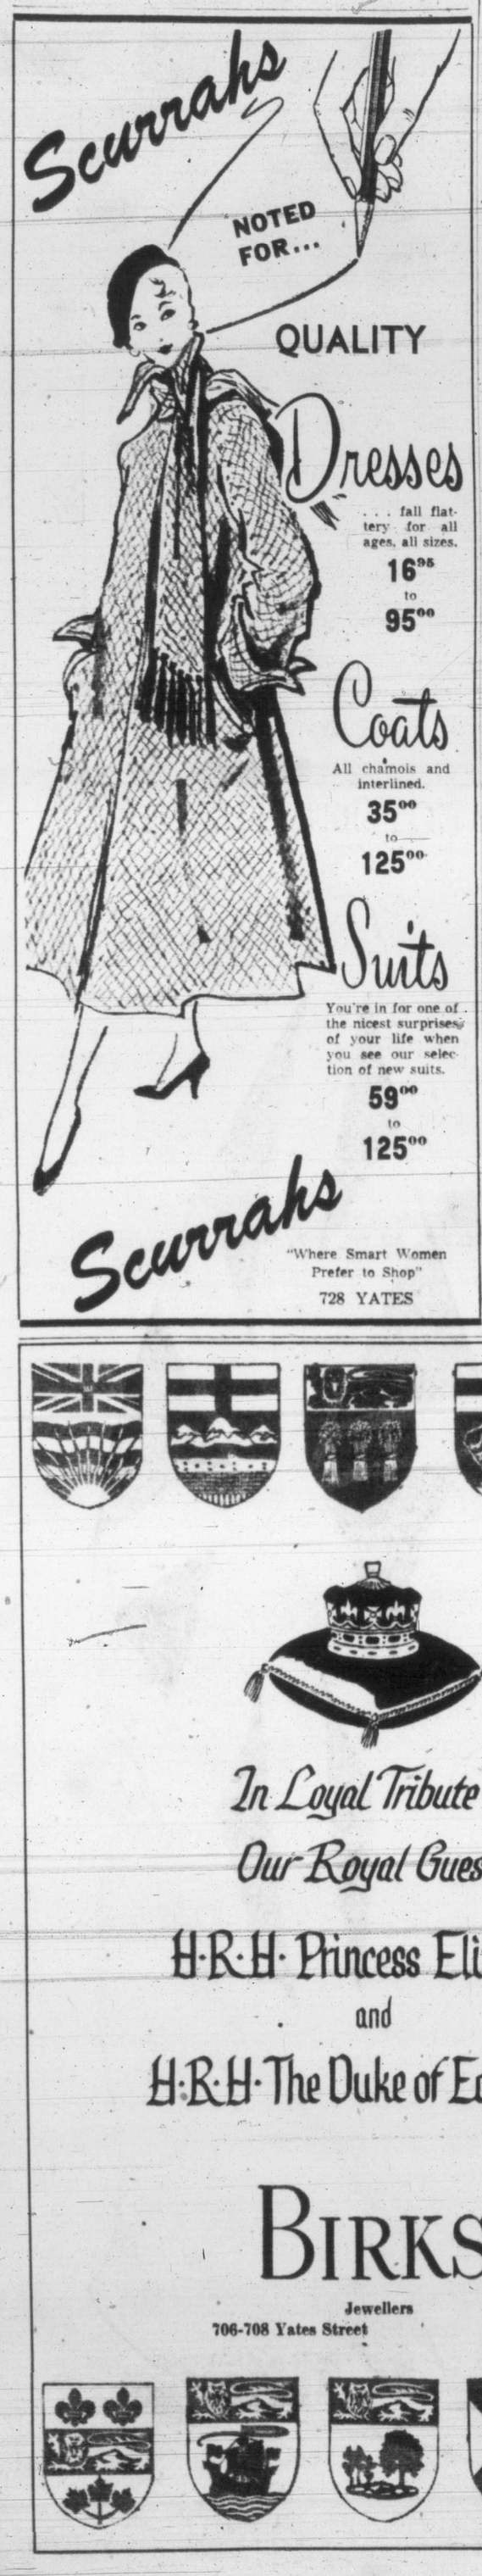
On the occasion of the visit of Their Royal Highnesses The Princess Elizabeth and The Duke of Edinburgh, Vancouver Island takes this opportunity – by the very tone of its welcome – to salute Their Majesties King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

In the hearts of Canadians is a special regard for the Queen Mother, herself a gracious queen for a quarter of a century and guiding influence of two sons who succeeded to the Throne.

BELOVED MATRIARCH OF THE COMMONWEALTH

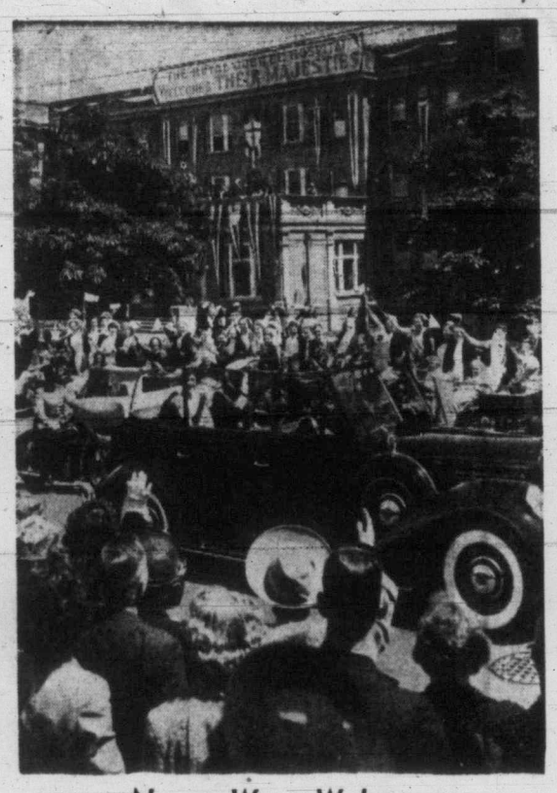
B.C. Gave Teaset As Wedding Gift

Canada gave the Prince and Princess many gifts for their wedding, among them a valuable mink coat. The government and the people of British Columbia gave a silver tea set. It was copied from a richly chased design of 1720.



King And Queen Gaze On Vancouver Island From Steamer Bridge

Last time royalty visited Victoria was in 1939, when the King and Queen were given a tumultuous welcome. This picture shows them aboard the old Princess Marguerite as they approached Vancouver Island.



Nurses Wave Welcome

As the King and Queen passed the Royal Jubilee Hospital in their open maroon car, nurses and patients lined the sidewalks to give Their Majesties a rousing welcome.

Victoria Gave King And Queen Welcome In Old England Style

Ring Of Bonfires Lit Coastline As Royal Couple Arrived

Victoria's welcome to King George and Queen Elizabeth was royal in every sense of the word, as a matter of fact, it was truly "a little bit of old England."

It was only natural that this capital, named after the illustrious grandmother of the King, should see that everything was done right. There was no question, as there had been in other parts, as to what the dress should be. Everyone put on his best bib and tucker. Even the members of the City Council were turned out in full formal dress, despite the fact that here the civic ceremonies were overshadowed by those at Government House and the Parliament Buildings.

Esquimalt, as headquarters for the Pacific Division of the Royal Canadian Navy, was able to give a modest touch of the atmosphere the Royal Navy lends to the big shows in Britain.

Victoria even revived a scene from the white cliffs of Dover way back in 1588 when huge fires were lighted on the headlands to warn Britons of the approach of the Spanish Armada.

Boy Scouts and Sea Cadets set ablaze great 20-foot-high beacons on Gordon Head, which was a signal that the Royal ship Princess Marguerite and her naval escort was in sight from that point. As the vessels moved along Victoria's extensive waterfront new beacons broke out on Ten Mile Point, Trial Island, Gonzales Point, Grassy Point, Macaulay Point and Albert Head.

THRILLING SPECTACLE

As the ships steamed closer to Victoria Harbor groups of excited people increased in size. Along the Dallas Road waterfront 10,000 persons thrilled to this spectacle, which probably will never be repeated again. Princess Marguerite, with Their Majesties on the bridge, slipped along at 20 knots with the four Canadian destroyers, Ottawa, St. Laurent, Restigouche and Fraser (all of which were to see action on the Atlantic before the year's end) in line ahead. Overhead were planes of the R.C.A.F.

In through the narrow harbor at reduced speed the Princess Marguerite swept and when she passed Laurel Point it looked as though she were entering Fairyland. On shore Roman candles fluttered and the myriads of lights on the Parliament Buildings, Empress Hotel, Post Office, C.P.R. station and other buildings sparkled in the twilight, which was being wetted by a shower.

As the Princess Marguerite tied up the welcoming party of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Eric Hamber, Premier and Mrs. T. D. Pattullo and Mayor and Mrs. Andrew McGavin, with their aides and secretaries, were presented to Their Majesties and accompanied them along the gangway to Belleville Street.

A wild burst of cheering broke out as the party emerged. The King, as befitted his arrival at this historic naval centre, wore his uniform as Admiral of the Fleet. He inspected the smart Guard of Honor.

VICTORIA LOVED THEM

Then Victorians got their first sight of the large, maroon colored motor cars, which had carried Their Majesties on their tours in many Canadian cities. The large cars, flying the Royal Standard, were specially constructed for Their Majesties. One of them is now locally owned and a familiar sight on the streets.

Slowly the Royal party moved off towards Government House and soon Victorians were introduced to the favorite gestures of the Queen, her smile and the waving of her right hand. The King, with his keen eyes, swept the masses of spectators. He was continually saluting, and occasionally drew the Queen's attention to some particular sight. Instantly the public took Their Majesties to their hearts.

Government House was the home of Their Majesties for two nights and a day. It had been redecorated and the suites occupied by them had received the special attention that only the Hambers could give.

ROYAL STANDARD HOISTED

As soon as they took up residence in Government House the red, gold and blue Royal Standard was hoisted on the flagpole and was illuminated by flood lights.

Next day the King and Queen set off early on a round of engagements. The weather was warm and bright and they first drove to the City Hall. The dingy interior of the hall had been craftily concealed by wise use of masses of bunting and there was plenty of red carpet.

Mayor McGavin and Mrs. McGavin welcomed them and they climbed the many stairs to the council chamber, where members of the council and reeves of the municipalities were presented. Mayor McGavin presented the King with an illuminated address, encased in a miniature totem pole.

Across the Causeway the party proceeded, again through dense lines of cheering people, to the Parliament Buildings. Premier Pattullo and Mrs. Pattullo welcomed them and walked to the top of the stone steps, where the public ceremonies were held. Mr. Pattullo read an illuminated address and the King handed his reply to the Premier. Anne Collinson, granddaughter of the Pattullos, presented the Queen with a bouquet of pink roses and lily of the valley.

After this ceremony the party moved into the Legislative chamber, where members of the Legislature were formally presented.

CROWD LINED STREETS

From the Parliament Buildings the King and Queen started on their 13-mile tour through the City. They were accompanied by their special escort of Mounties, in their red coats and mounted on silver motorcycles. The tour went through Victoria West, across the Gorge to Saanich and back through Oak Bay. There were crowds everywhere.

Back to the Empress Hotel for the luncheon tendered by the Provincial Government. Before they went in to the luncheon a group of judges and ministers was presented to the King and Queen. When one looks over these lists of people who were presented it is surprising how many have died in the intervening years.

The luncheon, presided over by Premier Pattullo, carried special significance in view of the fact that the King made a broadcast, which was heard in many parts of the world.

Just before the King arose to speak there was a moment of uneasiness. A flash of fire and an explosion shattered the quiet of the room. A flash bulb being handled by the official photographer, had exploded.

SIGNIFICANT SPEECH

The King spoke for 10 minutes and in concluding said: "Some day the peoples of the world will come to realize their prosperity lies in co-operation and not in conflict. With the dawn of that brighter day, I look to Canada playing an increasingly important part in furthering friendly relations between the east and west. With the widening of her role of international interpretation will come corresponding benefits to mankind."

Within a little more than three months the Second World War broke out.

It seemed significant that his next official act in Victoria should be the presentation of his colors to the Royal Canadian Navy. It was the first time in history that a ruling sovereign had personally presented his colors (a White Ensign of silk with a Crown and Royal Cypher superimposed and with blue and gold tassels) to any of his naval forces outside the British Isles.

NAVAL CEREMONY

It was a beautiful, warm afternoon, and Beacon Hill Park was jammed with upwards of 25,000 people. The ceremony was very impressive and the naval units on parade, small in comparison to the R.C.N. today, were very smart. Capt. Victor G. Brodeur, (now a retired rear-admiral) was in charge of the naval base at that time.

Lt.-Cmdr. E. P. Tisdall, who now is a captain and in command of H.M.C.S. Ontario, was in command of the color guard.

Lieut. J. C. Hibbard, now a commodore in charge of naval personnel in Ottawa, was color officer and knelt before the King to receive the colors.

Lt.-Cmdr. H. F. Pullen, now a commodore in charge of H.M.C.S. Stadacona, Halifax, commanded the escort company.

Lt.-Cmdr. A. C. Wurtele, now retired and a councillor in Esquimalt, commanded the company lining the streets.

Following this ceremony the King and Queen retired to Government House for dinner and watched the fireworks display from their excellent vantage point.

Next morning, May 31, Their Majesties left Government House at 9.40 and proceeded via the waterfront once more jammed with school children and adults alike, to the Canadian National Railway docks, where their farewells were said.

WAVED THEIR FAREWELLS

On the next phase of their journey they were to be in the hands of the Canadian National Railway, covering the northern route through Jasper, Edmonton and Saskatoon. They had as their Royal Ship, the Prince Robert, which later became a famous auxiliary cruiser in the Royal Canadian Navy.

As the Prince Robert passed the breakwater, crowded with Victorians, eager to get their last fleeting glimpse of the couple, a salute was fired from Work Point Barracks. The naval escort fell into line and the airplanes took position overhead. From the bridge of the Robert two lovely people were waving their hands in farewell.

The return across the continent and into the United States was marked by one triumph after another, but it is doubtful if anywhere the greetings were more sincere and heartwarming than in Victoria.

Queen Elizabeth Charmed All Canada

Cross Country Tour Was Triumph For Royal Pair

At 9.30 a.m. on May 17, 1939, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth stepped ashore from SS. Empress of Australia at Wolfe's Cove, Quebec City. The sun shone brightly.

At 9 p.m. on May 29, 1939, Their Majesties walked on to the soil of Victoria from S.S. PrincessMarguerite. It was almost dark and a few raindrops were falling.

During the 12½ days between those two dates Canadians witnessed scenes of great joy and happiness as the Royal Couple traveled from city to city. The warm-hearted greetings tendered them had never extended to anyone previously and have not been duplicated since.

The King in his manly, humble, almost shy way, made such an impression that the ties that bind Canada and the Motherland were unmistakably drawn tighter. He wore with dignity the resplendent uniforms of Admiral of the Fleet, Field Marshal and Air Marshal. Sometimes he appeared in smart business suits, in which he seemed more relaxed.

He shook thousands of hands and returned or gave countless salutes. He made speeches, signed bills as King of Canada and put at ease many tense leaders of this country who had come to meet him for the first time.

The Queen in her homey, attractive way actually stunned the people of Canada. They had not expected such an amazing woman with a happy knack of winning favor by the toss of her head, a pleasant smile or the coy wave of her right hand.

Like the King she shook many hands and had bright words for many people. Her wardrobe was a revelation to the women of the country and her off-the-face hats set a style for some time. Her gowns, especially the one she wore to the Senate chamber in Ottawa, made women sigh.

It was, however, the thoughtfulness of the King and Queen for each other that left the greatest impression. It seemed that they were the ideally married couple. This thoughtfulness which they showed towards each other often was in evidence in other ways as they traversed the broad dominion.

In sparsely settled, wooded or rocky country, or in the vast spaces of the praries, the King and Queen interrupted their duties on the Royal Train to appear on the rear platform to wave greetings to small groups of people, or even to a lonely man. They missed no opportunity to let Canadians know that they admired them.

In those 12½ days between the arrival of the King and Queen at Quebec City and at Victoria there were many history-making events, witnessed in some cases by tremendous crowds and in other cases by selected representatives of the people.

THE KING ARRIVES

The one which took the pre-eminent spot was the actual setting foot on Canadian ground for the first time by the King of Canada. Prior to that little thought had been given to the oft-repeated phase," and of his dominions overseas." But on May 17, 1939—two days late due to the fact that the Empress of Australia had been cornered in a dangerous ice field—Canada really had a King.

Within a few minutes of their landing at Wolfe's Cove the King and Queen were seated in the red chamber of the Parliament Buildings in the capital of the province of Quebec. It was an historic, as well as an unusual setting. Quebec is the only province which has a lower and upper house. The King and Queen sat in two beautiful chairs with the Crucifix set between them. Off to the King's right sat the Roman Catholic cardinal, Villeneuve.

WON OVER QUEBEC

The crowds of French-Canadians lining the routes had been quiet and reserved. After the luncheon given by the government of Canada in the Chateau Frontenac to the King and Queen things changed, the crowds were excited and shouting.

What caused the change? It was unquestionably the King's speech. It was his first broadcast of the tour. He spoke in English and then, after a short pause, he repeated the speech in French. In the banquet hall the faces of the French-Canadians lit up, especially the cardinal's. The King won Quebec by this tribute to the French-Canadians.

On to Montreal moved the Royal train. The night scene outside the Windsor Hotel was probably the most spontaneous and uproarious of the tour. One hundred thousand people jammed into Dominion Square and cheered for hours. The King and Queen, in their customary manner, made several appearances on the balcony, but the crowd was not satisfied. Time and again the Royal couple, smiling, laughing and thoroughly enjoying the great demonstration, returned to the balcony to wave their hands.

VISIT TO SENATE

Ottawa provided several history-making events, but the major one was the visit of the King and Queen to the Senate, where members of both Houses were gathered. It was one of the most notable gatherings in this country's lifetime. All living Privy Councillors had been summoned to be present.

The King, for the first time, wore his tight, smart uniform as a field marshal. The Queen, in a fabulous crinoline, seemed almost to float into the chamber. She was strikingly beautiful. Then for the first time the King gave Royal assent to a number of bills.

When he addressed the joint Houses he said: "It is my earnest hope that my present visit may give my Canadian people a deeper conception of their unity as a nation. I hope also that my visit to the United States will help to maintain the very friendly relations existing between that great country and the nations of the Commonwealth.

"These visits, like the one recently made by the Queen and myself to the continent of Europe, will, we trust, be viewed as an expression of the spirit of our peoples which seeks ardently for clearer friendship and better relations not only with our kith and kin but with the peoples of all nations and races."

When one looks back today and remembers that these words were uttered four months before the Commonwealth and France were thrusted into the Second World War he must be impressed with the timeliness of the visit of the King and Queen to not only Europe and Canada but especially to the United States, where they were given a terrific reception.

PLUCKED AT HEART-STRINGS

For a scene that really plucked at the heart-strings one can recall the unveiling of the National War Memorial in Ottawa. In order to provide a fitting and lasting tribute to the men of this nation who fell in the First World War the government purchased property worth $600,000 in the heart of the city, commissioned the Marsh brothers to cast a bronze statue for $160,000 and paid $124,000 for the stonework.

In addition to the great assemblage of dignitaries at the base of the Memorial there were gathered thousands of war veterans, including several holders of the Victoria Cross, together with blind and disabled former fighting men.

After unveiling the Memorial Their Majesties walked along the red carpet, the Queen in the lead. As so often happened with her, she sensed a yearning among the war veterans for a closer look at her husband. With a nod of the head and flick of her hand, gestures which become familiar as the tour progressed, the Queen attracted the attention of the King.

Instantly she headed towards the veterans, the King following. Before the Royal entourage realized it Their Majesties were swallowed up by the ex-servicemen. There was slight alarm but afterwards one of the party commented: "Where better could they be lost than with the men who had fought for the King's father?"

For half an hour they slowly made their way through the crowd. Men reached out just to touch the the coat of the Queen. They hoped for a smile from the King. The old sweats broke out with "For he's a jolly good fellow," the most unusual tribute the King received in his long trip.

When they emerged from the obviously thrilled vets the Quegn asked to see the blind ex-servicemen. She asked if Walter Williamson of Toronto, with whom she had played as a girl in the grounds of Glamis Castle, was in the group. He came forth and they talked of the old days. Walter kissed her hand when she said goodbye.

Arrival At Victoria

Escorted by Lieut.-Governor Eric W. Hamber and Mrs. Hamber, the King and Queen step from the C.P.R. pier to make the first appearance of their 1939 tour in the City of Victoria. (Picture by Irving Strickland.)

In contrast to this memorable occasion was the garden party at Rideau Hall, home of the Governor-General, when 3,000 people were presented to Their Majesties.

MET QUINTUPLETS

In Toronto the spectacular program there was overshadowed by the appearance of the Dionne quintuplets. Upwards of a million people lined the routes of the procession both in Montreal and Toronto, but only the elite saw the quints. The Legislative Assembly in Toronto, was packed and after the formalities were over Premier Hepburn crossed the floor on the chamber leading the five little girls, as proudly as if he had been the papa of them. It was an exhilarating sight.

The quints had been privately presented to the King and Queen previous to the visit to the chamber and Yvonne broke every rule of royal etiquette when she rushed across the floor, threw her arms around the Queen's neck and kissed her on both cheeks.

His Majesty proceeded to the Woodbine race track where he witnessed the running of the King's Plate. The King presented the prize to the owner of the winning horse, George McCullough, publisher of the Globe and Mail.

Now it was off for the Great West. Behind lay the dignified east, fussy of dress and fond of adherence to formalities. What of the West?

LABORITE WORE "TOPPER"

Winnipeg's mayor was John Queen, a stalwart laborite. Some of his aldermen were labor representatives. It was said that Mayor Queen would not wear a silk hat and morning frock coat. Someone in Toronto sent him an outfit.

It was raining hard when the Royal Train pulled into Winnipeg. The King wore his naval uniform and refused to have the top of the car raised. This gesture moved the drenched crowd and they roared a welcome.

The city council had decided on an open-air reception. The platform was soaked and men stood holding the folded red carpet. When the King and Queen arrived the men unrolled the carpet. It absorbed the water like blotting-paper.

But in this unique setting stood tall Mayor Queen, smiling, in his morning frock coat and silk hat.

While in Winnipeg, His Majesty made a collection from the Hudson's Bay Co., the first time a reigning monarch ever had the opportunity.

When the royal charter was grantedto H.B.C. in 1670 one clause concerned a payment ". . . yielding and paying yearely to us our heires and successors for the same two elkes and two black beavers whensoever and as often as Wee our heires and successors shall happen to enter into the said Countryes, Territoryes and Regions hereby granted."

Patrick Ashley Cooper, the 30th governor of the Hudson's Bay Co., was summoned before the King by the High Steward.

"Are you ready and willing to render your suit and service as in duty bound?" intoned the High Steward.

Cooper replied: "Ready indeed, and we hereby tender to His Most Gracious Majesty two elks heads and two black beaver skins with the humble expression of our loyalty, love and affection, now and so long as we shall live."

The tenant, kneeling on one knee, made the presentation of one set of elk antlers with 12 points and a spread of 54½ inches, the other 16 points and a spread of 47 inches.

Black beaver skins are rare indeed but two extra large, heavily furred pelts were presented.

Their Majesties passed through the "breadbasket of the world" and received wonderful welcomes.

CALGARY TOOK TO SPATS

As they approached Calgary, the home of the cowboys and steers, there was some discussion as to greetings which might be extended. The King decided to wear his lounge suit, which was the nearest approach to the reputed garb of that bustling city. In addition Andy Davidson, long a leader in labor circles, was the mayor and had been for many years. The Queen wore an afternoon frock.

Heading the welcoming committee came Mayor Davidson, exceptionally well groomed, with his silk hat resting on his right forearm and wearing morning frock coat, striped trousers and ascot tie and . . . spats.

It didn't matter however, what the leaders wore they were all very gracious and the people on the prairies were wildly enthusiastic.

Then it was a day's rest amid the majesty of Banff and Lake Louise, both of which impressed Their Majesties. They put on their outing clothes and climbed Tunnel Mountain and gazed with deep affection on the blue beauty of Lake Louise.

The last leg of the westward train tour through the torturous gorges of the Rockies and Cascade range inspired the party. Here was still a different type of scenery and terrain, but still it was Canada.

Into the fast-growing, bumptious city of Vancouver roared the Royal train, 30 minutes after the pilot train, which had preceded the Royal Blue special over the entire route. And there, greeting Their Majesties, was a C.C.F. mayor, Dr. Lyle Telford, with his mace bearer and his gold chain and robe of office. Then up to the majestic City Hall which Jerry McGeer built and into the council chamber, the most lavish in all Canada.

From the front steps of the City Hall the King and Queen looked across the inlet to where the Lions keep their eternal vigilance. On a clear day this view has few equals in this world.

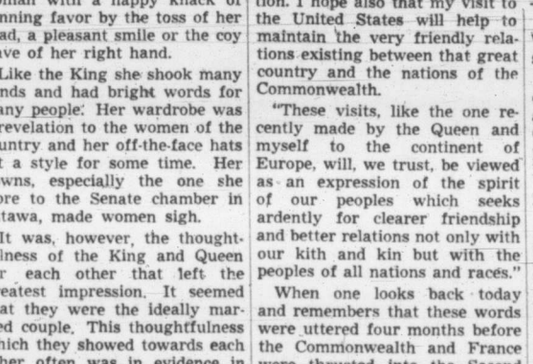
But that's as far as the Royal train, manned by C.P.R. personnel, went. Next was the boat ride to Victoria. Twenty Indian war canoes provided an escort for the Royal yacht, Princess Marguerite (sunk as a transport in the Mediterranean), out through the First Narrows. The King and Queen were on their way to the most moving and illuminated welcome of their tour.

Princess Took Britons To Task

In their happy marriage Princess Elizabeth and her husband have set an example for hundreds of young couples just starting out. Elizabeth on more than one occasion has expressed her views on what constitutes the ideal family life.

For instance about three years ago she took Britons to task for their rising divorce rate.

"We live in an age of growing self-indulgence, of hardening materialism and falling moral standards," she said. "I would go so far as to say that some of the very principles on which the family and therefore the health of the nation is founded are in danger."



Historic Coronation Scene

The abdication of Edward VIII in 1937, put the Duke of York and his family into the top royal family spot. This Buckingham Palace picture taken on the day of the Coronation, shows King George and Queen Elizabeth, together with Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret, and the Dowager Queen Mary.

Less Pomp, Fuss In Current Tour

Nobody who attends any part of the Royal visit this week will fail to recognize Princess Elizabeth or Prince Philip. Whatever the Royal pair will be wearing, their faces are as familiar as years of photography can make them.

But many of the other stars of the visit will be missed or their position and importance judged only by how close they stand to royalty.

UNIFORMS GONE

The business suit has supplanted the uniform; the resplendent, glittering braid is disappearing into the pomp and circumstance of history.

When the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York, later King George V and Queen Mary, visited Victoria in 1901 the crowds were instantly able to identify many of the leading figures of the event, besides Their Royal Highnesses, by the uniforms.

Reporting the 1901 visit, it was recorded that Lieut.-Governor Sir Henri Joly de Lotbiniere was dressed in "a magnificent uniform glittering with gold braid."

FULL COSTUME

Mr. Justice Martin wore the full costume that judges were entitled to display on state occasions. He was attired in a three-cornered cocked hat, full wig, knee breeches and a brilliant crimson cloak reaching almost to his silver-buckled shoes.

The justice's cloak was trimmed with ermine and an ermine cloak was suspended from his shoulders. He wore a black silk sash drawn into a bow knot at his waist.

The Duke appeared in a full admiral's uniform, much more impressive than today's equivalent, and Her Royal Highness was dressed in a striking black gown.

As the Royal party left the Empress of India on which they crossed from Vancouver, they stepped onto a pathway of crimson cloth laid on the dock.

DOUBLE ESCORT

More than 100 men of the Royal Horse Artillery, gaily-uniformed regulars on their way home from service in China, formed part of the escort, and 68 Royal Northwest Mounted Policemen in scarlet and gold were also on hand.

Mayor Charles Hayward met the visitors in a dark Prince Albert coat and a tall, shining silk hat.

Even the Chinese stewards on the Empress of India looked the part, dressed in new blue frocks that reached almost to their heels.

No Radio, Television Hurts Timing

Half a century ago Royal tours were not the well-timed events they are today, when radio, telephone, teletype and even television aid in planning events to the split second far in advance.

In 1901 when there were no radio bulletins to announce their arrival, Princess Elizabeth's grandfather and grandmother—the Duke and Duchess of York, later George V and Queen Mary—were known to be arriving in Victoria for certain only when crowds watching from Beacon Hill sighted the Empress of India steaming towards the harbor.

Thirty thousand people greeted the Royal couple in 1901. The Duke and Duchess made their official rounds, including a visit to an exhibition in Esquimalt, and ont heir second day in Victoria they "disappeared," as granddaughter Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip will do.

The lack of radio communication assisted the Royal couple in 1901 on their free day here. No commentators could report that the Duchess went for a quiet boat ride in the Gorge or that the Duke was resting in his hotel, suffering from a cold.

AGAIN FAMOUS HOME

Princess Elizabeth's and Prince Philip's home was built by the Duke of Clarence in 1826. When he became William IV he refused to move to Buckingham Palace. The building was decrepit when chosen as the princely couple's home before their London marriage. Now, in taste and appearance, it ranks as one of the finest homes in England.

Duke Of York Here In 1901

The late King George V, at that time the Duke of York, visited Victoria in 1901 with his duchess. The picture above was taken in the same year. His duchess of that year is now the beloved Queen Mother Mary.

'SIR' AND 'MA'AM'

Advise Acting Naturally When Meeting Royalty

It is "sir" and "ma'am" for Prince Philip and Princess Elizabeth when Victorians greet them during their tour on the Island.

Those, government officials say, are the correct forms of address to use in speaking to either the Princess or her husband—after of course, a preliminary salutation of "Your Royal Highness" in recognition of their royal titles.

One official said there is no particular "do" or "don't" in meeting royalty and the best thing is to act naturally.

On meeting the Royal couple, it is customary for women to curtsy. Some women might not curtsy because they do not know how. But that will not be taken as being disrespectful. For men, a slight bow—more of a deep nod of the head—is the thing.

In conversation with royalty, the normal procedure is to wait for royalty to speak first. In all social contacts with the Royal couple, follow the ordinary dictates of good taste.

It is correct to address Princess Elizabeth's husband as "Prince Philip" or "The Duke of Edinburgh." Descended from the royal family of Greece, he dropped the Greek royal rank in 1947 and became plain Lieut. Philip Mountbatten, Royal Navy, at the same time renouncing his succession to the Greek throne. His title of prince now comes from authorization by the King for his use of the prefix "His Royal Highness."

Elizabeth, Philip Follow Path Well-Trod By Royalty

Princess Elizabeth, on her visit to Canada with Prince Philip, has followed a trans-Atlantic path blazed by her great-great-great-grand-uncle 165 years ago and well trod by royalty since.

That first royal visitor to young Canada—so young that it was just a collection of British colonies—was genial Prince William Henry, third of the nine sons of King George III of England, who himself later succeeded to the throne as William IV.

Young Prince William—he had just turned 21—visited Canada in 1786 as a captain in the British navy's Halifax and West Indies squadron. He was in Canada on and off during a period of three years and visited a number of centres.

NOT STATE VISIT

His visit was not in the category of a state or royal visit—royal visits as such didn't start until 1860—but history books show that he did attend some official functions in the scattered towns of early British North America and perhaps set the pace for the descendants who followed him across the seas.

Some, like Princess Elizabeth were heirs to the throne. Others came as members of the British land and naval forces, perhaps landing for a brief stay at one of the Atlantic coast bastions. Some returned to represent the monarch as governors or governors-general.

From all reports, Prince William was a gay and popular young blade. He made an extended visit to St. John's, capital of Newfoundland, and delighted the hostesses of the day by attending a government ball at Quebec.

VISITED MONTREAL

He voyaged down the St. Lawrence for a visit to Montreal and, on the way, stopped off at the tiny river port of Sorel. The people of Sorel were so taken with his stay that they promptly changed the name of their town to William Henry. Later, it reverted to Sorel, as it is today.

Prince William was created Duke of Clarence in 1789 and recalled to home waters. He succeeded to the throne in 1830 and died in 1837. Two daughters had predeceased him and his niece succeeded him as Queen Victoria.

Canada's next royal visitor was William's brother, Prince Edward, Duke of Kent and father of Victoria. Quebec's Kent House is named after this soldier prince. He also left his mark on Canada as the builder of the Halifax Citadel.

CAME WITH REGIMENT

He came to this country in 1791 when his regiment, the 7th Royal Fusiliers, was transferred from Gibraltar. He remained until 1800, living at Halifax and Quebec, and, at one time, quelled a riot at Charlesbourg by addressing the rioters in French.

He visited Niagara, Fredericton and Saint John, N.B., as well as other early settlements. He was commander-in-chief in British North America when he returned home in 1800. Perhaps with vision before his time, he suggested in a letter in 1814 that the British North American provinces be united. He felt, he wrote, that there were too many legislatures.

The first official royal visitor was handsome Prince Edward, then Prince of Wales and later King Edward VII, who toured the settled areas of British North America in 1860, laid the cornerstone of the original parliament buildings at Ottawa and visited Washington. He was Victoria's eldest son.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL

His brother, Prince Arthur and Duke of Connaught, was the first member of royalty to come to Canada after Confederation. A junior army officer, he came in line of duty in 1869 to join his regiment at Montreal, where it had been stationed to bolster defences against the Fenians.

He returned to Canada in 1911 as governor-general, serving until 1916.

Princess Louise, fourth daughter of Victoria, lived in Canada from 1878 to 1883 while her husband, the Marquis of Lorne, served as governor-general.

George V, the sailor king, journeyed to North American waters as a sub-lieutenant in the Royal Navy in 1883 and 1884. He landed at Halifax. He later visited Canada twice before succeeding to the throne in 1910, once in 1901 for a royal visit as the Duke of York and again in 1908 to attend the Quebec tercentenary as Prince of Wales. On both occasions he was accompanied by the Duchess of York, now the Queen Mother.

BEST KNOWN

His eldest son — Edward, Prince of Wales, later King Edward VIII and now the Duke of Windsor — probably was the Royal visitor, of recent years, best known to Canadians. He came to the Dominion several times, including one formal Royal tour in 1919, and became Canada's first Royal property owner through his purchase of a ranch 65 miles southwest of Calgary. As a rancher, he pays taxes like any other Canadian.

Princess Elizabeth's visit is the first Royal tour since her parents—the present King and Queen—came in May, 1939, short months before the ominous clouds of the Second World War shouldered across Canada's horizon.

As did young Prince Edward in that early, adventurous year of 1860, the King and Queen in 1939 visited Washington and the Tomb of George Washington at Mount Vernon, Va. Princess Elizabeth and her husband, too, will visit the U.S. capital and may pay homage at the burial place of the man who led the American colonies in revolt.

New Prince Recalls Dream Of Bonnie One

When Elizabeth and Philip named their son Charles, it was natural that he hould become "Bonnie Prince Charlie" to Scot and Sassenach alike.

In 1475, the colorful prince nearly carried off an amazing coup d'etat when he led some 5,000 Highlanders with targe and broadsword sweeping down on England.

Canon loaded with grape-shot ended the dream tragically at Culloden Moor.

They Paved Way For Current Royal Tour

Now accompanying Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip on their Canadian visit are the three men pictured above. The trio did most of the preliminary work in planning the visit. Left to right are Lieut. Michael Parker, R.N., equerry-in-waiting to the Duke of Edinburgh; Lieut.-Gen. Sir Frederick Browning, comptroller and treasurer of Princess Elizabeth's household; Major the Hon. Martin Charteris, the Princess' private secretary.

Four Trains Carried 1901 Royal Party

Four trains were required to transport the complete entourage of the Duke and Duchess of York during their visit to Canada in 1901. The 10-car train that carried Their Royal Highnesses was considered the most splendid ever constructed.

The first and fourth trains carried grooms, horses and carriages, and the second carried Governor-General and Lady Minto and Prime Minister Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

The third train was devoted to the Duke and Duchess and their suite. Five of the most powerful locomotives of the day—three in the middle and one on each end—were required to power the 1901 Royal train through the Rockies.

LADY-IN-WAITING

Mrs. Andrew Elphinstone, mother of two young girls, is senior lady-in-waiting to Princess Elizabeth, and is accompanying her on this Canadian and American tour.

Liberty Said Grist In Mill Of Centuries

"The freedoms of the western world are grist ground laboriously in the mill of the centuries," says The Toronto Daily Star in connection with the Royal visit.

"They are the products of many dreams and the harvest of many hands.

"But there have been moments when freedom's champions were not content to wait the slow processes of time. Their cause was just and their anger high. From such men and such moments came heritages that all can see, the documents we call the Magna Carta and the United States Declaration of Independence. Each is, in its own way, a milestone in mankind's march to maturity.

Princess To Be Seventh Queen

Princess Elizabeth is destined to become the seventh reigning queen of Britain since the Norman Conquest.

By custom and protocol, she is officially designated as the heiress presumptive—rather than heiress apparent—to the throne because tradition dictates that it never must be assumed that a male heir shall not be born to the King and Queen.

The Princess dedicated her life to the Commonwealth on her 21st birthday, while touring South Africa with the King and Queen.

Recalling the "knightly" dedications of "bygone heirs to the throne," she declared in a broadcast address that her whole life would be "devoted to your service and the service of our great imperial family . . ."

DUKE TO BE CONSORT

Her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, has no place in the order of succession. He would become the prince consort as the husband of Britain's queen. The last prince consort was the courtly, handsome German, Prince Albert, husband of Queen Victoria, the great-great-grandmother both of Elizabeth and Philip.

The queens of Britain since the Norman Conquest of 1066, with the periods in which they reigned, were: Jane, 1553 (14 days); Mary I, 1553-58; Elizabeth, 1558-1603; Mary II, 1689-94; Anne, 1702-14; Victoria, 1837-1901.

LINE OF SUCCESSION

From Princess Elizabeth, the line of succession now goes to her son, Prince Charles, 2, and her daughter, Princess Anne, 1. Next in line is Princess Elizabeth's younger sister, 21-year-old Margaret Rose.

The order of succession then is: The Duke of Gloucester, 49, the King's brother, and his sons—Prince William, 9, and Prince Richard, 7; the Duke of Kent, 15, the King's nephew, and his brother, Prince Michael, 7, and his sister, Princess Alexandra, 14; the Princess Royal, 54, the King's sister, and her children—the Earl of Harewood, 28, and Hon. Gerald David Lascelles, 27.

From there, it goes through the families of the sons and daughters of Queen Victoria.

RENOUNCED RIGHTS

The Duke of Windsor, the former King Edward VIII and the King's older brother, renounced the right of succession for his descendants when he abdicated in December, 1936.

Two fateful events early destined Elizabeth to be Britain's first regning queen since Victoria, who ascended the throne nearly a century before Elizabeth's birth.

One was Edward's abdication, an act which put Elizabeth's father on the throne.

The other event was the birth of Margaret Rose. The fact that this only other child of the King and Queen was a girl secured Elizabeth's position — a brother would have taken her place in line for the crown.

PLEDGE BROADCAST

Elizabeth's pledge of faith to the Commonwealth came early in 1947 as she reached 21, the legal age of maturity. In a birthday broadcast to the Commonwealth, she gave this undertaking:

"There is a motto which has been borne by many of my ancestors—a noble motto—'I Serve.' Those words were an inspiration to many bygone heirs to the throne when they made their knightly dedication as they came to manhood.

"I cannot do quite as they did, but through the inventions of science I can do what was not possible for any of them. I can make my solemn act of dedication with a whole empire listening.

WHOLE LIFE

"I declare before you all that my whole life, whether it be long or short, shall be devoted to your service and the service of our great Imperial Family to which we all belong. But I shall not have the strength to carry out this resolution alone unless you join in it with me as I now invite you to do. I know that your support will be unfailingly given.

"God help me to make good my vow, and God bless all of you who are willing to share in it."

Famous Grandmother Recalled

First Broadcast Talk During War

At the height of the last war the voices of two young girls were heard over the radio one evening. They came from an underground studio of the B.B.C. —a studio then without a name because it was in the heart of bomb-torn London.

One voice was that of the small Princess Margaret, bidding goodnight to all the British children who had been evacuated to other countries.

The other was the voice of Margaret's not-so-much-bigger sister Elizabeth — grey-eyed and just 14.

"I can truthfully say to you, that all we children at home are full of cheerfulness and courage," said Elizabeth.

SET PATTERN

It was one of her first public speeches. Many more were to follow, but perhaps this and others she made as a child growing up in the midst of a broken world were the ones in which Elizabeth first touched the heart of a kingdom.

Despite the war and its upsets, the training of Britain's future queen never slackened during those unhappy years. There also were wartime jobs. For instance, as a subaltern in the Auxiliary Territorial Service she took a driving course and learned the mechanics of the truck she drove.

On a visit to the A.T.S. centre the King and Queen found Elizabeth stretched under a truck, smeared with oil but enthusiastic about her "grease monkey" job.

LITTLE CHANGE

It was shortly after her 11th birthday in 1937 that her future suddenly became apparent to Elizabeth. She was still too young to realize the significance of the moment when "uncle David," Edward VIII, had abdicated and her father became George VI. But she came to understand in the little changes around home.

The weight of what had happened fell upon her one day when she saw a letter addressed to "Her Majesty the Queen."

"That's mummie now, isn't it?" asked the small Elizabeth.

There were still carefree days for a girl who liked to collect cocoons, who could dance an Irish jig and ride a bicycle. But studies became more important than ever. And Queen Mary herself undertook to teach etiquette and diplomatic convention to young "Lillibet" as she was known throughout London.

Then there was a governess for the history and literature—which she liked—and arithmetic—which she didn't.

Those were the growing-up years of the Princess Elizabeth Alexandra Mary who now as a young married woman of 25 is making her first visit to Canada.

When the war began Britain's future queen was a little girl wearing skirts up to her knees and indulging in good-natured wrestling with young Margaret. At its end she was a serious young woman.

Britishers were hungry for news of their princesses in those war years. But for safety's sake it often had to be held back for days at a time. The girls spent the first four months of war in a small granite house in a lonely Scottish glen. Then later they moved to the south of England.

TAP-DANCER

News dispatches in 1940 recorded that Elizabeth tap-and sang at a village concert which the Queen organized to aid war charities. Such charities formed part of the Princess' wartime activities, with much of her spare time spent on knitting sweaters and scarves for servicemen.

She lived without fanfare during the war and reached her 16th birthday in 1942 without much recognition from a Britain then fighting for its life. For Elizabeth, this particular birthday chiefly meant registering under the government youth service scheme, like any other 16-year-old.

Head Equerry Has Hope For Holiday Here

Australian-born Michael Parker has become an expert on Canada in the space of a few months.

The ex-Royal Navy lieutenant, as equerry-in-waiting to the Princess and Prince, has been responsible for much of the planning of the 18,000-mile trip Canadian tour.

A key man in "Operation Maple Leaf," he's also private secretary and close personal friend of Prince Philip.

Parker first met Prince Philip 11 years ago on an East Coast convoy route. Their friendship ripened as they met often later as first lieutenants on different destroyers.

But Parker's greatest hope in Canada is to meet up with the Canada he has had described to him.

"Canadian chaps I met during the war used to talk about spending lob-cabin vacations in rugged country, with plenty of hunting and fishing," he said. "It sounds like heaven to me."

Maybe the bronzed seaman will realize his ambition on Vancouver Island at Eagle Crest.

Order Of Precedence For Visit

Canada's official table of precedence, which bears the King's approval, has been used in all federal functions for Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh during their tour of the Dominion.

The table, which originated in the early days of the British monarchy, determines the order of presentation of officials and other high-ranking persons at Royal and state functions.

The table places the governor-general first, followed by the prime minister, the federal cabinet and the lieutenant-governors of the 10 provinces, with British Columbia ranking sixth.

The provinces have used their own tables of precedence, based on the federal table, but varied according to provincial custom.

Here is the official table:

Prime minister of Canada.

Members of the federal cabinet.

Lieutenant-governors.

Archbishops and bishops.

Moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, moderator of the United Church of Canada and the president of the Baptist Federation of Canada.

Chief Justice of Canada.

Former prime ministers of Canada provided that they have been prime ministers for at least one year.

Members of the privy council not of the cabinet.

Speaker of the Senate.

Speaker of the House of Commons.

Premiers of the provinces.

Chief judges of the courts of law and equity and the judge appointed to perform the duties of chief justice of Quebec and Montreal.

Puisne judges of the Supreme Court of Canada.

Judges of the Exchequer Court of Canada.

Solicitor-general of Canada.

Members of the Senate.

Puisne judges of the courts of law and equity according to seniority.

Members of the House of Commons.

Chief of the general staff, chief of the naval staff and chief of the air staff.

Members of provincial cabinets within their province.

Speaker of a legislative council within his province.

Members of a legislative council within their province.

Speaker of a legislative assembly within his province.

Members of a legislative assembly within their province.

(Married women, if with their husbands, get the same place in the table as their husbands.)

Canada's First Store Welcomes Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip

Today marks another memorable occasion in the history of our Company in Victoria —once again we proudly welcome members of the Royal Family to our City. On October 1, 1901, the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York were our distinguished visitors. It was our privilege to greet the Prince of Wales, September 23, 1919, October 4, 1924, and again, with the Duke of Kent on August 19, 1927. On June 1, 1929, we honored the Duke of Gloucester. Princess Elizabeth's parents, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth were our gracious guests on May 30, 1939.

Our wish today is as heartfelt and as joyously given as it was back in 1901—

A VERY SINCERE WELCOME!

Time Takes Toll Of 1939 Dignitaries

Time has laid a heavy hand upon the dignitaries who participated in the receptions in Victoria to the King and Queen in 1939. Only a handful are still prominent in the busy life of the city.

Hon. Gordon Wismer, attorney-general, is the only member of Premier T. D. Pattullo's cabinet, which held the reception in the legislative chamber of the Parliament Buildings for Their Majesties, still holding office. Four of the ministers are dead. Only seven of the M.L.A.'s then in office are now serving the province.

Not one member of the city council of 1939 is still serving. Mayor Andrew McGavin is dead. Reeve R. R. Taylor of Oak Bay and Reeve Alex Lockley of Esquimalt have also passed away.

Of the five justices of the B.C. Court of Appeal of 1939 only one is still living. He is the present Chief Justice, Hon. G. McG. Sloan.

Lt.-Col. H. M. Urquhart, the fine soldier of the 16th Canadian Scottish, who acted as A.D.C. to the King while he was here, is dead.

The then Governor-General of Canada, Baron Tweedsmuir; the Prime Minister, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, and the cabinet minister for British Columbia in the Dominion cabinet, Hon. Ian Mackenzie, all of whom were here with the visitors, are dead.

Princess Represents King At Trooping Of The Color

Sporadic illness of King George has increased Princess Elizabeth's responsibilities at official and public functions. She is shown in uniform as colonel of the Grenadier Guards when she represented His Majesty at the Trooping of the Color on the King's Birthday. The Princess, riding her chestnut, Winston, wore a scarlet tunic with a dark blue riding skirt. Her tricorne with white plume is an exact copy of that of a colonel of the regiment in 1745. EVERYBODY LIKES THE SAILOR PRINCE

On July 9, 1947, the betrothal was announced of Lieut. Philip Mountbatten, R.N., to H.R.H. Princess Elizabeth. On the eve of the marriage, which took place on Nov. 20, 1947, H.M. the King conferred on him a knighthood, created him Knight Commander of the Order of the Garter, authorized his use of the prefix "His Royal Highness," and created him Baron Greenwich of Greenwich, Earl of Merioneth and Duke of Edinburgh.

Philip was born on June 10th, 1921, at Corfu, son of Prince Andrew of Greece. On his father's side he is of Danish descent—Prince Andrew was a younger son of King George I of the Hellenes, son of King Christian IX of Denmark.

The Danish royal family is one of those ancient ruling houses that have no surname, so when becoming a British subject on March 18th, 1947, Lieutenant Mountbatten took his mother's family name. At the same time he renounced his right of succession to the Greek throne—he would have been fifth in the line.

Prince Philip's mother was Princess Alice of Battenberg, eldest daughter of Prince Louis, who was naturalized in 1868 and joined the Royal Navy, rose to become Admiral of the Fleet and First Sea Lord, and during the First World War took the name of Mountbatten, renounced his royal title, and became first Marquess of Milford Haven. Prince Philip's uncle, the second Marquess, also served in the Royal Navy, like his cousin the third Marquess and his younger uncle, Earl Mountbatten.

Finally, since Prince Louis of Battenberg married a granddaughter of Queen Victoria, Prince Philip is the Queen's great-great-grandson and second cousin to King George VI. Tall, fair-haired and strikingly handsome, he bears witness in his looks to his northern descent.

He came to Britain at an early age to be educated, making his home during the holidays with his uncle, then Lord Louis Mountbatten. From a preparatory school, Cheam, he went to Mr. Kurt Hahn's school, which after the Nazi rise to power moved from Salem, Germany, to Gordonstoun, near Elgin in Scotland.

He was popular with his schoolfellows, both on account of his friendly, unaffected manners and his good sportsmanship; he was an enthusiast at riding and swimming, and was captain of the school's cricket and hockey teams.

ACTED SHAKESPEARE

He was a good scholar too, was head of the school before he left, and a keen student of Shakespeare who took part in school performances. In Elgin he was well-known to the townspeople, as he and his friends often spent their free afternoons there, browsing in the bookshops or invading the sixpenny store. He made friends among the local boys too, whom he met on and off the cricket field, and on fishing swimming and sailing expeditions.

Mr. Hahn is a progressive and individual schoolmaster, one of whose theories is that his boys should take part in the local life of the towns and villages around. Prince Philip kept up many of these friendships, and during the war would renew old contacts when on leave in the north.

His love of the sea showed itself early. He was a keen oarsman, and qualified as a British Sea Scout. He and his schoolmates built a cutter, and he took part in several sailing trips to the Shetlands, the Hebrides, and Norway. He was such a good sailor that he was allowed—a privilege granted to few— to be in charge of an open boat under sail in the Moray Firth without an adult on board.

In 1939 he left school to become a Royal Naval cadet, at the same time applying for British naturalization; he was still at Dartmouth when the war broke out, and his naturalization, like that of many others, was held up. At Dartmouth he was a brilliant student, being awarded the King's Dirk as the best all-round cadet of his term, and the Eardley Howard Crockett prize as the best cadet.

Later when taking his sub-lieutenant's exam he obtained four firsts and one second, gaining nine months' seniority out of a possible 10.

In January, 1940 he went to sea as midshipman in the battleship Ramillies, and after serving in the cruisers Kent and Shropshire was appointed at the end of the year to the battleship Valiant in the Mediterranean Fleet.

The story is told that after a month or two's inactivity he applied for a few days' leave, saying: "This is a dull war. There's no shooting."

He was to see shooting soon enough, for at the end of March, 1941, came the Battle of the Cape Matapan, when he was in charge of a section of searchlight control in the Valiant, and for his work in illuminating the Italian fleet during the action received a mention in dispatches from Admiral Sir Andrew Cunningham.

His own comment on the battle was: "It was as near murder as anything could be in wartime. We just smashed the cruisers Fiume and Zara . . . I hate to think how much worse it might have been for the Italian warships if we had met them by day instead of in a night action."

COVERED BEACHHEAD

After coming home to qualify as a sub-lieutenant Prince Philip was appointed to H.M.S. Wallace, a destroyer. When the 2nd lieutenant left in July, 1942, he took his place (he was promoted lieutenant 16.7.42), later succeeding the 1st lieutenant in October of that year, one of the youngest officers, at 21, to have been second-in-command of a large destroyer. In July, 1943 he took part in the Sicily landing, when H.M.S. Wallace covered the Canadian beachhead.

Later in the year he came home for a course in H.M.S. President, London, and then early in 1944 he was appoinaed 1st lieutenant in H.M.S. Whelp, one of Britain's newest destroyers, just nearing completion. He sailed in her for the Far East, took part in the war against Japan, serving for a time as A.D.C. to his uncle, and was present at the Japanese surrender in Tokyo Bay.

On the return home of H.M.S. Whelp in 1946 Lieutenant Mountbatten took over her command for the last two months to "pay her off" into reserve. Later he joined H.M.S. Glendower, the Royal Naval establishment in Pwllheli, North Wales, transferring to H.M.S. Royal Arthur, in Wiltshire, another training establishment, where he was one of the two officers responsible for training petty officers. These appointments were further evidence of his ability, for only officers with a high record for leadership are selected for these duties.

In 1948 he began a six-month course of studies at Royal Naval Staff College, Greenwich. After finishing his staff course he went on half-pay on account of his increasing duties, but with the understanding he would resume a normal naval career later.

During this year he also became a Freeman of the City of London, was appointed personal A.D.C. to the King, and took his seat in the House of Lords.

In 1949 he resumed naval duties as 1st lieutenant of H.M.S. Chequers, leader of the first destroyer flotilla, Mediterranean Fleet. He joined his ship at Malta, and in 1950 went to the Red Sea with Chequers and visited King Ibn Saud and King Farouk. He was later given the command of sloop H.M.S. Magpie

Check Shirt—No Formality

One of the most enjoyable episodes in the Royal Tour so far has been the square dance party arranged for the Duke and Duchess by the Governor-General. At Rideau Hall in Ottawa, some sixty of the governor's friends joined in the fun. The Prince, who loves informal clothes found himself capably at home in a Canadian check shirt.

Philip Plays Cricket

The Duke of Edinburgh is widely known as a sportsman, his favorite sports being polo and cricket. This United Kingdom Information Office photo shows him taking a turn at bowling at the nets at the Petty Officers' Training Centre of Corsham, Wiltshire, where he was an instructor before his marriage to Princess Elizabeth. Philip And Elizabeth Trace Ancestry Back To William The Conqueror

Succession to the British Throne is hereditary. Sons and their descendants have precedence over daughters of the Sovereign. Daughters and their descendants have precedence over lateral lines. In the tables given overleaf any children of Princess Elizabeth, whether boy or girl, take precedence over Princess Margaret in the order.

From this family tree it will be seen that Princess Elizabeth and her husband, Prince Philip, Duke of Edinburgh, are both great-great-grandchildren of Queen Victoria. They are, too, in direct descent from (inter alios) William I (1066), Alfred the Great (871) and Egbert, King of Wessex (1) and All England (827). The marriage took place on 20th November, 1947.

In 1917 the Royal Family was proclaimed House of Windsor. At the same time, by letters patent, the titles of Royal Highness, and Prince and Princess were (except for existing titles) restricted to the Sovereign's children, the children of the Sovereign's sons and the eldest living son of the Prince of Wales.

On the eve of his daughter's wedding King George relaxed this rule and created Prince Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Earl of Merioneth and Baron Greenwich. He also authorized for his use the prefix Royal Highness.

Princess Elizabeth's children, therefore, at birth were neither Prince nor Princess, nor Royal Highness. The operation of this rule is already seen in the titles of King George V's grandchildren. The children of the Duke of Gloucester and of the late Duke of Kent are Princess and Princesses and are styled Royal Highness.

Those of the Princess Royal are not. Her eldest son, the Earl of Harewood, was known as Viscount Lascelles until his father's death, this being the junior title of the Harewood earldom. Similarly, Charles was Earl of Merioneth, his father's second title, until the King accorded him princely rank.

It should be noted that the title of Prince of Wales is reserved for the eldest son of the reigning Sovereign, the Heir Apparent, so that until His present Majesty's death, at the earliest, there will be no Prince of Wales unless a son is born to him. The title even then is not hereditary. It is only conferred by the Sovereign's personal grant. (The Dukedom of Cornwall does, however, accrue automatically to the Sovereign's eldest son). The title Princess of Wales belongs to the Prince of Wales' wife. No child of of Princess Elizabeth, therefore, can bear this title.

Scottish Friend Acts As Lady In Waiting

The lady-in-waiting accompanying Princess Elizabeth is Mrs. Jean Elphinstone, a close personal friend of the Princess and a cousin by marriage.

In Canada it is Mrs. Elphinstone's job, as private secretary and personal counsellor, to accompany the Princess on every engagement and handle any difficulties that may escape the outer screen of officialdom.

In five years of office, Mrs. Elphinstone, a tall, slim, dark-haired woman, has accompanied Elizabeth on many state occasions, including glittering banquets at Buckingham Palace.

Elizabeth started with only one lady-in-waiting, but her engagements became so numerous there are now four. Mrs. Elphinstone, the second to be engaged, is the senior in length of service, but no distinction is made among the four women.

Ladies-in-waiting are among those closest to the Princess, but however long-standing and intimate their association, it is a point of etiquette that they must at all times address her as "Princess." None of them had any special training for the job. The salary is several hundred pounds a year, plus a dress allowance.

Part of a lady-in-waiting's duties is to study the clothes the Princess will be wearing next day and see that her own choice in no way clashes.

"I usually wear dark colors," Mrs. Elphinstone said in one of her rare interviews with the British press. "They make a perfect background for the soft, pretty shades most popular with the Princess."

China And Silverware Favored As Souvenirs

Victorians and tourists will find a wide variety of souvenirs and merchandise on display in downtown stores to commemorate the visit of Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh to Canada.

Any merchandise with a "royal tinge" has been given first place on the counters. These include duplicate china sets used at Government House or in other parts of Canada at receptions, silverware, textiles of the same colors as clothes to be found in the wardrobe of Princess Elizabeth, souvenir pieces and mementos.

A souvenir available in nearly all stores and within the means of the average pocket is a small dish and tea cup and saucer designed and produced by Paragon China Ltd., especially to commemorate the visit.

The small dish is decorated with a crown on a maple leaf, ringed with pink roses. The names of the couple, and "Canada, October, 1951," are placed around the edge, and finishing touches are in gold. The teacup and saucer are decorated in the same motifs. Letters "E" and "P" are surmounted by a crown and ringed with laurel leaves.

Duplicate dinner and breakfast sets used for the reception of the Royal couple at Government House can also now be seen. These are of floral design and are expected to prove popular with Canadians and Americans.

The china includes a dinner set given to the Princess on the occasion of her wedding. Some of the pieces were flown from England to Victoria to be in time for the visit. They all have great artistic merit and stand as an example of good design and good potting.

The silverware includes a copy of a sterling silver tea set presented to Her Royal Highness by the city of Birmingham on the occasion of her marriage. The service is on the expensive side—$1,200.

The textile colors on display are a shade of green and a new color named Elizabeth pink. Some of the Princess' clothes are of these colors. But the majority of the colors worn by the Princess will not be available in large quantities for some time yet.

Numerous other mementos of naval and military designs—anything which emphasizes the Crown—are also being sold here. Some of these souvenirs date back to the coronation of the King. One of these includes a coronation silver spoon.

Many of these souvenirs are eagerly being sought after by U.S. tourists, who have come here to see the Princess and Prince. One popular memento with the visitors is a brooch with the profile of Princess Elizabeth.

Eagle Crest Is Showplace Of Island

Qualicum Beach Home Built By Millionaire

Eagle Crest, at Qualicum Beach, where Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh will vacation for three days this week, before starting back to London, is one of the showplaces of Vancouver Island.

It's a millionaire's country lodge, luxurious, spacious, complete with rustic beauty—the kind of a country retreat Hollywood delights to show in its most elaborate sets. It's in a magnificent setting of landscaped gardens, deep virgin forest and there's a seascape from the patio that fairly takes the breath away.

BUILT IN 1936

It was built in 1936 by the late Senator A. D. McRae, multi-millionaire businessman and Conservative politician. It took 100 men more than a year to clear the forest, landscape the gardens and build the main lodge and adjoining buildings.

One of the biggest tasks was clearing half a mile of beach of giant boulders, some of which weighed up to 37 tons.

The Senator would never say how much Eagle Crest and his vast adjoining farms and prize-winning cattle cost him, but it was probably in the neighborhood of $500,000, a fabulous sum in those days.

RESORT FOR RICH

Eagle Crest is now an exclusive summer resort for rich people, who pay as high as $50 a day for privacy and fine food. It's so exclusive that an unknown, would-be guest, writing for reservations, has his home-town credentials checked, unknown to him, to make sure he belongs to the best circles. Transients are never received. Twenty guests can be accommodated. They form a big house party.

The baronial-type dining room has a splendid bar of burnished copper, with massive metal-studded doors to hide it if necessary. There's an oak refectory table with matching chairs, specially imported by the senator from England. In this room the Royal couple and their entourage will dine. Or, if the weather is exceptionally fine, there could be a barbecue supper before the outdoor grill on the beach. Eagle Crest Saturday night barbecue suppers are a summer feature.

FLOORS LIKE DECKS

The oak floors in the great lounge, with its 27-foot ceiling and fireplace of boulders from the creeks of Vancouver Island, are laid like the deck of a ship, held together by wooden pegs. The floor is scattered with Bedouin rugs in natural cream and brown camelhair, alternating with silky, undyed Oriental weaves in the same tone combinations.

Mrs. McRae was an avid collector of priceless art objects, and from her world travels she brought home many rich and rare souvenirs which are still at Eagle Crest—pictures and jugs, shawls and carpets, china and unusual glass. All the McRae custom-made monogramed linen and silver will be used for the Royal visitors.

MAIN LODGE

The main lodge building is of logs, taken from the forests of Vancouver Island. They were specially selected and were cut before the sap started to run, so they would not darken in color. Walls in the lodge that are not of logs are of knotty pine and cottonwood. The senator insisted on as many of the materials as possible being native to Vancouver Island.

The hearth in the dining-room is flanked by six-foot high torchieres, holding tall candles, and the lighting fixtures in the lounge are of wrought iron, with amber-glass lanterns.

Eagle Crest has been polished from top to bottom for the Royal visit and its copper and brass will gleam in the firelight and the candlelight as Princess and Duke relax in the lounge for two evenings.

SIMPLE VISIT

They want the visit to their vacation retreat as simple as possible. Special menus, featuring as far as possible produce of nearby farms, have been prepared for the Royal visit.

Every effort has been made to keep the landscaped part of the estate as beautiful as possible. Two gardeners were kept on staff after the resort closed for the summer. They spent six weeks looking after the chrysanthemums and other fall flowers, so there would be a blaze of autumn color against the deep green of the forest and to be a carpet of brilliance before the wonderful vista of sea, islands, passing ships and distant snow-capped mountains.

Senator and Mrs. McRae entertained extensively at Eagle Crest for a few years, their week-end house parties keeping Vancouver society agog as many sought invitations, almost as eagerly coveted as a bid to a state dinner at Government House.

In 1942 Mrs. McRae died, and less than a year later the Senator married again, a Texas widow. But he had largely lost interest in Eagle Crest, being immersed in war work. It was then he gave his Vancouver mansion, Hycroft, to the Government for a veterans' hospital. It is now Shaughnessey Military Hospital.

The Senator lived in a Hotel Vancouver suite and died in Ottawa in 1946. Since then one of his three daughters, Mrs. R. P. Baker, has died.

A good idea of the interior of Eagle Crest is given in these two pictures of the famed up-island resort. Shown above is the private retreat for Princess Elizabeth, a rustic yet cosy and colorful dining room. Complete rest for the Princess and Duke of Edinburgh will be the order of the three-day vacation that should give the Royal couple a more lasting impression of Vancouver Island than any other part of Canada.

• Here is the main lounge of sumptuous Eagle Crest, show place of Vancouver Island. Gatherings of the inner circle of the tour party, including Elizabeth and Philip, will be held in this spacious room. Philip, noted as an outdoors man, is expected to be right at home in this Island paradise when the party spends Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday here this week. Side trips are expected to be made all around the Qualicum area.

C.P.R. and C.N.R. Coaches Used On Royal Train

The train in which the Royal pair are traveling consists of a steam locomotive and 10 cars, eight of which provide living and eating quarters. The other two are baggage cars. One of the baggage cars houses an auxiliary electric generator for use when, as will sometimes be the case, the train is parked for several hours.

OFF-DUTY QUARTERS

The other, in addition to being used for normal baggage purposes, is also equipped to provide living quarters for the dining car crew when they are off duty.

The equipment from which the train is made up is drawn from cars owned by the Government, the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways.

Unlike the Royal Train in 1939, the exterior is not painted a uniform color, but continues to carry the Canadian Pacific red and the Canadian National green.

PERSONAL DETECTIVE

Princess Elizabeth brought her personal detective to Canada with her on this Royal tour. He is Inspector Bert Usher, six-foot-two and 182 pounds, who was assigned full time to protect the Princess after his first duties as guard only on official occasions.

Royal Pair Sees Canada's Splendor

Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh are seeing Canada in her colorful autumnal dress.

Their arrival brought them to this country in the first flush of autumn and they will travel the land in the lazy, golden days of that distinctively Canadian fifth season—Indian summer.

Canada's Indian summer, which marks the turn of the leaves, sees the weather pretty much the same across the country.

Weather experts say their closest parallel to United Kingdom climate will be Nova Scotia.

Princess Has Own Staff

Staff of the Royal party on this tour is headed by Leslie A. J. Treby, clerk to the comptroller of the household.

Other members of the staff include Miss M. Macdonal, maid; Miss E. MacGregor, maid; John Dean, valet; W. Holloway, butler; J. Pearce, butler; Miss E. E. Lovell, maid to the lady-in-waiting, and Inspector F. Kelley.

Monarch Swears To Support Church

Interest in the rites of accession to the throne of Britain are heightened by the visit of Princess Elizabeth, first in line of succession to King George.

One of the least-known parts of the accession is the King's Oath, which is taken as the first act of the new sovereign at the Accession Council after making a speech.

It reads, in part: "After the decease of his present Majesty (whom God long preserve), the Sovereign succeeding to him in the Royal Government of the Kingdom of Great Britain shall in all time coming at his or her accession to the Crown swear and subscribe that they shall inviolably maintain and preserve the foresaid settlement of the True Protestant Religion with the Government worship Discipline Right and Privileges of this church as above established by the Laws of this Kingdom in prosecution of the Claim of Right."

The taking of the oath is required by an act passed at Edinburgh by the Scottish Parliament, entitled, "An Act for securing the Protestant religion and Presbyterian Church Government, which was incorporated in the Act of Union 1706."

FAITHFUL "MAC"

Youthful "Mac" — Margaret Macdonald—is Princess Elizabeth's personal maid on her Canadian tour, as always. She was nursery maid to the Princess in childhood, and has remained in her service.

Woman Who Wrote As One Mother To Another Did Not Appeal In Vain

Princess Clears Up Problems For Folk In Distress

For variety and richness of human interest it would be hard indeed to match the letters which year by year flow in from every corner of the earth to Clarence House, London home of Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh.

They come from all manner of persons, young and old, rich and poor. Most poignant of all are those from ordinary humble folk, who, looking about them for aid and comfort in time of trouble or distress, sit down to write to Princess Elizabeth, obeying some impulse stronger than themselves.

They do not write in vain; in every case of this kind Princess Elizabeth sees that the request goes to the organization or department best able to cope with it. Because Clarence House knows which body can deal effectively with the request better than the ordinary person, action often results.

The other day—this is but one instance out of many—a woman named Mrs. Winifred Ball wrote to the Princess "as one mother to another," asking her assistance for her baby daughter Helena, who suffers from spinal trouble and recurring attacks of broncial pneumonia.

The Princess' response was swift and practical. To Mrs. Ball's home at Arden Park, near Manchester, in Northern England, a few days later there came a letter with the Clarence House cipher. Mrs. Ball read that inquiries had been made at the Great Ormond Street Hospital for children, and that if Helen could be brought to London, one of the most famous specialists in children's diseases would see the baby and arrange for an appropriate course of treatment.

WROTE IN DESPERATION

Then there was the case of young Ernest Frampton and his wife and their ailing baby daughter, Elizabeth. They were living in an old army hut on the south coast, a hut with a patched-up roof and with doors and windows that fitted badly, letting in draughts which cut across the living room like sharp knives.

The doctor had warned the Framptons that their child was sick and needed warmth, but they could find no better place to go.

One night in desperation the young couple sat down and between them they composed a letter to Princess Elizabeth. It was not long before the local public housing authority received a letter from Clarence House drawing attention to the plight of the Framptons. The case was looked into in detail by the authority and the justice of this family's needs recognized. The delighted couple were offered greatly improved accommodation. Thankfully, they accepted it.

There was—to quote another instance—a letter in the Princess' mail one morning which bore an American postmark. It was from a G.I. war bride, Mrs. Betty Mauzey by name, who was writing to the Princess to explain that her father, an ex-boxer, was seriously ill in England, and that she was anxious to go home to see him.

The chances that anything would come of this letter may have seemed pretty slender to Mrs. Mauzey, but the answer from Clarence House was prompt, sympathetic and, as always, very much to the point. It told her that inquiries were being made to discover the best way to help her, and through the aid of the local British Consul the difficulties in the way of Mrs. Mauzey's return were smoothed away.

During the latter part of the Second World War Princess Elizabeth was a junior officer in Britain's Auxiliary Territorial Service, and this fact has often encouraged girls who served in this women's army auxiliary to write to the Princess about their personal problems.

SAW THE PARADE

One of them, Miss Frances Morris, who had been invalided out of the service with an injured back, wrote after the war that she was very anxious to see the Victory parade, but because of her injury was unable to stand for any length of time. "I thought perhaps you could help," she added. Again the Princess acted, with the result that on the day of the parade Miss Morris had a seat at a window in Park Lane, from which she was able to watch the procession in comfort.

Sometimes these personal letters appeal not so much to the Princess' compassion as to her sense of humour. One such letter arrived as the Princess was setting off with the Duke of Edinburgh for a State visit to Paris. It was from a schoolboy named Clifford Rouse, who said that he had left his camera at a Paris railway station on his way home from a holiday. He would be grateful if the Princess would call for it! "You are the only person I know who is going to Paris," the boy explained. Master Rouse got a letter back: "While Her Royal Highness doubts whether she herself will have an opportunity of bringing back your camera from Paris, she is making inquiries to see whether it can be restored to you by any means."

The Princess asked the British Embassy to assist, and thus it was that a resourceful schoolboy, who believed in aiming high, got his property back.

All the instances quoted here could be multiplied many times over, from which it will be seen that in this respect Princess Elizabeth's home has already become a sort of clearing house of human hopes and problems.

King George Presents Colors To Canadian Navy

Historic moment in the 1939 Royal visit to Victoria was when King George VI presented the colors to the local naval division. The presentation ceremony took place at Beacon Hill Park, and this picture Showt Lieut. James Hibbard, the color bearer, accepting the flag from His Majesty. With his back to the camera is Capt. Victor Brodeur, later Flag Officer of the Pacific Fleet.

Navymen Who Welcomed King And Queen At Victoria Are Still In Service

One of the most brilliant ceremonies in which the King and Queen took part during their 1939 visit was the presentation of His Majesty's colors to the Royal Canadian Navy at Beacon Hill Park.

It is interesting to note where all those who played a prominent role in this naval occasion are today.

Lt.-Cmd. E. P. Tisdall, who commanded the color guard, is now commanding officer of H.M.C.S. Ontario, with the rank of captain.

Lieut. J. C. Hibbard, who was in charge of the color party and received the colors from King George, is now a commodore in charge of naval personnel at Ottawa.

Lt.-Cmd. H. F. Pullen, who was in charge of the escort party, is now a commodore and in command of H.M.C. Stadacona at Halifax. He commanded the cruiser Ontario until recently.

Lt.-Cmd. A. C. Wurtele, was in command of companies lining the streets, is now retired with the rank of commander. He is a councillor in Esquimalt and recently caused quite a flutter by almost winning the provincial by-election in Esquimalt.

Lt.-Col. J. R. Kingham and Lt.-Col. Vincent McKenna, who commanded the two regiments which participated in the ceremonies, are both here. They participated in the Second World War as well as the First World War.

Former Prisoner Of War Looks After Royal Health

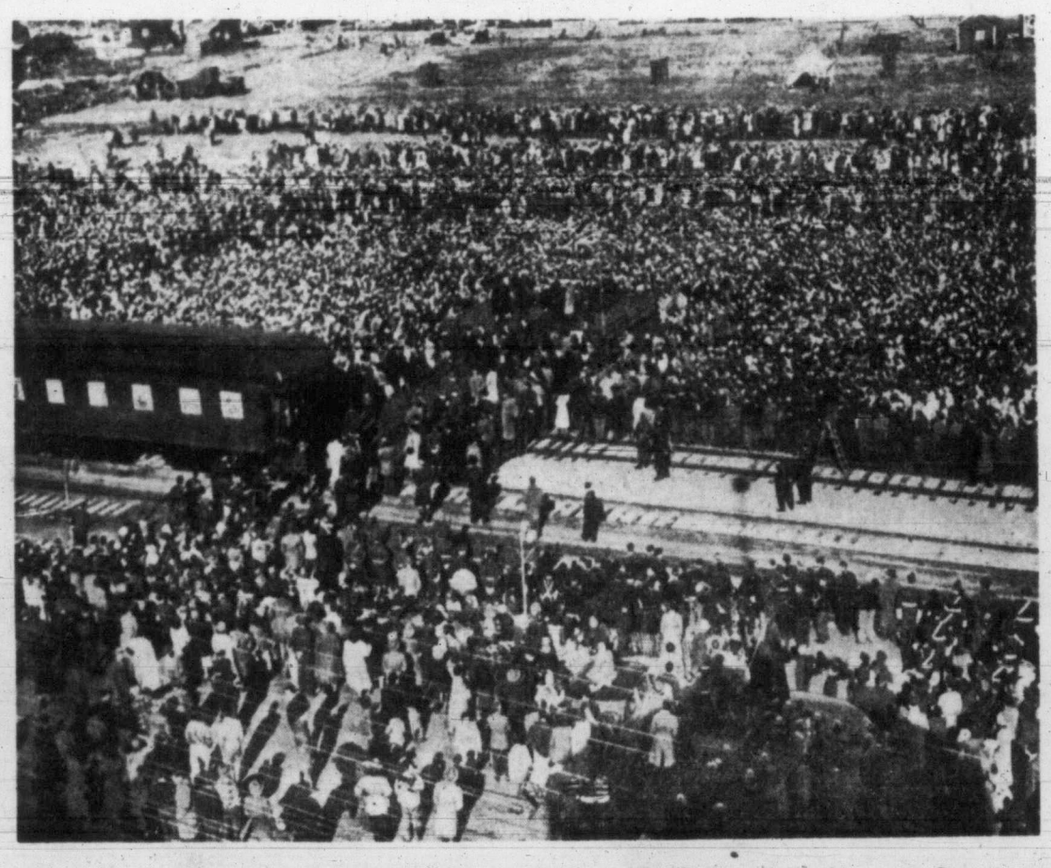
The Canadian doctor and nurse who have been accompanying Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh on the Royal tour, are Col. N. B. Crawford, M.B.E., of Ottawa and Winnipeg, assistant medical director at Army Headquarters, and F.O. Ella Beatrice Mannix of Meota, Sask., senior matron at the R.C.A.F. hospital at Rockcliffe.

Besides providing medical care for the Royal couple, they are responsible for medical service to other passengers on the Royal train and plane, and for reporters on the Royal train.

Col. Crawford, 45, was medical officer of the Winnipeg Grenadiers and later senior medical officer of the Hong Kong forces when they surrendered on Christmas Day, 1941, and was a Japanese prisoner-of-war for nearly four years.

He later returned to Japan to testify at the war crime trials and later took part in discussions at Geneva leading to revision of treaties concerning care and treatment of sick and wounded war prisoners.

Miss Mannix has logged more than 3,000 hours as a Canadian Pacific Airlines stewardess. She joined the R.C.A.F. in 1948. She was educated in Saskatoon and Edmonton.



Ontario Cities Gave Young Couple Real Royal Welcome

Ontario cities vied with one another in extending a hearty welcome to the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh even if, as at Cornwall (above) the Royal Train made only a short stop. In the fifteen minutes at Cornwall where 30,000 people gathered round the rail tracks, the Duke and Duchess broke from the official party to speak to war veterans, air cadets and service men gathered on the platform.

Princess, Duke To See Washington's City

Washington has been termed the most beautiful city in the United States. George Washington intended it to be.

The first president was responsible for the original plan for the city, on the left bank of the Potomac, 40 miles southwest of Baltimore. It was laid out in a regular pattern to the design of Maj. Pierre l'Enfant, a French engineer. It is dominated by the Capitol, home of the Congress.

Princess Elizabeth and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, nearing the end of their Canadian tour, will spend almost two full days in the capital of the United States. They arrive there by air from Montreal, late on Oct. 31 and leave early on Nov. 2 to pick up the tour of the Dominion where they left off. Then it's down to the maritimes.

The flight plan from Montreal to the only American city the Royal couple will visit has not been announced but it is likely that the 2½-hour flight from Montreal will be laid out so that the tourists will at least glimpse New York city. For what visitor to North America could resist the lure of Manhattan's towers, seen so clearly from the air?

In Washington, the Prince and Princess will be the guests of President and Mrs. Truman. They won't sleep in the White House for that is undergoing major repairs. Mr. and Mrs. Truman are staying across the street, at Blair House, and it is there that the Royal guests will be put up.

The President and Mrs. Truman will be on hand at National Airport when the Royal plane lands. The visitors will hardly be on the ground before being whisked to a reception at the Statler Hotel given by Washington press correspondents. At 8 p.m., they will be the guests of the Trumans at a dinner.
